LEAGUE TO USE FORCE OF TROOPS FOR FIRST TIME

Britain, France, Belgium and Spain to Send Men for Vilna Plebiscite.

GENEVA, Nov. 18 (By telephone to Paris).—For the first time the League of Nations is to have a military force to insure carrying out its decisions. A composite force is to be sent to Lithuania to maintain order and supervise the plebiscite which the League Council has decided shall be held in Vilna and the surrounding territory, to decide whether it shall be assigned to the Poles or the Lithuanians.

In addition to French, British and Belgians the Allied force will include Spanish troops.

It may be recalled that the Polish General Zeligouski occupied Vilna shortly after its evacuation by the Bolsheviki. The Lithuanians addressed a protest to the League, and the Council determined on a plebiscite. The sending of troops to maintain order is authorized by Article XI. of the League Covenant, which says that in danger of war the League may take such action as it thinks fit in order to keep the peace.

The following communiqué on the subject was issued tonight:

"The League has received a communication from the British Government agreeing that a British contingent shall be sent to Vilna. The Spanish Government had also agreed to send two companies of infantry. The French and Belgian Governments had previously signified their willingness to dispatch French and Belgian troops."

Officials of the League are enthusiastic on the action taken. They declare it shows that the League has teeth if they are needed. It will be remembered that at the Peace Conference President Wilson answered French demands that the League have a permanent army with the argument that the members would place forces at the League's disposal if the occasion arose.

Unlikely to Admit Germany.

It is now highly improbable that Germany will become a member of the League at the present assembly. This is largely Germany's own doing.

If her application for membership had been filed when the meeting opened on Monday it is likely that she would have received the two-thirds majority required, but her failure to apply and von Simon's statement that she would not do so—to say nothing of four days' work here by opponents of her admission—have changed matters considerably. I am informed on high authority that there is a tacit agreement among those in a position to carry out their wishes that the question of Germany's admission shall be deferred until another general meeting in the future.

If another member should apply on Germany's behalf, it is likely to be unsuccessful, as there is a strong feeling that Germany ought to apply for herself. There is always a chance for surprises, but if Germany is elected it will be a surprise.

Perhaps Germany does not want to join the League just yet. On this point Herr Schwarz, Secretary of the German League of Nations Association, made an interesting statement today. He said that Germany preferred not to join until the amount of the war indemnity which she must pay had been fixed. Germany signed a blank check when she signed the Peace Treaty, and, as her admission to the League would involve her acceptance of a pledge to carry out the treaty, she would be again in a position of signing a blank check if she were admitted before she knew how much she would have to pay.

Germany thinks that the League would increase instead of diminish the pressure which the Allies could bring to bear upon her.

Big Committees an Obstacle.

The Assembly got down to routine business today in various committees. It is felt that their size—forty-one members in each—is an obstacle to rapid work, but there is no other way of satisfying the demand of small members for equal representation with the great powers. It is hoped to subdivide the big committees into smaller ones because otherwise with all the forty-one members wishing to voice opinions the delay is likely to be interminable. What makes matters worse is that all the decisions reached must be unanimous. Memories of the Peace Conference delays in securing unanimity among a much smaller number make the prospect of attaining it among all the forty-one nations assembled here rather appalling. However, the League covenant enjoins that decisions, save for the entry of new members, must be unanimous.

This morning the Assembly heard the report of Dr. Nansen, the famous Nor-

First Rush by Airplane To Oil Fields of Far North

EDMONTON, Canada, Nov. 18.—This country is preparing for the first rush by airplane to the petroleum fields near Fort Norman, on the Mackenzie River, 900 miles toward the frozen north, heralded by Dominion surveyors as richer than the oil lands of California.

Negotiations already are under way, it was learned today, for establishment of an aerial service out of Edmonton, with landing stages along the route provisioned with food and fuel for prospectors and flying machines.

STATE RAIL FARES RAISED BY I. C. C.

HOLDS THIS DISCRIMINATES

And That New Law Makes It Mandatory to Provide Adequate Return to Carriers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today overruled the refusal of the New York Public Service Commission of the Second District to permit the New York Central and other railroads to increase intrastate passenger, parlor car and sleeping car fares, baggage charges and freight rates on milk and cream in accordance with the nationwide increase in passenger and freight rates granted by the National Commission. The Interstate Commision directed the sixty-three railroads operating within the State to establish intrastate rates to correspond with the advanced interstate rates. Similar proceedings are pending that will affect more than half the States.

The new rates in New York State under the Commission's order must be put in force by Dec. 18 on filing of five days' notice.

The Commission made no ruling on commutation fares, taking the ground that not enough evidence was furnished to enable it to render a decision at this time. Decision on charges on excess baggage, carried in connection with commutation fares, was also postponed.

Today's decision is regarded as one of the most important ever rendered by the Federal Commission, since it again brings to the fore the long standing question of the relation of Federal railroad control to rate making within the various States. The interstate commission now declares that a general obligation rests upon it "to exercise control over intrastate commerce so far as it affects interstate commerce."

How the Case Started.

The case had its beginning in the Interstate Commission's grant to railroads in the Eastern area last August of an increase of 40 per cent. in interstate freight rates, 20 per cent. in interstate passenger fares, baggage charges and rates on milk and cream and a surcharge of 50 per cent. on sleeping car and parlor car spaces. New York railroads applied to the Public Service Commission for the Second District for advances on intrastate traffic to correspond. The State Board granted the increase affecting freight, except milk, but refused the others. The railroads then appealed to the Federal Board.

In its opinion the Interstate Commission refers to the decision in the Shreveport case, which held that it had power over intrastate commerce so far as it affects interstate commerce. While this principle, upheld by the Supreme Court, "continues to be our guide," the commission says, it considers the New York case in the light of the fact that the commission's position "has been put in the form of a mandate" by the Esch-Cummins act. The commission holds that "most cogent reasons," for an extension of authority, have been supplied by the situation in which transportation interests of the country have been placed.

The commission points out that the decisive factor in the case is "whether the rates under consideration injuriously affect interstate commerce." It is pointed out that Congress directed that rates be allowed which would yield 5½ to 6 per cent. return on the value of the railroads. The commission goes on: "There can be no doubt of the power of Congress to devise and provide for carrying into effect a plan for assuring the nation's interstate railroads a fair return upon the value of their property; and the full control of Congress in this matter is not to be denied on the ground that the carriers' aggregate earnings are a combining of intrastate revenue and interstate revenue.

What State's Refusal Means.

"The record shows that the refusal of the State of New York to permit the carriers to increase the rates and fares here in controversy to the extent approved by us is costing the railroads between $11,000,000 and $12,000,000 annually. In other words, the annual earnings of the interstate carriers operating in New York are now between $11,000,000 and $12,000,000 less than they would be if the general level of rates and fares approved by us had become effective on intrastate traffic, and to that extent the declared purpose of Congress is defeated by a preferential basis of rates and fares maintained by authority of the State of New York.

"The needs of these interstate carriers for revenue to enable them to provide adequate transportation service and facilities are immediate, and in the interest of the public cannot be permitted

NEW STORY OF ROBBERY

Mrs. Palmer Tells How Burglar Sprayed Her Throat With an Atomizer.

WAS 'RATHER AFFECTIONATE'

Fingerprints of Victim, Her Servants and Several Friends Taken by Detectives.

It developed yesterday that Mrs. Charlotte King Palmer, whose home at 50 East Ninetieth Street, was reported robbed of jewelry valued at almost $500,000 and furs worth $30,000 Monday night or early Tuesday morning, suffered fractures of bones in both feet during her struggle with the thieves. The three intruders, who had waited until her return home about 1 o'clock in the morning, had seized, bound and gagged her after an attempt by her to escape.

Detectives investigating the case admitted yesterday that although Mrs. Palmer, her Filipino butler and her maid had been closely questioned for the greater part of the day, they were as much at sea about the robbery as when it first was reported to them Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Palmer, divorced wife of James C. Parrish, former Harvard athlete, was interrogated as she lay in bed in her room on the second floor of her home under the constant care of Dr. Albert C. Herring of 40 West Seventy-first Street. Mrs. Palmer, despite her injuries, gave a much more detailed account of her experience with the intruders than that furnished to the police when the robbery was first reported.

Jewelry Insured for $53,000.

Mrs. Palmer, it was understood, was closely questioned about the value of the pearl necklace which, she said, the robbers, among other articles, had taken from her as she lay in a fainting condition at the foot of the stairs on the first floor of her home after she had fallen the entire flight in her attempt to escape. She said the necklace was purchased several years ago from Leo Sachs of Paris, France, for about $300,000. She admitted she had placed a value of only $40,000 on the necklace when she insured it, with the other missing jewelry three years ago with the Federal Underwriters. Mr. Parrish said yesterday that he knew his former wife had purchased a pearl necklace soon after their marriage, and he understood she paid $300,000 for it. He was under the impression, however, that she had bought it in New York.

A list of the stolen jewelry, including the necklace, which contained, Mrs. Palmer said, 210 pearls, strung from a large pear-shaped pearl clasp; two hairpins, set with diamonds; platinum bracelet, set with diamonds and sapphires; platinum horseshoe brooch, set with diamonds; gold meshbag, set with diamonds; gold purse, and a gold pencil. This list was shown to Mrs. Palmer by the detectives and she admitted that although she valued the lot at almost $500,000 she had insured all of it for only $53,000.

The detective, after several conferences both at Mrs. Palmer's home and at Police Headquarters, renewed their interrogation of Mrs. Palmer and her servants. The fact that the detectives remained in the house till a late hour last night gave the impression that they were endeavoring to straightenout discrepancies.

Take Fingerprints of Mrs. Palmer.

Fingerprint experts from Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon took fingerprints of Mrs. Palmer, her servants and several of her friends who called at her home to see her. The detectives explained that it would be necessary to take the fingerprints of all persons in the house immediately after the robbery in order to distinguish them from fingerprints that might have been left by the robbers.

Mrs. Palmer, it was said, sent messages yesterday to several of her friends who called on her Tuesday, and they willingly submitted to be fingerprinted.

According to the detailed account of the robbery given to the detectives yesterday, Mrs. Palmer encountered the intruders within five minutes after Mrs. Sidney Drew, a Miss Patterson, a Mrs. Porter and a man said to be John Elrich, drove up to her home with her in an automobile. Mr. Elrich, it was said, has a suite of rooms on the second floor of Mrs. Palmer's home, immediately in the rear of that occupied by her.

The party, Mrs. Palmer was said to have explained, had spent several hours dining and dancing in the Mont Matre in Fiftieth Street near Broadway, and left the place in the automobile shortly after midnight. It was decided to take Mrs. Palmer to her home first and that Mr. Elrich would then escort the other two women to their homes. The party chatted on the sidewalk in front of Mrs. Palmer's home for several minutes, and the automobile started away as she opened the vestibule door of her home.

At that point the detectives questioned Alfredo Sazone, the Filipino butler, and

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The recent activities of the Peruvian Government in aid of emigration from Great Britain has caused the British Government to ask Peru not to continue its campaign. Peruvian representatives in London have been notified from Lima not to send more emigrants.

Some time ago the Peruvian Government offered transportation to Peru for British emigrants. Foreign Office officials in London admitted that they looked with disfavor on the emigration of British subjects to South and Central America. It was said that previous experiments in Argentina before the war proved unsuccessful and that numbers of Britishers had to be repatriated.

MILLIONAIRES DROP IN 1918 TAX REPORT

Decrease of 5,246 Since 1917, According to Internal Revenue Figures.

NUMBERED 20,944 IN 1918

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—There were 5,246 fewer persons in the United States classed as millionaires in 1918 than in the previous year as shown by the preliminary report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, issued today. Those who pay income taxes of from $40,000 to $50,000 and over are put in the millionaire class, and those who paid that amount and over in 1918 were 20,944, as against 26,190 in 1917. According to statisticians there were more millionaires in the United States in 1917 than in any other country, but figures are not available to make a comparison for 1918.

It is believed that the United States had in 1917 the greatest number of persons who paid income taxes of $1,000,000 and over, the number then being 141, as compared with sixty-seven in 1918.

The sixty-seven persons in the United States who had incomes of $1,000,000 and over in 1918 might have had a capital of $20,000,000 and perhaps as high as $100,000,000.

The following table gives a comparison in the two years of those classed as having a capital of $1,000,000 and over:

$40,000 to	$50,000	.....	7,087	6,449
50,000 to	100,000	.....	12,439	9,996
100,000 to	150,000	.....	3,302	2,358
300,000 to	400,000	.....	380	260
400,000 to	500,000	.....	179	122
1,000,000 and over		.....	141	67
Total		.....	26,190	20,944

No explanation is offered by the fiscal authorities for the drop in the number of millionaires in 1918. Personal returns, according to classes, in the years 1918 and 1917 were as follows:

NET INCOME.

Income Class.		1918.	1917.
$1,000-	$2,000.	$2,232,354,547	$2,461,137,000

3,000-	5,000	3,535,219,007	2,115,864,601
5,000-	10,000.	2,145,690,016	1,827,508,088
10,000-	25,000.	1,736,548,050	1,687,165,619
100,000-	150,000.	284,106,740	400,492,040
300,000-	500,000.	144,545,428	209,904,989

The number of personal returns filed during the calendar year 1918 was 4,425,114. The total amount of net income reported by these returns was $15,024,639,355 and the tax (normal and surtax) amounted to $1,127,721,835. The average amount of tax per individual was $254.85, and the average tax rate 7.08 per cent. As compared with 1917, the above figures show a growth of 952,224 in the number of returns filed, and an increase in the total net income reported of $2,272,256,148 as well as an increase of $436,228,881 in the total tax.

New York paid the largest personal income tax, $354,263,417, on a total net income of $2,719,713,784 or 31.41 per cent. of the whole, while Pennsylvania was next with a tax of $137,781,370, representing 12.22 per cent. Illinois was third with a total tax of $84,560,642, followed by Massachusetts, which paid $81,307,340 or 7.21 per cent.

The number of joint returns of husbands and wives with or without dependent children and of husbands whose wives though living with them filed separate returns, was 2,559,057. The total net income represented by these returns amounted to $10,942,720,894. The number of wives making separate returns from husbands was 35,942, the amount of net income represented being $333,218,749. The number of single men making returns as heads of families was 296,902. The total net income of this class amounted to $857,115,228. The number of returns filed by single women as heads of families was 82,251. The total net income of these taxpayers amounted to $273,794,078. In addition there were filed 1,195,301 returns of income by single men, representing a total net income from this class of $2,726,887,806.

The returns show that the income received as compensation for personal services, salaries, wages, commissions, bonuses, directors' fees, &c., amounted

SHIP BOARD 'BLED WHITE,' HE SAYS, BY 'COST PLUS' PLAN

Gillen Ascribes Loss of Billions to Failure to Understand Principles of Contract.

ARMY FAILS TO PAY BILL

Still Owes $178,000,000 on Account That Cost $300,000 to Have Audited.

MILLIONS LOST ON TANKERS

Leased at $6.50 a Ton When $20 Could Have Been Obtained—Proposes New Program.

Double and possibly triple losses have been incurred by the United States Shipping Board in its attempt to operate its tank ships, according to the testimony of Martin J. Gillen, formerly special assistant to Chairman John Barton Payne, who yesterday concluded his second day as a witness before the Congressional Select Committee on Shipping Board operations by disclosing new avenues through which millions of dollars slipped through the hands of those in charge of the administration of the Shipping Board.

Losses which he said it was possible to estimate—losses in millions and in billions—resulted from the application of the cost-plus contracts simply because the representatives of the Shipping Board, not understanding the principles underlying those contracts, permitted the Shipping Board to be bled white, through the practice of corporations in farming out these contracts to subsidiary companies, while both parent and subsidiary companies were allowed from 6 to 10 per cent. profit each on excessive labor, materials, transportation and other costs.

In addition to this the Shipping Board had been put to great expense in the adjustment of its claims against the War Department, aggregating $208,000,000, of which only $30,000,000 was paid recently, and against other Government departments.

Further losses in the operation of ships occurred when inexperienced men in charge of refrigerator vessels permitted their cargoes to spoil.

Mulcted by Ring in Brazil.

Frauds against the Shipping Board were not confined to the United States, according to Bernard S. Van Rensselaer, an attorney of Rio de Janeiro, who described the activities of a ring of ship chandlers and repair men in Brazil who mulcted the Government through excessive charges for supplies and repairs and perpetrated these frauds against private ship owners as well.

At the request of the committee for constructive recommendations with reference to future operations Mr. Gillen said the process of liquidation should be eliminated as soon as possible so that the Shipping Board could give its attention almost wholly to the operation of vessels. He suggested that each of the seven members be placed in charge of a particular department where he could study the details and work out solutions of operating problems.

In telling of losses in the operation of tankers, Mr. Gillen said a list compiled last May 24 showed that the Shipping Board had fifty-four of these vessels, of which twenty had been allocated to private oil companies. There were six in semi-private use, while thirty-three were operated by the Government. On May 28 he found that along the Atlantic Coast fifty-four ships were idle because the board did not have enough tankers and was unable to fuel them. This cost the Government $2,000 a day for each idle ship, or $3,240,000 a month. Furthermore, he testified, while the Government was purchasing fuel oil for $2.07 a barrel, private concerns operating vessels on Shipping Board account were buying oil in the open market at from $4 to $8 a barrel.

Big Loss on Tanker Leases.

Representative Kelly of Michigan asked if the loss due to the purchase of oil at the higher prices paid by the private operators as against that paid by the Government would not total approximately $64,000,000, but the witness said he would not "venture a guess" without the data before him. To losses from idleness and from fuel prices he added the losses due to disadvantageous leases.

"We at that time were vitally short of tankers," said the witness. "There was a national shortage and a world shortage, and I am informed, although I personally have made no investigation along this line, that the rate at which these tankers were being leased in the open market ran from $15 a dead-weight ton to as high as $20 and $22 a dead-weight ton. The Government was leasing tankers to private parties or corporations for either $6.15 or $6.50 a dead-weight ton per month.

"Here, unknown to Judge Payne or Admiral Benson for months, we had tankers making a minimum of $50,000 a month, and it was the only piece of floating property we had on which we could have made a handsome profit."

At this time, the witness said, Captain Paul Foley was in charge of the operation of tankers as chief of the Bureau of Operations. When the situation was discovered, however, Admiral Benson acted immediately, taking the operation of the tankers out of Captain Foley's hands although leaving the Captain in charge of the Bureau. The Admiral also had a chart made to show where tankers were needed to supply fuel for the Army, Navy, Shipping Board, and Panama Railroad.

"Now the Admiral is able to control the situation," asserted Mr. Gillen.

SAYS BUILDERS BACKED BOSS BRINDELL; $47,620 ADDED TO LIST OF BRIBES PAID; MAYOR AND UNTERMYER WRANGLE HOTLY

Indict Brindell on New Extortion Charge; Combined Penalty 22½ Years if Guilty

Two more indictments yesterday were found by the November additional Grand Jury against Robert P. Brindell, ruler of the unionized building trades, making the sum of the penalties he faces twenty-two and a half years.

The first indictment brought in yesterday was a superseding one, which, altering the wording of Wednesday's indictment, did not change the status of Brindell.

The second document handed up to Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions did not merely charge Brindell with "an attempt to commit the crime of extortion"; it made the accusation of extortion consummated, alleging that the President of the New York Building Trades Council forced Louis J. Cohen, contractor, to give him $500 on July 18 by threats to call a strike on Cohen's wrecking jobs at Washington, Rector and West Streets.

The $100,000 bail which procured his release on Wednesday was continued, the bail bonds being reworded to include the latest complaints.

"The time may come when the people may demand more security," said Judge Mulqueen to Martin W. Littleton, who appeared for Brindell, and the lawyer said he hoped there would be sufficient time between indictments to enable him "to go out and dig up bail if more is needed."

Upon application Judge Mulqueen granted the union leader until the day after Thanksgiving Day to make the usual motions or amend his pleas.

The extortion indictment lodged against Brindell made him liable to a maximum sentence of fifteen years, double the term to which Wednesday's indictment exposed him.

REVEALS RUM RING IN NEW ENGLAND

Joseph Mulvihill of Bridgeport Charges Big Deals and Profits Over $500,000.

SAYS HE ACTED AS AGENT

Declares Liquor Was Got Out of Bond for Medical Purposes and Sold by Truckloads.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 18.—Charging that one man has made between $500,000 and $700,000 on the illegal sale of liquor in New England since prohibition, Joseph Mulvihill, fight promoter, sporting man and unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congressman on a wet platform, tonight made a clean breast of his recent connection with what he terms a gigantic bootlegging ring. Mulvihill is the man who bid $300,000 for the Dempsey-Carpentier fight.

Mulvihill charges that the proprietor of an inn is the leader of the New England bootlegging ring. He was prompted to make his revelations tonight as a result of alleged threats on his life at the Bridgeport railroad station Monday and of his arrest today on a body writ sworn out against him by the man he accuses of being the head of the ring.

"One of this man's gunmen met me at the Bridgeport railroad station Monday night on my return from Hartford, where I had been to confer with the United States District Attorney," said Mulvihill tonight. "He said I would be shot if I laid bare to the Federal authorities my knowledge of the workings of the New England bootlegging ring. I told him I wasn't afraid of all the gunmen living and intended to go through with my revelations. Today in an effort to frighten me he had me arrested on a body writ, intending to have me thrown in jail on the charge that I owed him $1,000. It didn't take me long to put up a bond, however, and I intend to go through to the end in this thing and render the Federal authorities every assistance in the investigation in progress."

"The bootlegging ring has flooded all New England with liquor since prohibition went into effect," said Mulvihill in Sheriff Simeon Pease's office immediately after his release on bonds.

"I acted as one of its many agents, disposing on a commission basis of liquor brought here from New York by auto truck. I took two loads of whisky into Boston alone, which was sold for $44,200, one load containing 245 cases and the other 275 cases, which were sold for $35 a case. I sold in Springfield, Mass., and in Connecticut cities liquor valued at more than $200,000. The ring at the present time owes me $2,500 in back commissions for liquor which I sold.

"The head of the ring told me he was operating within the law and withdrawing liquor from bond in New York on a permit to use liquors for medical purposes. His withdrawals were made under the name of John C. Blake of Saugatuck, who was really only a figurehead in the transactions.

"Some time ago he asked me to be a party to a deal to defraud one of his customers out of seventeen barrels of whisky. I refused to be a party to the deal and we split.

"Prior to this happening he had given me $1,000 as a contribution to my campaign fund in my candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Congressman on a wet platform.

"I spent $600 of this $1,000 and told him I would keep the balance on account toward the $2,500 in commissions he owed me. He agreed to this and I continued to act as one of his agents until we parted company on my refusal to stand for the deal involving the seventeen barrels of whisky. Then I decided to tell the United States Dis-

DID NEW GOVERNOR MEAN MAYOR HYLAN?

Believes in Home Rule, but Preconceived Notions Must Not Injure the Public Interest.

TALKS AT COMMERCE DINNER

Officials Should Attend to Business of Government, Not Government of Business.

Governor-elect Nathan L. Miller, in his first public utterance since his election, outlined last night at the 152d annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York at the Waldorf some of the general policies which, he said, would govern some of the aspects of his administration.

The Governor-elect appealed for the aid of business men in his administration, saying he wished something more than advice from them and that he intended to call upon some of the men present last night for "patriotic, unselfish service." He bespoke the assistance of the new State Administration in the solving of the city's local problems, and declared that, while he believed in a large measure of home rule, the public interest must be served, even if the State were obliged to take action. He asserted his belief in the idea that public officials should try to give their attention to the business of government rather than to the governing of private business.

"I think the rapid transit problem is hitting you in the face," the Governor-elect said. "Another grave problem of New York City is the port problem.

"I may say that I believe in the maximum exercise of the power of home rule, but to justify that maximum the powers delegated by the State to the municipality must be exercised in the public interest. We need to have these problems studied, precisely as I take it the port problem has been studied. We need to find out what action needs to be taken and then we need to see that that action is taken. I want to say that I am in favor of securing action, and if it cannot be secured in one way, then I am in favor of seeking other ways to secure it."

"I favor securing action. I believe that the State must do everything possible to co-operate with the local government, but that the public interest must be served. If action cannot be secured in one way, then I am in favor of seeking other ways to secure it. I do not believe that any preconceived notion on the part of any one should stand in the way of that solution."

Some of the dinner guests took the Governor-elect's allusions to attempts of public officials to govern private business, coupled with the references to the transit situation and the "preconceived notions" of public officials as a direct reference to the Hylan administration, and Mr. Miller's further declaration that the State, under his administration, would see "that the public interest should be served" as a possible warning to the Mayor that as Governor, Mr. Miller would use any power delegated to him to secure that end, whatever clash it involved with the City Government.

Comes to Appeal for Help.

The Governor-elect declared at the outset of his speech that, mindful as he was of the responsibilities and difficulties that were soon to confront him, he had come to appeal to the members of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York for help.

"We are in the habit," he said, "of referring to the results of the election as a victory of a party. Times are too serious, the problems are too complex and too difficult, and, indeed, party lines are too much broken to refer to the result as a party victory. Instead of winning a victory, the Republican Party has assumed a great responsibility.

"The seriousness of the times emphasizes the truth that party govern-

Contractor Says Otto Eidlitz Said "We Must Stand by Brindell."

BARES SECRET OF POWER

Taunts Untermyer About Fight on Bosses and Is Threatened With Contempt.

Among the important developments yesterday in connection with the Lockwood committee's investigation of the housing situation were the following:

Albert Hershkowitz, a builder, testified before the Lockwood committee that he paid Brindell $25,000 "to avoid trouble" in erecting a twenty-story building. Hyman Clompoos, a wrecking contractor, told of paying Brindell $3,500. Joseph H. Goldblatt, a builder, said he gave Brindell $2,000 and was laughed at when he demanded a "receipt," and Atwell described payments of $17,120 in five checks made out to Brindell. Brindell indorsed them all and the witness said he, Atwell, destroyed three of them.

The filing of two indictments against Robert P. Brindell, President of the Building Trades Council, one charging him with extortion and the other a superseding indictment charging attempted extortion. While Brindell was being arraigned for the second time in forty-eight hours witnesses told the Lockwood committee of paying him $47,620.

Hylan and Untermyer Wrangle.

Mayor Hylan's appearance on the stand before the legislative committee resulted in a wrangle between him and Mr. Untermyer that consumed much of the committee's time. The Mayor accused Mr. Untermyer of making a personal attack on him for political motives. The Mayor started to make several speeches about the Interborough, the movement for an 8-cent fare and demanded that counsel "produce anything you have got on me or shut up." Mr. Untermyer objected to the Mayor's "stump speeches," called him an "unruly" witness, charged him with "playing to the gallery," of behaving "indecently and intemperately," declaring that the Mayor acted as if "he had never been in a court of justice." The lawyer finally threatened to have the Mayor cited for contempt if he did not abide by the rules of the committee.

George Atwell, head of the Northern Wrecking Company and of the Demolition Company, a contractor well known in political circles, testified that the Building Trades Employers' Association was responsible for Brindell's rise to power. He told of a meeting where Otto Eidlitz of Marc Eidlitz & Son, a member of the Board of Governors of the Masons' Building Association, made an impassioned address in which he declared that Brindell "was doing a wonderful work in stabilizing the business and we must stand behind him." On hearing the address Atwell climbed on the "band wagon" and "did business" with Brindell, who thereupon, he said, dictated to large building contractors what wrecking concerns were to do their work and what the cost would be. Brindell's offices became headquarters of the boss house wreckers, he said, and when they wanted a contract they went to see Brindell.

Mr. Atwell, who was the last witness of the day, gave the most sensational story concerning the details of Brindell's operations of any of the witnesses that have yet appeared before the Lockwood committee.

Atwell said that the first he knew of Brindell was a letter he received from the labor boss last March. Brindell advised him that he was putting up wooden bridges to excavations without using members of the Building Trades Council. The witness said that when he engaged Brindell's men they were inefficient and made little chairs for themselves and sat down leisurely to clean brick instead of standing up and going about their business in the accustomed manner.

Atwell said his acquaintance with Brindell had not been very long, but that it was "quick." Formerly, he said, all the house wreckers employed by him or by the Demolition Company, which he organized and which included twelve experienced house wrecker bosses, were men from William Zaranko's union of house wreckers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Brindell's Men Foisted on Him.

Brindell's letter, he said, was an order to take on other men to do house wrecking, builders, carpenters and men that "looked like prizefighters." Up to that time the members of the firm always acted as their own foremen on jobs and saved that much money to the corporation. When Brindell came on the scene the Demolition Company had to engage foremen from the Building Trades Council. Some of Brindell's men complained that the work was "too dirty." He said he got about 25 per cent. efficient work out of the council's men compared with the work of the old regular union men. The wages paid were slightly higher than to the old men.

The fact that his company had to hire foremen added to the heavy financial burden of the work of building and wrecking, said Atwell. He said he had nothing to do with the selection of the foremen. They were sent from the council and he had to take them. If they were inefficient he had to keep them.

Atwell said he first went to see Brindell at the suggestion of George Backer, the indicted builder, concerning one of Backer's building projects at Fifth Avenue and Thirtieth Street. He saw Brindell and told him that he was unable to switch from the old union men to Brindell's men because he would lose money. He heard soon afterward that the excavation work on the building had been stopped. Backer again asked him to see Brindell. He did so and obtained permission to use the old union men until May 1 as he promised to take on Brindell's men on that date.

On May 1, said Atwell, he got word that the new men would have to be used on the first Monday of the month. Thereupon he and John Rheinfrank and C. C. Southard, two other wrecking contractors, called on Brindell in his Daly Avenue home to attempt to have Brindell concede the use of the old men because Brindell's new men were "awful." Atwell said that he knew of a job where Brindell's men took a month to get the roof off a building, an operation generally taking two or three days.

At the conference Brindell said he would not stand for the use of the old men.

Labor Boss Had Rival Union.

Q.—Was he trying to organize a counter-union? A.—He already had a counter-union.

Q.—He had a counter-union of his own? A.—Let me explain that to you. He had the carpenters and the dock builders in his local—the local that he was President of. He then took in the shovers into that local, and he then claimed jurisdiction over the house-wrecking of that local for the reason that Thirty-third Street had given permission to, as I understood it.

Q.—You mean Thirty-third Street is the Building Trades Employers' Association? A.—Yes.

Q.—That is the Kelly concern? A.—Kelly, Eidlitz, Seaton and the whole bunch of them.

Q.—Claimed they had given him the right to do that? A.—Yes.

Atwell said he started to work tearing down some walls on a 21-story building at 100 Broadway. Brindell's men "lay down on their stomachs on the wall and started to work in that way and when the builder, Mr. Wingate of the Caldwell-Wingate Company, saw the inexperienced men unable to do the work he discharged them" and that started the "rumpus," added the witness. Mr. Fadus, general superintendent of the Caldwell-Wingate Company, thought that Mr. Wingate had made a mistake.

"I said," continued Atwell, "'what are you going to do about it?' I said 'I have arranged with Kelly and the building trades employers association on Monday to see what can be done,' and there we went and met Mr. Eidlitz, Mr. Seaton and Mr. Kelly, and put the proposition up to them, of using the new men against the old, and they argued there for an hour or an hour and a half, and they took a vote and ordered the new men back again. I said, 'We cannot use the new men on this piece of work,' and I talked to Fadus and Fadus said, 'Why not try and get permission to use the old laborers, the hod-carriers and laborers and try them out on it, if we can't get the first gang, that gang that worked one day—'"

Q.—Zaranko's union? A.—Zaranko's union. I think they worked one day, on the 30th of April, and they done very good work.

Eidlitz Praised Brindell.

Q.—Go on. A.—So we talked to Brindell, and then Mr. Eidlitz got up and made a speech, and said that he thought Brindell was doing a wonderful work.

Q.—This was Otto Eidlitz? A.—Otto Eidlitz. He said Mr. Brindell was doing a wonderful work in stabilizing the business, and we must stand behind him, and I said to Fadus, "Did you hear that?" He said, "Yes." "Well, I says, 'What are you going to do now?' "He says, 'I don't know.'" I says, "I am going to get on the band wagon, and you do the same thing."

Q.—Whose band wagon was this, Brindell's? A.—Eidlitz and Brindell's and the whole bunch of them. I knew there was no use of me fighting any further. I made my appeal. We then got permission off Mr. Brindell to use the old laborers on taking down of the wall at 100 Broadway.

Q.—How did that come about? If he had a lot of competent men himself, how did he happen to give you permission to use the old men? A.—Well, he gave us his permission.

Atwell said that when he got to the eleventh story Brindell sent word that he would have to use the new men. Some of Zaranko's men applied for work and Atwell said he would be pleased to hire them, but could not do so. Then he sent for Peter Stadtmuller, one of Brindell's agents, and told him that he was anxious to hire Zaranko's men. Stadtmuller said he could go ahead and engage the men if he paid initiation fees of $50 for each man.

Q.—Those men were union men, weren't they? A.—Yes.

Q.—And they were in the American Federation? A.—They were members of Zaranko's own union.

Q.—They were members and had a charter from the American Federation of Labor? A.—Yes, I understood that.

Atwell said he paid a total of $17,120 to Brindell and the council and of this amount he paid $3,620 in initiation fees for Zaranko's men. Members of the Hod-Carriers' Union sent to the job at 100 Broadway were paid at the rate of $7 a day while the regular wreckers got $8, said Atwell. The difference of $1 for these men went to Brindell, he testified. He admitted that the less wages his men got the more Brindell got. He arranged with the men to take $3 a week out of their wages to pay the advance of $50 he made in the case of each man to Brindell. He said there was "many a $5 bill" that he never received from the men in whose behalf he made it.

A handful of receipts made out by Atwell's organization, the Northern Wrecking Company, was produced and placed in evidence. The receipts showed that payments of $30, $45 and $35 had been made by individual workers on account of their initiation fees in Brindell's council. The man also had to continue paying his dues to the old union, said Atwell.

Atwell's Deals with Brindell.

Atwell then came to his dealings with Brindell. He said he dealt with him on four jobs. The first was at Broadway and Fifty-seventh Street, on the Fiske Tire Building, about May 5, and went to one of Atwell's concerns, the Northern Wrecking Company. He said that he went with Brindell to the offices of the Fred T. Ley Company, the builders who were to give out the contracts for excavation work, knowing that he could not get any work from a builder unless he used council men.

Q.—You first went over to Brindell, didn't you? A.—After I became acquainted with Brindell and started using his men, then he sent for me and asked me was I figuring the job at Fifty-seventh Street and Broadway.

Q.—How did he know? A.—When I went down there there were a dozen wreckers there.

Q.—You mean at Brindell's office? A.—Yes, certainly.

Q.—Sort of wreckers' headquarters? A.—Wrecking headquarters. It became so after the 1st of May, and if you wanted any information you had to go there to get it.

Q.—If you wanted any jobs you had to go there, too? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What was the sequel of that, if he did not consent you could not put a bid on it? A.—He could call up any builder on the telephone and get the bids and get the information that you desired.

Q.—But apart from that what gave him this great power? A.—Thirty-third Street. I call it the Court of Appeals, Thirty-third Street.

Q.—You think that the Building Trades Employers' Association played into his hands? A.—When I was up there and Mr. Eidlitz made that speech it sounded much like it.

Q.—As I understand it the Employers, Building Trades Employers' Association, included all the contractors in the city? A.—It included a lot of the best builders and then they had a little red book giving the names of the subcontractors, but the house wreckers were not members of it.

Q.—They were the bosses? A.—The bosses' association.

Q.—The great concerns like Fuller and Starrett and Eidlitz, and all the rest of them? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And then did they require that you should get your work from the Building Trades Council? A.—No; they required that we hire Building Trades Council men or men satisfactory to the Building Trades Council. It was inserted right in our contracts after May 1.

Q.—And that is really the source of this man's power? A.—That is the source of his power.

Q.—That these people played into his hands? A.—Every place we wanted to figure on a job, what kind of men, we were asked what kind of men do you use, whether we used the old union men or the Council men.

Atwell said he went to see Mr. Ley because Brindell gave him permission to "figure" on the work. Before he went to see Ley, Brindell asked how much he, Brindell, got out of it if Atwell got the job. Atwell promised him $5,000. He had already looked over the amount of work that was to be done and estimated that he could afford to pay $10,000 for the job and that he would make a good profit on the salvage.

Q.—You were willing to pay $10,000 for the job and get the wrecking? A.—Yes.

Q.—And how much of that did he say he wanted? A.—Five.

Had to Pay Brindell Half.

Q.—So you only had to pay $5,000; is that right? A.—Yes.

Q.—For this thing and for all the wrecking, and he got the other five? A.—Yes, he got the other five; I done the work.

The Chairman—You took the risk.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that Walter Melton wanted to pay $25,000 for that job and Brindell would not let him have it? A.—It is a fact that Mr. Melton did want to pay $25,000 for the job. I heard he did.

Q.—Don't you know he was going to use Building Trades Council men on it and there was nothing in it for Brindell? A.—He promised to use Building Trades Council men.

Q.—Yes, and offered $25,000 for the job; can't you see how all that adds to the cost of building? A.—Yes, it does add, I know it does.

Q.—If an owner can get $25,000 for his salvage from one man and gets only $10,000 or $5,000 from another man, that building is going to cost $20,000 more on that account alone, isn't it? A.—Yes, and if it takes a month longer to tear down the building with the new men than with the old men he would lose a month's rent and lose a month's interest, and I understand the interest on that job was a thousand dollars a day.

Add to Cost of Building.

Q.—So all these manipulations and disruption, they all add tremendously to the cost of building? A.—Yes.

Atwell said that he gave Brindell a check for $5,000 between the 20th and the 25th of May and that the check bore Brindell's endorsement, as it was made out to his order. He then said that he destroyed three of the five checks made out by him to Brindell's order. He produced the two checks still in his possession, both of which bore Brindell's signature.

The next job on which he did business with Brindell, said Atwell, was at Eighty-third Street and Broadway for the Fleischman Construction Company. He said that he went with Brindell to the Fleischman concern and offered $10,000 for the work. He gave Brindell $5,000.

Q.—It was a sort of fifty-fifty arrangement, wasn't it? A.—Which was that?

Q.—Between you and Brindell? A.—Fifty-fifty—

Q.—Only he got fifty and you paid it? A.—He got fifty and I paid it.

Q.—If you paid $10,000 for the job, then he got $5,000. Is that right? A.—In those two cases.

Q.—Now, how were the other cases? What happened to the other cases? A.—The other job was Seventeenth Street and Livingston Place. I figured the job was worth six.

Q.—You mean you had to pay six? A.—I figured to pay $6,000 for it, and he told me to go up and offer G. Richard Davies four, and I went up.

Q.—How? A.—He told me to go up and offer G. Richard Davies, the builder, four, and I went up and offered them four, and they gave me the job, so he asked me for two.

Q.—And that was figured in? A.—And that was figured in; and the last job was Fortieth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, four buildings. He called me up one night at the house and asked me to look at four buildings at Fortieth Street for Lard & Moore. I went up and looked at the job, and the next day he said, "How much are they worth?" I said, "I can pay $1,000 for those buildings." He said, "You can!" I said, "Yes." He said, "Go and charge them five hundred." I charged them five hundred, and he asked me for the fifteen hundred.

Q.—You charged the builder $500 and gave him the $500 and another thousand; A.—Yes—that is, the difference.

Q.—And you got the salvage? A.—And I got the salvage.

Q.—You did better than he did on the job, didn't you? A.—I only had one-seventh of that job.

Q.—I mean your concern did a little better than he did? A.—We did a little better than fifteen hundred.

Atwell said that Brindell came off best in the transaction, as he had nothing to do but to collect the money.

Hylan Creates Uproar.

The hearing was in an uproar a dozen times during the morning session when Mayor Hylan was on the stand. Flanked on one side by Grover Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structure, and on the other by Augustin Kelly, a secretary, who whispered suggestions to him and supplied him with information, the Mayor took charge of the hearing and made aggressive demands that the committee listen to statements he had to make, letters that he desired to read and witnesses that he sought to have testify.

The Mayor clashed continually with Mr. Untermyer, and on one occasion said: "I know something about tricky questions." To which Mr. Untermyer tartly replied: "And I know something about tricky Mayors." The lawyer compared the Mayor to "Bill Sulzer" in his spoken solicitation for the welfare of "the people." In spite of the admonitions of Chairman C. C. Lockwood, the audience, which jammed the small Board of Estimate room, broke into applause and laughed uproariously at the sallies of Mr. Untermyer and the Mayor.

Questioned About Hettrick Letter.

Mr. Untermyer began questioning the Mayor about the letter sent to him by John T. Hettrick on Feb. 8, 1919, which the Mayor previously admitted he adopted as his own and which he sent verbatim to President Arthur S. Somers of the Board of Education, Vice President Frank D. Wilsey and all the members of the Board of Estimate. In it the Mayor adopted Hettrick's statements concerning the advantages of limestone over terra cotta in the public schools and sent it out without qualification as his own.

Mr. Untermyer sought to show that the Mayor knew Hettrick fifteen or twenty years ago when Hettrick was a court stenographer in the Ewen Street Court, Brooklyn, and Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield was a lawyer practicing in the court. The Mayor said he was firing a locomotive at the time, and had not been admitted to the bar.

The Mayor accused Mr. Untermyer of attempting to "put a false impression" on the Hettrick letter, especially the last paragraph in which the Mayor, adopting Hettrick's words as his own, informed the city officials that "the question must be determined by the city officials directly responsible, whether it is better to have permanent construction of our public school buildings in natural stone fabricated by citizens of this city, rentpayers and taxpayers, rather than in material produced by non-union labor in New Jersey and elsewhere."

Mr. Untermyer asked the Mayor to refrain from making long speeches, and the witness demanded that Mr. Whalen and Corporation Counsel John F. O'Brien be permitted to testify. He demanded "fair treatment." Mr. Untermyer, after listening to the Mayor, declared that he "never saw an official of the Government so disorderly and so unamenable to the rules of procedure" in his life.

"We have other business than you," Mr. Mayor. "Let us go on. You are incidental," the lawyer remarked.

The Mayor insisted that he obeyed nobody's instructions in passing the Hettrick letter on to other city officials. The Mayor said it was his "honest purpose" to pass the letter on "as information." Mr. Untermyer was exasperated by the continual use of the words "honest" and "fair," and remarked that using the words every two minutes did not make things either honest or fair.

Hylan Admits Meeting Brindell.

The Mayor admitted that he met Brindell on two or three occasions. He said he had had interviews with Brindell who appeared before the Board of Estimate but had not met him frequently. Later the Mayor said he did not remember ever having met Brindell but that he might have met him. During the examination of the Mayor concerning Brindell the former challenged Mr. Untermyer to refrain from holding back anything.

"I have done a great deal to help you Mr. Mayor that you don't know of," Mr. Untermyer interrupted.

"I don't want your help," shouted the Mayor bringing his fist down with a bang on the table in front of him. "Anything you have got on me, get it out, the quicker the better."

"Maybe I am more considerate of you than that," suggested the lawyer. The Mayor flushed and said, "I don't want your consideration. Give it out."

"I would like to ask you a question," said the Mayor turning on Mr. Untermyer. "Since this thing has been going on: have you had any conferences with the Interborough lawyers?"

"Mr. Chairman, will you check this garrulous gentleman?" Mr. Untermyer asked Senator Lockwood. The Chairman suggested that the Mayor reply to the questions. The latter said he was unwilling to have any one "impute" anything to him. Mr. Untermyer informed the Mayor that he would try to conduct the hearing in an orderly manner. The Mayor again attacked Mr. Untermyer for making "imputations," whereupon the lawyer threw up his hands and declared that so far as he was concerned the Mayor could act as "indecently and as intemperately" as he pleased. The Mayor, he said, would not make any impression by "shouting and bluffing."

The Mayor asked Mr. Untermyer to stick to the "truth." The lawyer said: "If I gave the truth, Mr. Mayor," and he ended his sentence with a smile.

Mayor Hylan testified that the memorandum that Hettrick sent with his letter to the Mayor could not be found in the files. The inquisitor for the committee was puzzled about the condition of the Mayor's files. All the letters he thought material were missing, he said. In reply to another quotation the Mayor started on a speech.

Complains of Mayor's "Garrulity."

"Is there no end to the garrulity of this witness?" asked Mr. Untermyer. He objected to the "statement" the Mayor promised to make to the committee. The Mayor angrily declared he would make it anyhow. He was stopped by Mr. Untermyer.

The Mayor declared that Mr. Untermyer's questions were a political attack on him. Mr. Untermyer said the Mayor never had a better political friend.

"I don't want your political friendship," the Mayor retorted angrily. "I suppose you are still mad because we fired Bruere out." He did not want the lawyer to put him "in a hole" for political purposes. Mr. Untermyer advised him to pull the hole in after him. The Mayor made a reference to the Interborough, and Mr. Untermyer accused him of "playing to the gallery." He declared that nobody applauded Mayor Hylan's utterances regarding the Interborough more than he.

Taunts Untermyer on Bus Fight.

Mayor Hylan, half-rising from his chair and pointing his finger at Mr. Untermyer, declared:

"Yes, and your firm got the injunction against us from purchasing municipal buses and putting them on the streets of the city—Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall were the attorneys in the case. You have done everything that you could to help block progress in the city."

"You see what a politician this is," said Mr. Untermyer, throwing up his hands.

The Mayor demanded to know whether Mr. Untermyer had been in conference with "Interborough attorneys." "You keep quiet," said the lawyer. "Have you been in conference with De Lancey Nicoll?" the Mayor persisted. The Mayor did not get a reply, and the inquiry was ordered continued by Chairman Lockwood.

Mr. Untermyer remarked there were few members of the bar who had but a single case, and the Mayor snapped out, "But I can tell you the cases I had—I did not appear for one side and take money from the Interborough."

"Now isn't this the cheapest kind of political claptrap you ever saw," asked Mr. Untermyer of the committee. "I told you yesterday I never answered billingsgate and I never will."

Contempt Charge Threatened.

The testimony went on for a few minutes without any altercation but soon the Mayor again accused Mr. Untermyer of making a political attack on him to which the lawyer retorted, "Oh, bunk." Here Mr. Untermyer appealed to the committee and asked whether the Mayor would be expected to answer questions or whether he would be permitted to show contempt of the committee. He said that if the Mayor did not keep order he would ask that he be cited for contempt. The conduct was unworthy of the Chief Magistrate of the city, he added, and said he was earnestly endeavoring to finish the Mayor's examination.

Senator Abraham Kaplan attempted to cut short the Mayor's examination, alleging that the lawyer attacked the Mayor, but this motion was ruled out of order and the examination continued.

The Mayor attempted to show that a general reference in The World to Hettrick's undated letter informing the Mayor that the labor unions he "represented" were passing commendatory resolutions showed that the letter had been published" prior to the time that it was given out by Commissioner Hirshfield. Mr. Untermyer pointed out that the letter was not made public until after the raid on Hettrick's office, shortly after the committee started its work.

The Mayor was questioned concerning the contract for the Newtown High School. The estimate for the work in 1916 was $400,000. It was not let and was resubmitted several times. Finally the estimate for the work on May 12, 1920, was $1,300,000. The Mayor thought that the increase of 240 per cent. was due to the cost of material and labor itself and said he had no suspicion of combinations among contractors when the estimate was made.

Mr. Untermyer wanted to know whether the Mayor was a "champion" of limestone. The Mayor responded that he did not champion limestone, granate or brick. "And the people want to know that I am not interested in any of these materials," he said turning to the audience.

Calls Mayor "Bill Sulzer."

Mr. Untermyer spoke sarcastically of the Mayor as being a regular "Bill Sulzer" in his desire for the welfare of the people. When he was again interrupted by the Mayor, who demanded that some document be produced, Mr. Untermyer said, "I don't believe this man has ever been in a court of justice." The crowd howled. "I don't think he knows procedure. That is a charitable view," added Mr. Untermyer.

After another clash Mr. Untermyer exclaimed, "You ought to be ashamed of yourself as Mayor of this city to keep on in this way."

The Witness—Don't worry about me.

Mr. Untermyer—But the people don't like their Mayor to go on this way.

The Witness—The people are all right, and they are getting onto some of these schemes that are going on. The people know the Interborough wants an 8-cent fare, too, and they know they would like to get me out of office to get the 8-cent fare.

Mr. Untermyer—The 8-cent fare is bunk; nobody wants an 8-cent fare and they won't give it.

The Witness—And the people want buses, and your firm helped to stop them from having buses.

The Chairman—Mr. Mayor, you know the members of this committee, practically every one of them, with one or two exceptions, are all opposed to it—to an 8-cent fare—and all have just as good a record as the city Administration. I think the city Administration has a good record on it, and we have stood with you on that.

The Witness—The committee is all right on the 8-cent fare. I will admit that.

Mr. Untermyer—And I have made speech after speech for the 5-cent fare and in favor of Mayor Hylan's position, and have been publicly denounced for doing it.

The Witness—But some of us have changed our minds.

Mr. Untermyer—I haven't changed my mind about you. Don't let's have any more of this.

Mr. Untermyer attempted to bring out that Frank Mann, Tenement House Commissioner, was advised by him to dispense with the services of Wright D. Goss, a brick manufacturer, who was a member of the Mayor's Committee on Housing. The Mayor could not recall that Mr. Mann spoke to him about his meeting with Mr. Untermyer and the latter's objections to Mr. Goss. All that the witness could remember was that Mr. Mann said something about the 600 lots owned in Long Island City which Mr. Untermyer told the Tenement House Commissioner he was willing to give to the city.

"I don't think you would give much away, Mr. Untermyer," the Mayor declared.

"That is an impertinence," the lawyer replied. "If you gave away as much in your life as I do in a month—"

"You have it and I have not," the Mayor said.

"That is no reason why you should cast a slur on the man who has it and gives it," said Mr. Untermyer.

Tells of $25,000 Bribe.

Albert Hershkowitz, who said he paid Brindell $25,000, testified that he paid the money in connection with a building he began to construct at Seventh Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street. He heard that there was going to be some trouble because of the fact that he was using non-union iron erectors and said that he arranged through George F. Drew, his shoring contractor, to call on Brindell at the labor man's home. This was in May, 1920. He saw Brindell, who demanded $25,000 as the price for aiding him at a time before there was a strike called.

Hershkowitz said that Drew was in the room when the arrangement was made and Brindell said he wanted $10,000 in May and $5,000 each succeeding month until the entire amount was paid. A few days after the first interview Hershkowitz said he made the first payment, $10,000. He had his son-in-law, M. Gottesman, get the money because he was "ashamed" of the entire transaction. Gottesman drew a check on his own bank and Hershkowitz reimbursed him.

The witness said he made an engagement over the telephone to meet Brindell and called at the St. Marks Place office and turned the money over to the labor leader who put it into his pocket without saying a word.

The second payment, $5,000, was made in July. He had to wait in Brindell's office because there was a line ahead of him. His reference to the other men preceding him caused an outburst of laughter from the audience. The third payment, $5,000, was also made in July, toward the latter end of the month or early in August. The only thing that Brindell said when he paid the money was to inquire whether he had any "trouble on the job." He said he had no difficulty. The fourth payment was made on Sept. 1. This was also $5,000, and completed the payments of $25,000. There was no strike on his work and that at the end of the allotted time he had the same steel erectors in his employ as he had at the beginning.

Asked Brindell for a Receipt.

Joseph Goldblatt, a builder, or 231 East Seventy-seventh Street, was the man who tried to get Brindell or his walking delegates to give him a receipt for $2,000. Goldblatt said that a strike was called on his building, 121 West Forty-fifth Street. He was told to see Brindell, who said that a plumber had a bill against the building. Goldblatt saw no reason why he should pay the bill of a plumber who had previously done some work on the building.

On his first visit to 12 St. Mark's Place, the witness testified, he saw Pike and Chapman, two of Brindell's delegates. The men said that a "plumber" had done $2,500 worth of work on the Forty-fifth Street building and the "bill" would have to be paid if Goldblatt wanted the work to go on. The witness refused to pay this amount but offered $500.

Goldblatt said that he was surprised at the demand, and on the same day went to see Brindell. He told that Brindell knew nothing about the demand. He told Brindell that two of his men were attempting to "hold me up for $2,500." Brindell did not appear surprised. Instead he laughed, and said the amount was a "measly sum," and Goldblatt was "getting off cheap" and had "nothing to kick about." He offered Brindell $1,000, said he was anxious to finish the building, as the tenant, a restaurant man, had bought fixtures and was desirous of moving into the building. He offered Brindell $1,500, but the labor boss held out for $2,000.

The witness said Brindell told him he could pay it any time he wanted, "today or tomorrow," and an arrangement was made that he meet Pike the following morning. Brindell then and there called up some one who the witness thought was Pike, although the name asked for by Brindell was not that of Pike, and Brindell said to the man at the other end, "121 is all right." Brindell, he said, used another name in the conversation.

The next day he made out a check for $2,000 to the order of the Labor Council and endorsed it at his bank for cash. He said he did not give the check to the council, but wrote the check to the council's order because he wanted to keep a record of the transaction.

Laughed at One Victim.

He demanded a receipt for the money of Pike and Chapman. The men laughed at him and he said he would have to give the money direct to Brindell. He called on Brindell and said that he did not want to give his delegates the money because he was afraid they would not turn it over to him, Brindell.

"These are my agents. Whatever they do is all right," the witness said Brindell answered. Goldblatt, still fearful of being cheated out of his money without adequate return, went to Brindell. He told Brindell that he was afraid of being cheated and the labor man said if he did not deal with his agents "the deal was off." Brindell then called his secretary and said, "Put 121 out of commission."

Goldblatt walked out of the room and into the large meeting hall, where he met Pike and Chapman, the delegates whom he had rebuffed.

Agents Boasted of "Pull."

Q.—What happened? A.—Chapman and Pike came along and said, "How do you make out, young man?" I says, "The whole deal is off. So I will have to go and see somebody to straighten this matter out for me." I said I had lots of trouble before and I know where to pull some ropes if I have to. He says, "Go as far as you like. We have got all the protection we want. We have got the District Attorney and the police force with us."

Q.—Who said that? A.—Pike said that, and he says, "If you want to fight against a stone wall go ahead and fight."

Q.—What did you say to that? A.—Well, I said I didn't believe it, but after talking to him for a while he said to me, "Why, my dear boy," he says, "your amount is so small it cannot be seen. What are you bragging about?" He says, "We have about fifty on the list ranging from twenty to fifty thousand dollars and nobody makes a howl like you did to give up. We are sorry we ever tackled you."

He then decided to give the $2,000 to the delegates. They took him to a room, locked the door, and he gave them the money. "As soon as they got their money they beat it," he said.

Hyman Glompoos, another house wrecker, told of paying Brindell $3,500, partly for his own account and partly on behalf of two other house wreckers who desired to continue in business and who had to make peace with Brindell. One of the payments, $1,500, was made to Brindell, he said, in the presence of Frank Melton, a fellow-house wrecker. The $1,500 was paid by Clompoos, but on behalf of Melton, who was then engaged in demolishing eight buildings adjoining the Hotel Plaza. The hotel planned to erect an annex on the site, he said.

On one occasion he was summoned to Brindell, who reproached him for violating a union rule and putting a wooden bridge across the street with non-Council men. Rather than to pay the cost of tearing down the bridge and using the time of half a dozen men to do the work Clompoos said he paid Brindell $1,000 after the labor man said he would "accept" that amount as balm for his injured feelings. Clompoos testified that to erect a new bridge would have cost about $200.

The committee will meet in the Aldermanic Chamber at 10 o'clock this morning and Mr. Atwell will continue his story.

ARCHBISHOP TO VISIT POPE.

Mgr. Hayes Will Sail Soon After Christmas and Return by Easter.

Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes will leave soon for Rome to present a report to Pope Benedict XV. of the condition of the archdiocese of New York. This will be the first report Archbishop Hayes has made since he has been head of this See. It is expected he will sail shortly after Christmas and will return before Easter. Archbishop Hayes will be accompanied by the Rev. Joseph P. Dineen, his private secretary.

Yesterday Archbishop Hayes issued a letter "to the clergy, and the laity" of his archdiocese asking for a generous Peter's Pence, to be read in every church on Sunday, Nov. 28.

WANT MORTGAGES TAX FREE

Real Estate Dealers Seek Action by Congress.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 18.—That a determined effort will be made by the National Association of Real Estate Boards to induce Congress to exempt the income on mortgages from the operations of the income tax was indicated here today by A. J. Kelly, Jr., President of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board and Chairman of the Legislation Committee of the National Organization.

The object, Mr. Kelly added, was to stimulate building construction and relieve existing housing conditions.

Willys-Overland Plant Parts Department Resumes Production.

TOLEDO, Nov. 18.—Two thousand men have resumed work in the parts department of the Willys-Overland Automobile Company, according to an announcement by Vice President Kilpatrick.

It was also stated that there had been no wage reduction, to correct a rumor that some of the men accepted 35 cents, with a maximum of 57 cents, an hour.

The company in normal times employs about 6,000 men and women. The entire plant was shut down recently.

BACKER PERJURY TRIAL BEGINS NOV. 26

COURT WANTS QUICK ACTION

The case of George Backer, wealthy builder and the first man to be indicted as a result of the Lockwood Legislative Committee's investigation into housing conditions, will go to trial for alleged perjury a week from today. The date was set by Judge Otto A. Rosalsky in Part 4 of General Sessions, after Emory R. Buckner, who is to prosecute, had urged that the trial be marked for Monday. Edmund L. Mooney, counsel for Backer, sought to have the trial put over until Nov. 29 on the ground that he would need all of that time to prepare his case.

The case went before Judge Rosalsky after Judge Mulqueen had placed it on the preferred calendar, and it was before Judge Mulqueen that the arguments of counsel on the question of a quick or a deferred trial took place.

Mr. Mooney insisted that he should have at least ten days in which to properly prepare his data. He said that he did not object to a speedy trial, but he felt that the case against Backer was being "rushed." He pointed out that Backer is putting up a building and said that prospective tenants in the new structure would be unable to get into the premises on time if Backer were compelled to be in court in the capacity of a defendant.

Counsel for the defense said he had hesitated about making his plea for more time because it might be misunderstood. Answering Mr. Mooney, Special Assistant District Attorney Buckner said that there remained only two points in the case to settle.

He said the question was: Did Backer on May 11 lose $15,000 at the race track, or did he give it to two men whom he had described as "Mutt and Jeff"? All of the other questions, as Mr. Buckner saw them, had already been disposed of.

Judge Mulqueen said that he was inclined to have the case go to trial at once. He said there had been too much "frivolity" in connection with the Lockwood Committee's hearing, and he said that he had heard the defendant Backer in his own chambers on the day he gave bail tell a dozen newspaper reporters that he considered his testimony before the legislators as a "joke."

"This must not continue," said Judge Mulqueen; "the hearings of the Lockwood Committee are not a 'joke.'"

DID NEW GOVERNOR MEAN MAYOR HYLAN?

ment must be a government solely in the public interest. For a number of years prior to the war the business men of the country have been withdrawing more and more from public activities. Men of talent were seeking business rather than public activities. The war taught us a lesson of service.

"We are entering upon a new era. It rests with the present generation to decide which it shall be—good or ill. Moral forces are going to make for the betterment of the world and the progress of humanity, and, notwithstanding the present uncertainty of international relations, I believe that the Government will try principles of right and justice.

Too Much Propoganda.

"Those who expect to enjoy the blessings of an ordered government must be willing to serve their Government and to render unselfish public service. I want to say that as Governor of this State I propose to appeal to that spirit for assistance. I propose to appeal to men like those whom I am now addressing to seek those who can render public service, rather than those who are anxious to do so. I intend to give some of you the opportunity of rendering public service.

"Something has been said about propaganda. I think we have too many civic organizations engaged in propaganda, most of which leads to harmful results. The times require something more than advice. We want men who are willing to render service.

"I think that some of the causes of discontent and unrest would be removed by the closer attention of public officials to the business of government, rather than to attempt to govern private business."

The speakers, besides Governor-elect Miller, were Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador, General John J. Pershing and Julius Henry Cohen. Darwin P. Kingsley, President of the Chamber, was toastmaster.

Two Paths Before Nation.

"There are only two possible paths before each nation at a time of world change like this," the Ambassador said. "It can co-operate with its fellows and, maintaining peace and fellowship between itself and them, devote its energies to the solution of its internal problems. Alternatively, it can follow the path that Germany followed in the years before 1914, throw the blame for its internal difficulties upon the other nations of the world and drift toward war which some day will look and will be assumed to be inevitable. I know of no third road which any State can tread."

Asserting that invention was continually reducing the time-size of the world, Sir Auckland asserted that "every day that passes makes the insulation of national thought and the isolation of national activity more truly impossible."

"The world waits for an answer to the question 'Are the British-American contacts to be fair and friendly, even in trade rivalry and trade competition, or are they to be marked by suspicion, political jealousy and seemings to establish exclusive economic spheres?'" the Ambassador said. "If it is to be the first, then the future is bright. There is no problem which in friendly co-operation we cannot solve. If it were to be the second, sadness would possess me. The choice is yours. The British Empire offers America friendship."

MRS. PALMER'S FEET BROKEN IN STRUGGLE

Margaret Creevan, Mrs. Palmer's maid, as to how the intruders had entered the house. The servants denied stories previously circulated that three men came to the outer vestibule door soon after 9 o'clock Monday night, rang the door bell twice, and, when Sazone opened the door, threw a cloth over his head.

Sazone and the maid said they were asleep in their rooms in the basement of the house about 8:30 P. M. when they were aroused by three men, all about 5 feet 7 inches in height and wearing black velour hats, black overcoats, suede gloves with black stripes running down the back, black trousers and shoes.

"They aroused me first," the butler was quoted, "and they seemed to know just where I slept. They made no noise when they entered the house, and I don't know whether they were hiding up stairs when Mrs. Palmer went out two hours before with Mrs. Drew. I was frightened, and asked them how they got in and whom they wanted, and one of the men, who spoke with a slight French accent, told me not to ask questions, but to do as I was told.

"While he was talking the other two men bound a towel around my eyes, and when I attempted to prevent them from doing so, they struck me. Then they bound my hands at the wrists and put a gag in my mouth. When they had finished they went to the maid's room and woke her. They blindfolded her also, and bound her wrists, and then we were led to a room on the top floor, boys' room occupied by Mrs. Palmer, where they placed us in closets.

In Closets for Hours.

"The maid was placed in a closet on the door of which was a lock, and after she was locked in they put me in another closet and fastened the closet by means of a rope, which they wound around the knob and a hook on the outside. We remained that way for hours, and although we heard the men at times for the rest of the night we did not know what took place until soon after 10 o'clock the next morning, when I managed to force the door of the closet in which they put me, and found Mrs. Palmer, blindfolded, gagged and bound in the bathroom on the same floor."

The maid verified Sazone's story regarding the appearance of the men in the basement of the house while she and the butler were asleep, and of the blindfolding, gagging and binding them.

The maid's story, it was said, was in harmony with her original statement to the detectives soon after the robbery was reported.

The detectives then resumed their questioning of Mrs. Palmer. She said that when she closed the front vestibule door on her arrival home she turned on the electric light in the hall. She noticed nothing unusual and hurried upstairs to her room on the second floor. When she turned on the electric light over her dresser, she said, she noticed that the covering on her bed had been disturbed.

She had removed her opera cloak and thrown it across a chair and was about to remove the necklace and the rest of her jewelry when she decided to call her maid for an explanation of the disturbed bed.

As she stepped out into the hall, she said, she was confronted by three men, all of whom appeared to be about 35 years old.

"Who are you, and what are you doing in my home?" Mrs. Palmer inquired of the men.

"Don't become excited, lady," Mrs. Palmer quoted one of the men, who spoke with a slight French accent, as saying. "We are Central Office detectives. We were called to this house several hours ago by your servants, who reported that you had been robbed. We waited for you to return."

Mrs. Palmer said that two of the men drew from the pockets of their overcoats gold badges, and said "This is our authority."

Fell Down the Stairs.

Instead of becoming assured Mrs. Palmer said she suspected the men were robbers, and ran toward the stairway leading to the lower floor. She stumbled at the top step, she said, and fell the whole flight of stairs. She momentarily lost consciousness, and when she opened her eyes again, one of the men tore her necklace from its clasp, and stuffed it in his overcoat pocket. Another of the men took the diamond studded hairpins from her hair, and when she started to scream, she said, the third man stuffed a gag into her mouth.

"They took all my jewelry from me," Mrs. Palmer told the detectives, "before one of them lifted me in his arms and carried me to the bathroom on the top floor. They were very rough at first because I continued in my effort to resist them. I was placed in a chair, and although I complained that I though my feet were broken in the fall, the man who spoke with the French accent commanded the man who carried me to bind my feet at the ankles and also to bind my arms at the wrists.

"I was helpless," she continued, "and though I moaned in pain, they paid no attention to me for more than an hour. It was around 1 o'clock when I arrived home, but it was long after 2 o'clock before the man who spoke with the French accent again appeared at the door of the bathroom.

"He instructed one of the other men to stand guard over me, and then wanted to know if he could make things a little more comfortable for me. I motioned to the gag in my mouth, and he laughingly said he would remove it if I promised not to scream or make a noise. I nodded in the affirmative, and he removed the gag.

"I said my back hurt me as well as my feet, and he got one of the pillows from my bed, which he placed behind me rather affectionately. Before his return I heard him and the other two men prowling about my home. They opened the doors of every room and closet, and I realized they were going to rob me of everything I had.

"After the man placed the pillow behind my back he suddenly said to me, 'Where is the diamond dog collar?' I told him I knew nothing about a diamond dog collar, and he replied, 'Oh, yes you do; you have a beautiful diamond dog collar that I'm going to get before I leave this house. You will not be released until I get it, and we're going to keep you and the servants bound for hours.'

Mrs. Palmer said she commented on the intruder's French accent and asked him if he was a ve

HARDING SAILS FOR CANAL ZONE

President-Elect Gets Noisy Farewell as Ship Slides Down Mississippi to Gulf.

HE WON'T MEET OBREGON

Speaking in New Orleans, He Urges America to Solve Her Own Momentous Problems First.

ON BOARD STEAMSHIP PARISMINA (Friday), Nov. 19 (By Wireless to The Associated Press).—Carrying President-Elect Harding on his vacation voyage to the Canal Zone, the steamship Parismina headed out into the Gulf of Mexico today on a straight course for Cristobal, where the vessel is due Tuesday.

It was the beginning of the first real rest Senator Harding has had since his nomination for the Presidency in June. He will take it easy about the cabin and deck, reading and lounging in the mild Gulf breezes.

At daybreak this morning members of the Harding party will have their first glimpse of the sea, night having overtaken the Parismina while making her way southward yesterday from New Orleans through the mouth of the Mississippi. A light fog hung over the lower channel, but Captain Holmes decided that it was not dangerous and the vessel passed out to sea without incident.

Thousands Cheer at the Pier.

Special to The New York Times.

ON BOARD THE S. S. PARISMINA, Nov. 18 (via New Orleans).—Continuous din of whistles from gayly decorated ships greeted President-elect Harding, on board the Parismina, late this afternoon as he sailed down the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico on his way to Panama. Mr. Harding was more than an hour late in sailing, and the docks were lined with thousands anxious to get a glimpse of Mr. and Mrs. Harding, and they gave the party a noisy send-off.

The Parismina is the pride of the United Fruit Company's fleet sailing from New Orleans. She has been entirely renovated since passage was engaged for the President-elect's party, and, with a new coat of white paint and freshly holystoned decks, she is spic and span. Senator and Mrs. Harding occupy a suite on the port side of the promenade deck, and the Harding party makes up about half the passenger list.

Wants Home Problems Met First.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 18.—President-elect Harding in an address here today declared that by solving her momentous problems at home first America would be in a better position to be of service to the world and civilization. He asked for sober thinking and abiding faith in the Republic during the period of reconstruction, and predicted that, while there would be reverses and disappointments, they would be overcome.

The President-elect was in New Orleans for about five hours. He arrived at 11 o'clock in the morning, and at 4 o'clock boarded the steamship Parismina. Soon afterward the Parismina set out for Cristobal—a four-day run.

Shortly before the President-elect sailed it was announced that he could not accept General Obregon's invitation to visit Mexico on his return from Panama. The reason given in the informal announcement was that after communication with officials of the United Fruit Company, it was not found possible to touch at a Mexican port and land the President-elect in Norfolk, Va. Dec. 5 to keep his engagement to speak at the Elks Home at Bedford, Va.

Senator Harding received a warm greeting whenever he appeared on the streets of New Orleans. The sidewalks were lined with cheering people endeavoring to get a glimpse of the President-elect and Mrs. Harding who drove through the streets in an automobile. In response to demands from civic bodies, Senator Harding consented to speak to several thousand people at the City Hall steps this morning.

"What this country needs," he said, "is a sound business policy. Our finances must be on a sound and stable basis, and God helping me, I am going to put them there."

This declaration was greeted with cheers, and the President-elect's promise to restore a protective tariff also found favor with many in the crowd.

"I think I know what is in your hearts, my countrymen," Senator Harding added. "You are glad that a party has come into power that thinks of our own country."

In his prepared address at the Association of Commerce luncheon at the Hotel Grunewald Senator Harding discussed reconstruction problems and urged the necessity of America attending to her own problems.

Text of President-elect's Speech.

Senator Harding's speech in full follows:

"Gentlemen of the Association of Commerce, it is most gratifying to hear your cordial greeting. It is most pleasing to come. It is better to know you, and it is a wonderful thing to know this America of ours. Ours is a physically incomparable land; we are so vast and varied that few of us have any conception of our limitless possibilities. It is a fine thing for those who are called to temporary responsibility to have some realization of our vast areas and our varied conditions and changing methods and somehow sense the concord of union and nationality which is the reflex of a new American soul.

"Frankly, I came South, little realizing the popular interest in my travels, and bent simply on recreation. Instead I have found new faith and inspiration.

"There is too much hospitality for rest, but the popular interest is the finest proof in the world of that participation of the people in government which will hold it abidingly their very own.

"Nobody can ever make me believe the heart of America is not everlastingly right. It is the same heart North and South and East and West.

"I believe the American people have come to realize that we must face momentous problems—world problems, but more particularly our own problems—and must face them with resolute courage and practical wisdom and patriotic determination.

"There must be no reason for pause, no excuse for despair, nor place for pessimism. If we are effective in solving our problems at home, we shall be the better able to help solve those of the world as befits our part in modern civilization.

"The world has never witnessed such an upheaval as that which came with the great war. Its civilization was never so sorely tried. Inevitably there must be reconstruction. Unavoidably there will be readjustment. And the old order will never return, the incalculable sacrifice would be vain, if the old order were even sought. It will never come again. But there must come stability and dependability. We must put aside the debris of war and continue to build on solid foundations. We cannot escape all the consequences of fevered war or the unsettled conditions of its aftermath.

Reverses Will Be Overcome.

"There are sure to be reverses. There will be endless discouragement, but a confident America will face them all with good courage. And we will win. We may slow up a bit, now, and then, we may have to bend our backs to new burdens, surely we are going to be called upon—nationally, collectively and individually—to renounce extravagances and learn anew the old lessons of thrift and providence. It will add to our power and emphasize our stability if we become a simple living people once more. It will add to the sum total of our happiness.

"The big thing for all America to realize now and always is the dignity of productive labor. No matter how humble, the producers are the makers of the essentials of civilization, and we must, each and all of us, accept and discharge our duty of producing for the world or of ministering to the needs or comforts or progress of mankind.

"There are certain fundamentals which are everlasting. Neither our own nor the world's salvation is to be worked out through any patent nostrum, through any miracle of statesmanship, through any government panacea. Government is but the agency to administer the collective, organized public service. Sanity, clear thinking, commonsense, honesty, co-operation in official circles—in executive and legislative departments—will help, and help mightily, and bring us closer together and will promote our understanding, but government alone will not effect the solution, the great task is that of the American people themselves. It is for them, under government leadership, to meet the great test.

"Here is a vast continent, so favored by God and so blessed by His infinite bounty that the discovering Spaniard stood only at the gateway and marveled, without ever dreaming of the reality. Ours are millions of broad acres eager to respond to man's cultivating touch. We have an empire of millions more which are awaiting reclamation. We have not half revealed our mines nor measured our water powers. We are unmatched in genius and unexcelled in industry. We are progressive in education, we are free in religion, and mean to stay free, and mean ever to be free in press and speech. We have more than the beginning of an adequate transport system, we are awakened to the possibilities of inland waterways, and tardily alert to the imperative need of a merchant marine, to widening commerce, world influence and national safety.

"We have been talking about the new South for a score of years and more. It is new in spirit, new in its developments. I would like to see it new in realization. I would like to acclaim a Southland with added good fortune and greater self-reliance through diversified agriculture. And I would like to see a Southland aflame with industry. With transportation ever a growing problem, this land of raw materials ought to manufacture and locate its factories by mine and farm and orchard. There will be no jealousy in the North because your greater glory will be America's greater glory.

Wants Concord on This Hemisphere.

"Here we are today at one of the great gateways of Latin America. Somehow I feel that the Western Hemisphere is our special field of influence and trade. Commerce marks the highway of friendships as well as rivalry. Our trade routes by sea to the South ought to be as dependable as our rail routes at home, and there ought to be significant and reassuring comity and concord among Americans, South, Central and North. Bind our friendship with the ties of trade and we shall make it indissoluble.

"We have the ships now, we have the commercial foundations; our future lies in policies and practices. We must buy as well as sell, to be sure, but we need the expanding trade policy, its efficient agents in salesmen and credits, and the simple, practical understanding that commerce is the life blood of material existence, that the barterers of commerce are the ambassadors of developing civilization, that the paths of trade are the avenues of exchanging ideas and art and education, and no nation in the world ever has been or ever will be eminent in influence until it establishes its eminence in commerce.

"Our great assurance at home lies in a virile, intelligent, resolute people, in a land unravaged by war, at enmity with no people, envying none, coveting nothing, seeking no territory, striving for no glories which do not become a righteous nation. We have our own treasure house of men and materials, and we have the comforting consciousness that we have established the sanest system of popular government in the world and we have seen the stars of many a new republic set aglow to glorify the American example.

"This Republic cannot, will not, fail, if each of us but does his part. It is just as important to play one's part in peace as it is to sacrifice and serve in war. If we but work and use thriftily and seek that understanding which reveals mutuality of interest, no difficulties can long abide. We can't hope for war activities and excesses and prewar costs, but we can give and take, and find the rational readjustment. Such a solution cannot come out of the greedy thoughts of the profiteer or the revolutionary agitation of those who would destroy. These are but surface disturbances. We choose the deep and ever onward currents of normal America for the course of the Republic.

"With 100 per cent. production and minimized waste, we may make the reconstruction, and establish a sure footing. There has been a wild contemplation of earnings—whether in wages or dividends—in terms of dollars rather than in terms of purchasing power. We must be more concerned with the substance in reward of activity than in its coin measurement. And our concern must be in a dependable prosperity which is righteously shared.

"The tide of good fortune ever will flood and ebb, which is God's own way of teaching us the changing tides, and greed must not expect to ride exclusive at the flood, and expect contentment to recede alone.

Urges Justice for Toilers.

"In a land of opportunity with standards of wage and living the best in the world I want to go on in good conscience until we evolve the ideal relationship where men may labor with a soul in their tasks, just as management knows it is to be rewarded and genius is confident in its triumphs. There is no substitute for the reward of merit, there can never be, but in the scales of justice, we must see that reward balances evenly with merit. Then class will be banished with caste, though there will continue to be varying degrees of inspiring success, and varied measurements of wealth as there must be unless inspiration is to die and the human procession is to halt in hopeless paralysis.

"No law can alter nature or change her varying moods. We haven't yet learned to combat destructive weather and the law of supply and demand is eternal, but we may soften their rigors and minimize their penalties. We want good fortune a common possession in America. We want the cotton grower of the South to have his becoming reward with the wool grower and the wheat farmer of the North. We want Southern factories to be attuned to the music of the mills of the North. We want your ports to send their cargoes under the American flag to bear both the message of peace and good will to all the marts of the earth. There is no sectionalism in righteous American ambitions, I could heartily say East and West as North and South. It is this wonderful and incomparable United States of America which sets our hearts aglow with becoming aspirations and patriotic love—the America of the Constitution, free and confident of the morrow."

Keeps Many Engagements.

Until he boarded the Parismina, Senator Harding's time was kept full with speaking engagements and receptions. When his special train was ferried over the Mississippi to Baton Rouge this morning there was a crowd of several thousand people and an infantry battalion of the Louisiana State Guard drawn up on the station platform. Governor Parker and a Reception Committee of New Orleans citizens joined the train at this point. Senator Harding said a few words from the rear platform of his train to the crowd.

Senator Harding denied today that any date had been set for a conference with Elihu Root upon his return to Marion. This denial was prompted by an article by David Lawrence, which asserted that Mr. Root had been invited to Marion for Dec. 10 to discuss foreign affairs. It was said further that no appointments had been made with any of the men and women active in the discussion of international relations whom the President-elect intends inviting to Marion for conferences in an endeavor to arrive at some agreement upon the League of Nations question. Mr. Root's name, it is known, is on the list of those whom the President-elect wishes to consult.

HARDING GREETS MINERS.

Letter to Congress in Denver Says America Is "Sound and Secure."

DENVER, Col., Nov. 18.—Despite a "trying period in which national policy and aspiration have been misinterpreted and misjudged," the United States is "sound and secure" and the "world's mainstay and hope," President-elect Warren G. Harding declared to Bulkeley Wells of Denver, President of the American Mining Congress, in a letter which was read tonight at the annual convention of the congress.

He also declared that he was anxious to take counsel with such men as would attend the congress in outlining the policies of his administration. Senator Harding's letter follows:

Hon. Bulkeley Wells, President American Mining Congress; Denver, Col.

My dear Wells—I have to thank you for your invitation to the twenty-third annual convention of the American Mining Congress and to express my regrets that it will be impossible for me to accept. My regrets are the more keen because your meeting will bring together a body of men with which I am anxious to take counsel in outlining the policies of the next administration. I am aware of the difficulties that confront the mining industry of the country, and would be glad of the opportunity to familiarize myself with some of the details.

It is my hope and belief that we will presently be brought to realize that the tendency to inaction and industrial depression is only momentary. Not only is our own country sound and secure, but it is the world's mainstay and hope. We have been through a trying period, in which national policy and aspiration have been misinterpreted and misjudged. We have now had a convincing demonstration of the real attitude of the American people, and it will not fail to reassure both our own people and the rest of the world, which so greatly needs our steadfast support and aid.

A mighty effort will be required of us to meet the demands that a recovering world will impose. In no direction will these demands be more pressing than in supplying those necessaries of life and reconstruction that must come from the richness of America's mines. With wisdom and deliberation, such as we hope to secure by dint of enlisting the aid of such expert authorities as your own organization represents, I believe we shall place our country and its industry once more on the high road of prosperity and success. To that end you may be assured that every energy and effort of the new administration will be directed.

Please be good enough to convey to the congress and all its members the assurance of my pleasure in receiving your invitation and of my wish to serve you, in common with every other worthy American interest. Most sincerely yours,

(Signed) WARREN G. HARDING.

ARMENIAN BORDERS DECIDED BY WILSON

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—President Wilson is understood to have reached his conclusions as to where the boundaries of Armenia should be placed and his decision is ready for transmission to the Supreme Council at Paris, which will communicate it to the signatories of the Turkish treaty.

Article 89 of that treaty provides that "Turkey and Armenia, as well as the other high contracting parties, agree to submit to the arbitration of the President of the United States the question of frontier to be fixed between Turkey and Armenia in the Vilayets of Erzerum, Trebizond, Van and Bitlis, and to accept his decision thereupon, as well as any stipulations he may prescribe as to access for Armenia to the sea, and as to the demilitarization of any portion of Turkish territory adjacent to such frontier."

It is regarded as problematical whether the bounary as defined by President Wilson will be applied in the near future on account of the interference with the treaty plans by the Nationalist movement in Turkey in Asia and failure of the Allies so far to suppress it.

The character of the boundary settlement recommended by the President will probably not be disclosed until after his decision has been communicated to the Supreme Council.

BURNING OF SING SING PLOTTED BY FOUR 'REDS'

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, Nov. 18.—Sixteen unruly prisoners, including four Russian "Reds" who plotted to fire Sing Sing, were taken in irons today to Clinton prison at Dannemora, where they will be subjected to more rigid discipline.

Major Lewis E. Lawes, the Warden, received word that the four "Reds" were plotting to set fire to one of the factories. All four were seized and placed in solitary confinement, while search was made of their cells.

In the cell of "Nick" Carlo, a Russian agitator, were found two fuses he had made of material used in one of the prison factories. They were so constructed that when lighted it would burn slowly, Carlo evidently desiring time enough to get away unobserved when the fire started.

LEAGUE ONLY HOPE, DECLARES FINANCIER

Former British Minister McKenna Says It Is Needed to Prevent Bankruptcy.

ARMAMENT RACE CRUSHING

Civilization Cannot Exist Under Such Burdens as the Failure of the League Would Entail.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Reginald McKenna, formerly Chancellor of the Exchequer and the late Sir Edward Holden's successor in the managing directorship of one of the most important British banking companies, made an interesting statement on international finance in a speech he delivered last night at Manchester University.

Speaking not as a politician, but as a banker, Mr. McKenna concluded that the only thing that could save the world from financial bankruptcy was the League of Nations. Mr. McKenna outlined the meaning of exchange and discussed the part played by gold, enumerating factors governing exchange between any two countries.

He came to the conclusion that the League of Nations, with its promise of peace and greatly reduced expenditure on armaments, offered the only hope of stable exchange, expanding and prosperous international trade, and complete recovery from the ravages of war.

"In the present state of the world," said Mr. McKenna, "I would hazard the opinion that in almost every country excessive Government expenditure is the main factor in forcing up prices. Many States are compelled by insufficiency of their revenues to borrow, and in their case harm is done which is apparent to every one. But then, when Governments meet their expenditure, however great it may be, by taxation there is a current belief that the whole duty of man has been fulfilled. I venture, however, to express the opinion that this belief is a profound delusion. Very heavy taxation will, I maintain, affect production injuriously, reduce purchasing power and raise the velocity of expenditure, and for all three reasons will tend to drive up prices."

Says Taxes Restrict Enterprise.

The causes which produced these results were partly moral and partly economic, he said. It was indisputable that heavy taxation restricted enterprise. The stimulus which urged men to venture upon new developments was in large measure the hope of additional profit. They could not risk their capital if, in the event of their labors proving successful, nearly the whole of the reward was to be taken from them.

Again, in progressive undertakings, a considerable part of the profits every year was kept in the business. The savings of one year became the capital in the next. Additional capital was essential to development, and there was no means of obtaining it except from the savings of the community. Heavy taxation which impounded these savings deprived commerce and industry of the essential condition of growth.

Mr. McKenna said in conclusion:

"We have seen that international exchange is normally governed by the ratio of price levels in different countries, and that prices vary with factors under the control both of the individual citizens and of the Government. We have seen that government expenditure is the cause of rising prices and works with double effect when the expenditure is met in borrowed money. If we wish to check the rise in prices and bring about a condition of stable exchanges, government expenditure in all countries must be reduced. Our remedy should be one which assists the governments to economize.

Calls League World's Last Hope.

"Inefficiency, want of method, weak and foolish policy may account for a good deal of extravagance, but they will not account for everything. All over the world Governments are spending millions on protecting their countries from what they believe to be real dangers which threaten them. It may be impossible to cure inefficiency, want of method and weak and foolish policy, but Governments can be relieved from the terror of foreign menace. The whole world is in a condition of instability, which in some countries has developed into violence and disruption. The external dangers are not fantastic in the present circumstances. They are real. We must look either to constant meetings between all the powers to settle inevitable and innumerable disputes which arise on every side, or we must live in a state of perpetual war.

"The one alternative is the League of Nations. The other is the huge machinery of armaments, expenditure on which is no longer merely exhausting the world but actually destroying it. The choice before it lies plain. One or the other we must have as a means of quieting the world's disorders. The old way of victory to the strongest, measured in terms of physical force, or the new way of arbitration along the healing path of mutual adjustment and consent. If ever a time could come when the tragic futility of war stood finally exposed before a disillusioned world, that time has come now. If we in our generation fail to clutch at the one great hope which the League of Nations offers, a hope which, once realized would transform the future of the world, we shall have failed to learn the lesson which long years of sacrifice and suffering have written so plainly across the desolate countries of Europe."

BOAR ATTACKS SENTRY; THEN GARRISON DINES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—At the gates of the little fortified town of Mezières in the Ardennes, which was one of the first places entered by American troops after the armistice, a fight took place two days ago which is probably unique in history. It was between a big wild boar and the bayonet of a poilu. The end of the history was that the garrison had a splendid boar for supper.

The boar had been hunted out of the forest and stretching away across the country struck the main road into Mezières. It was growing dusk at the time and he trotted along it till he was challenged by the sentry at the gate. Who began the fight isn't clear, but the poilu's version is that the boar charged him. His bayonet work was good.

He parried, thrust and pricked his adversary in the neck. The boar charged as if he had to carry the citadel, but the poilu, one of the Ninety-first Regiment, stood his ground. He dodged as cleverly as a matador faced by a charging bull in the arena and drove his bayonet home to the heart behind the shoulder.

This finished the fight for the cheering corporal's guard who had been watching for the sequel of a supper.

SEEKS TRUANT OF 14; FINDS HER MARRIED

Puzzled Officer Tells Supervisor, Who Has Bride Haled to Court in Test Case.

JUDGE IS SYMPATHETIC

Arrest Doesn't Please Him, and He Postpones Decision to Ponder the Matter.

The story of how Rose De Stephano, who is only 14 years old but the wife of John De Stephano, 19, a piano maker, was snatched away from cooking dinner to answer a charge of truancy, came out, yesterday, before Magistrate Charles N. Harris in the Municipal Term Court, Municipal Building.

Mrs. de Stephano, exceedingly trim in a black fur coat and a rakish toque, was there on a warrant charging violation of Section 601 of the Compulsory Education law, which requires all persons under 18 years of age to go to high school, if they haven't had the benefits of that boon. Joseph L. Coppinger, Supervisor of Attendance of the Board of Education, was the complainant. He wanted to make a test case of it so he would know what to do next time he found a married New Yorker playing "nookey."

According to the testimony, Anthony De Vota, truant officer, went to the De Stephano home at 255 East Thirteenth Street late on the afternoon of Nov. 15, determined to find out why it was that Principal Powers of Public School 19 had lately missed the face of Rose Sattel at morning "assembly."

De Vota knocked at the door, and he heard the blithe song of Rose, accompanied by the rattle of kitchen utensils. Then the door opened and Rose, in a bungalow apron, demanded to know what was wanted.

"I'm a truant officer," said De Vota, "and I want to know why you don't go to school any more."

"Oh, that's good," responded Rose, as she rippled into laughter. "Why, I'm married now. My name's Mrs. De Stephano. It was destiny. I loved John and he loved me, so we eloped to Coney Island and came back to City Hall and were married. See the ring?"

De Vota was stumped. He never had a "truant" give that excuse before. So he went away, shaking his head, muttering that he would have to take advice on the matter. He did so and was told that the law's the law, in spite of Counselor Cupid.

Hence, Rose was in court yesterday a trifle worried as to whether she would get away in time to get John's dinner—piano makers who are young usually have great appetites, she said.

Magistrate Harris listened with great interest to what both sides had to say. He indicated that he didn't altogether like the idea of Manhattan's young married women being exposed to arrest for not going to school—in cases where they had to quit and get out to help "the folks," especially, and so he said he would adjourn the case until Dec. 2, taking some advice himself in the meantime.

Whereupon John De Stephano, who was there, smiled through his gloom, and he and Rose went home to dinner.

LEAGUE TO USE FORCE OF TROOPS

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

wegian explorer, on the work that has been done for the war prisoners in Russia. He told a moving story of the sufferings of these men of whom there had been 300,000 in Russia when the work of repatriation was begun. Nearly 200,000, said Dr. Nansen, had got back to their homes.

He paid a tribute to the work of the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. in helping and said that both the German and Russian Governments had given the fullest co-operation.

In the election of six Vice Presidents by the Assembly, Viscount Ishii of Japan received the highest number of votes, the figures being thirty-two out of thirty-nine. Karwenbeek of Holland, Pueyrredon of Argentine, Benes of Czechoslovakia, Foster of Canada and Octavio of Brazil were the others elected. This result, with that of the election of commission chairmen yesterday, gives the Latin races seven out of thirteen chief officers of the Assembly who, with Hymans as President, will act as a steering committee.

Assembly Completes Organization.

GENEVA, Nov. 18 (Associated Press).—In a somewhat agitated session today the League of Nations Assembly completed its organization by the election of six Vice Presidents, who, with the six Chairmen of the committees elected yesterday, form a sort of Executive Committee of the Assembly.

The non-European nations, for whom much solicitude was shown yesterday, had no complaint to make, as they obtained four Vice Presidents instead of the three for which they had asked. These were Viscount Ishii of Japan; Honorio Pueyrredon, Argentina; Sir George E. Foster, Canada, and Rodrigo Octavio, Brazil. The other Vice Presidents are H. A. van Karnabeek of Holland and Dr. Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia.

One result of the first ballot for Vice Presidents was a tie between Rodrigo Octavio, the Brazilian Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and Dr. Gastos da Cunha, the Brazilian Ambassador to France, for the sixth office of that kind. While the Assembly was discussing the proposed vote for the remaining Vice President, an animated discussion prodidate insisting that he be allowed to withdraw in favor of the other. A second ballot was taken, resulting in Octavio's election.

As an act of courtesy, Giuseppe Motta, President of the Swiss Confederation, who had delivered the address of welcome, was elected Honorary President of the Assembly. The whole Assembly rose and applauded the announcement of President Motta's election.

The recipient of the demonstration thanked the Assembly and asked that the honor should not be considered as relieving him of any of his work as a delegate on the same plane as the other delegates.

Picturesque features of the session were furnished by Baron Hayashi, head of the Japanese delegation; Dr. Fridtjof Nansen of Norway, Gustave Ador, ex-President of Switzerland, and the two leading members of the Brazilian delegation.

Baron Hayashi, usually an impassive observer of the proceedings, attracted attention when he arose to ask the delegates to vote for Viscount Ishii, Japanese Ambassador to France, if Japan was to have a Vice President.

The whole assembly looked on with great interest when, after M. Ador, who is also an ex-President of the International Red Cross, had graciously replied to remarks by Dr. Nansen regarding the Red Cross. The explorer rushed down a side aisle with characteristically quick action to grasp M. Ador's hand in a shake so warm and real that the sentiment was communicated to the spectators.

Deny Compact to Admit Germany.

Rumors which had been current all the week that certain combinations had been formed to carry prearranged programs through the Assembly were denied today from two sources. M. Pueyrredon, for the Argentine delegation, said that it was absolutely untrue, so far as Argentina was concerned, that South American republics were in an understanding with other ex-neutrals to force the admission of Germany into the League.

M. Pueyrredon declared that it was for the United States to take the initiative whenever that country might be ready to consider entering the League. When he had proposed that a formula should be found to permit the entry of the United States, he meant that the League should keep the way open so that when the United States was ready finally to declare its attitude toward the League there would be no obstacle of the League's making to prevent it.

The British dominions representatives made it clear that they were here to represent their particular dominions without reference to sister dominions or the mother country.

All the delegates appear to be satisfied with the progress made in the necessary preliminary proceedings, the work having been accomplished with a minimum of friction, and they expect the final results to satisfy all the friends of the League.

Lord Robert Cecil and Hjalmar Branting, at the first meeting of the Committee on Disarmament, Economic Blockade and Mandates today, put through a motion that the session of the committee tomorrow would be open to the public, thus profiting by the latitude left by the Assembly for the holding of committee deliberations behind closed doors or not. Much curiosity is shown as to whether the example will be followed by other committees.

Under some circumstances the League might invite Poland to become the military defender of Danzig, that nation has been informed by the Council of the League. It was announced that the Council had approved the Constitution of Danzig as a free city under guarantee of the League, as previously drafted, with some modifications, Poland being informed that while it is impossible to accord her the exclusive right of the military defense of Danzig, circumstances might arise under which the League might invite Poland to undertake the city's defense.

Military commissions will be instructed to examine the technical conditions involved in Danzig's defense and report to the League.

H. A. L. Fisher of the British delegation says that perfect accord had prevailed between France and Great Britain in reaching decisions.

Doherty Misquoted on Wilson.

It developed that C. J. Doherty, Canadian Minister of Justice, one of the most active of the delegates to the Assembly, had become a victim of one of the high-speed translations made during the Assembly's proceedings, which sometimes become mistranslations. The translator made him say that Canada would abstain from voting on the message of sympathy offered in the Assembly for transmission to President Wilson. Mr. Doherty, in even better French than the translator's, at once corrected the mistake, but the correction got lost in the confusion of the first session and the incorrect version of the delegate's remarks became widespread.

In spite of the thrusts which had been directed at them yesterday by Delegate Millen of Australia for their lack of promptness, the delegates were again tardy in assembling today, less than half of their number being present at the opening hour. These were collected in groups about the hall, commenting animatedly on yesterday's committee elections, in which the Latin countries captured nine out of the total of twelve Chair men and Vice Chairmen.

The Secretariat of the Assembly was notified that Prince Arfa-ed-Dowleh, ceeded at the Brazilian bench, each canhead of the Persian delegation to the Assembly, had met a thrilling adventure with a tragic end for his secretary, while the delegation was on its way to Geneva from Teheran. Between Ispahan and Shiras the Prince was captured by a robber band. The robbers seized his papers and killed his secretary. The Prince made his escape, and the authorities eventually captured the band and restored the papers. The Prince is continuing his journey and sent word that he hoped to arrive in Geneva shortly.

GERMANS IN DOUBT ON LEAGUE

But Foreign Envoys in Berlin See Chance for Admission.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—Though German statesmen seem very pessimistic regarding Germany's chances of admission to the League of Nations at the present Assembly session, foreign diplomats in Berlin are more hopeful.

A representative of one of the allied countries intimated to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that he was sure most of the nations represented at Geneva would favor Germany's admission. A Scandinavian diplomat expressed himself as equally optimistic.

Germany is represented at Geneva by Professor Herbert Kraus, an expert on international law, who married an American, Miss Wise, of Virginia descent. Herr Kraus and his associate, Herr Schwarz, must necessarily content themselves with observing the proceedings. Both are members of the German organization favoring the League, the President of which is Count von Bernstorff, who may follow them to Geneva within a few days.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The following comment on America and the League of Nations is published tonight in the Journal des Débats from a correspondent at Geneva:

"Here every one has been curiously struck by the fact that, though America is not officially represented, there are, nevertheless, about thirty American journalists, some of them sent expressly from the other side of the Atlantic, who show an enormous amount of activity compared to the relatively feeble contingents of French and British newspaper men."

RILEY SEIZES FILES OF BURNS COAL CO.

SMALL DEALERS COMPLAIN

Tell Ross They Must Pay $18 and $19 a Ton—Emergency Supplies Promised.

Federal District Attorney Leroy W. Ross of Brooklyn said yesterday that one indictment at least was likely to result from his investigation of the business methods of retail coal dealers and middlemen in Brooklyn.

Some small dealers, who sold in 100-pound lots, told him, he said, that they had been compelled to pay as high as $18 and $19 a ton for their own supplies.

The Federal investigation in Brooklyn is following different lines from that taken by Kings County District Attorney Lewis. Mr. Lewis found the Brooklyn dealers generally guiltless and reported the profiteering at the mines, urging Attorney General Palmer to prosecute the big men of the business for keeping up prices. Mr. Lewis joined Senator Calder in denouncing the Department of Justice for alleged inaction against large offenders.

Armin W. Riley, head of the Federal "Flying Squadron," yesterday obtained the books of the Burns Brothers Coal Company, the largest retailers in the city, under subpoena, alleging that this concern and others had refused to submit to a full examination of the books. Officials of the firm assert that they allowed full inspection of their books by members of the "Flying Squadron," but that it was sought to induce them to act as detectives and furnish information against other dealers. This, they allege, was refused.

Mr. Riley said that the firm had refused to give his agents information regarding the price they paid for coal and the sources from which they obtained it. The seized books and files will be turned over to the Federal Grand Jury.

Although emergency coal was not on sale generally over the city yesterday, as was predicted, Health Commissioner Copeland said that he had been assured that coal would be on sale at 75 cents a hundred pounds at each of the following yards:

West side: Borns Brothers, 133d Street and North River; Webster & McLoughlin, same location; Farrell Coal Company, 129th Street and Broadway; Farrell Coal Company, Forty-ninth Street and North River; Stokes Coal Company, Thirty-fourth Street and Ninth Avenue; Farrell Coal Company, Thirteenth Street and Ninth Avenue; Farrell Coal Company, foot of Barrow Street.

East side: Burns Brothers, Delancey Street and East River; Sinram Brothers, Fifth Street and East River; Stokes Coal Company, Fourteenth Street and East River; Farrell Coal Company, Thirty-seventh Street and East River; Burns Brothers, Sixty-third Street and East River; Stokes Coal Company, Eigthy-second Street and East River; Farrell Coal Company, Ninety-fourth Street and East River; Burns Brothers, 119th Street and East River.

Brooklyn: Senker Brothers, Bath Beach; Scranton and Lehigh Coal Company, Vanderveer Park; Rubel Brothers, East New York; F. E. Armstrong & Co., Richmond Hill.

MOVE TO CONVERT JEWS TO JUDAISM LAUNCHED

Committee Organized to Oppose Alleged Proselytizing by Christian Churches.

One hundred of New York's leading Jewish residents organized themselves yesterday into a committee to combat evangelization of Jews by raising a fund to "convert Jews to Judaism." At a meeting at the Hotel Biltmore of rabbis, Presidents and heads of Sisterhoods of local congregations, under the auspices of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations—a national Jewish religious organizations which is conducting a country-wide campaign for $3,500,000 to carry on a ten-year program of education and propaganda, plans were completed to co-operate with the national campaign and thereby offer a direct reply to efforts to convert Jews to Christianity. The committee is headed by Daniel P. Hays. A huge mass meeting will shortly be held here under the auspices of the committee.

The New York Committee will endeavor to obtain annual memberships and pledges of support from all the Jewish congregations of New York. These funds will be used principally to carry out a school extension program that will bring Judaism to Jews on farms, in rural districts and in congested cities. Part of the fund will be used for the creation of a pension fund for reform and orthodox rabbis, the support of Hebrew Union College for rabbis at Cincinnati and the establishment of a synagogue free building loan fund.

In his address Mr. Hays said: "We are going to fight this attempt to win Jews from Judaism by making better Jews of them. Our own method will be to raise $5,500,000 for a ten-year program of education and propaganda. Rather than establish missions to convert Christian children to Judaism, we aim to make Jews more firmly Jewish—and thereby answer those who challenge our belief."

The committee also voted to contribute $100,000 in ten annual payments to the rabbis' pension fund, thereby matching the late Jacob H. Schiff, who originated the fund with a $100,000 contribution. Ben Altheimer was elected Treasurer of the local campaign, succeeding Mr. Schiff.

Among those who spoke were Rabbis Samuel Schulman, Rudolph Grossman, Benjamin A. Titner, Isaac Landman and Nathan Stern and Mr. A. Maurice Magner.

Mrs. Lydig's Chauffeur Exonerated After Coroner's Hearing.

BEDFORD, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Mrs. R. De Acosta Lydig, prominent socially in New York, was a passenger in her automobile last night when it struck and killed Casper Reyer, 50 years old, caretaker of the Baylis estate at Bedford. The accident occurred in front of the caretaker's house. Leon Bellice, who has been in Mrs. Lydig's service for fifteen years, was chauffeur of the car. Mrs. Lydig is living on the Clyde Fitch estate at Katonah. Dr. E. B. Coopernail of Bedford said that Reyer had died instantly from a fracture of the skull.

Coroner William W. Wills of Chappaqua made an investigation today and exonerated the chauffeur.

DR. FINLEY RESIGNS AS COMMISSIONER

Will Leave State Educational Post to Join the Staff of The New York Times.

NEW FIELD HIS FIRST CHOICE

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 18.—Dr. John H. Finley, Commissioner of Education of the State of New York, today presented his resignation to the Board of Regents, which accepted it with expressions of regret. The resignation will take effect Jan. 1 or as soon thereafter as he can be relieved. The announcement was made that he would enter an important advisory and editorial relation with THE NEW YORK TIMES. The statement made in presenting his resignation to the Regents was as follows:

"On the 1st of January, 1921, I shall have completed seven years in this office. While they have been seven lean years in the world's history, they have nevertheless been years of great educational progress in this State. Education has become a matter of deeper State concern and of vastly greater State support. In this period more effective expression has been given to the article of the Constitution requiring the maintenance of a system of free common schools in which all the children of the State may be educated.

"Provision has been made for promoting the health of the school children through medical inspection, physical training and health education; for the continuation training of boys and girls up to 18 years of age; for a wider agricultural and vocational training; for the consolidation of city school laws; for the encouragement of higher education through university scholarships; for the improvement and enrichment of teacher-training; for the better compensation of teachers and for their pensioning throughout the State; for the raising of professional standards and for the special training of illiterate adults. Even the disappointment over the repeal of the township law has prospect of relief in the steps taken in this last year by the farmers' organizations in co-operation with the educational authorities looking toward better schools for the rural districts. More, in short, has been accomplished in these seven years than could reasonably have been anticipated for twice that period.

"For these achievements the credit is primarily and chiefly due, so far as the department is concerned, to the admirable organization built up by Dr. Draper, which has been strengthened only by additions to meet the new requirements made of the department. But what is gratifying beyond these and other specific accomplishments is the response of the teachers generally in the State, not only to the appeals incident to the war but to the ideals of their profession.

"Despite all the adverse conditions during this period the profession of the teacher has been lifted in the public esteem, and not only has greater financial support but higher moral recognition been given to those who perform this pre-eminent service for the State. And the school has been glorified.

Why He Resigns His Post.

"During the greater part of this period demands have been made upon me to assist in work of a public nature outside of the department. These were unescapable during the war. Such appeals continue to come. At the same time the administrative demands have grown tremendously and will undoubtedly continue to grow. I am reluctant to narrow the field of my interest and to devote myself, as would be necessary, wholly or chiefly to administrative details, especially now that the lines of development have been so largely determined.

"I have thought that I should not be reaching my maximum usefulness in this position for two or three years, and I have been wishing to remain, especially until the rural school situation had been improved and a better working relationship reached in the cities, but these are in the way of being accomplished through the Committee of Twenty-one and the Joint Committee of Regents and Mayors, the Legislative Committee and the Children's Code Committee, assisted by my competent associates.

"Moreover, there has come to me, entirely unsought and unanticipated, an invitation to take a position in another field in which I think I can be even more helpful to the general cause of education. I have given this invitation consideration for several months, appreciating the opportunity which it opened to me, yet finding myself unwilling to leave this position which is to me the office of greatest opportunity and honor in the field of public education, and to sever the happy relations which I have enjoyed with the Board of Regents, with the department, and with the educational officers and teachers of this State. I have declined to consider several presidential and other positions in the educational field because no other has seemed comparable with this, but I have come at last to the view that I can be of greater service in the important editorial position unexpectedly open to me, and that the Department may itself be ultimately advantaged by my taking this step.

"My conscience would trouble me in leaving this field if I did not feel that, having served nearly thirty years in it in one or another capacity, I may return to the profession for which I especially prepared myself and in which I hope that I may not only serve those who are teaching the children and youth to face the problems of the next generation, but may also have a part in solving the great problems of my own day and generation. I believe that the press has today the supreme opportunity not only to help immediately the cause of sound education, but also to keep before the public the higher objects toward which the schools are looking."

"Stuck Type" on Country Paper.

ALBANY, Nov. 18 (Associated Press).—After the adjournment of the Regents' meeting today Dr. Finley explained his reference to returning to the profession for which he had especially prepared himself.

During his student days at Knox College, of which he was President later, he intended to enter the newspaper field. While a student he "stuck type" on a village newspaper, worked as reporter and had some experience as an editor. After his graduation he engaged in newspaper work for a time, but left it to accept the presidency of Knox College.

Dr. Finley is 57 years of age and a native of Illinois. He was graduated from Knox College in 1887. He has received honorary degrees from many American universities and colleges, including Johns Hopkins, University of Wisconsin, Princeton, Williams, Dartmouth, Columbia, Brown, Colgate and New York University.

He was President of Knox College from 1892 to 1899. He served on the Princeton Faculty three years, and in 1903 was elected President of the College of the City of New York, a position which he resigned ten years later to become Commissioner of Education, succeeding Dr. Draper. He has been associated with many public movements and during the war was the representative of the American Red Cross in the Holy Land.

WOMAN'S TIP CAUSES RUM RAID ON SHIP

$100,000 RAID IN BROOKLYN

Four Ten-Ton Trucks Cart Away Liquor Reported Obtained on Forged Permits.

A search of the Ward liner Mexico at Pier 14, East River, yesterday by men assigned by Thomas E. Rush, Surveyor of the Port, yielded forty-seven sacks of assorted bottled liquors, which were removed to Mr. Rush's office at the Custom House. The "tip" that rum in various forms was aboard the vessel was said to have come from the wife of a boss stevedore, who telephoned to Mr. Rush that her husband had been buying liquor from a sailor of the Mexico.

The vessel reached this port yesterday from Havana. When the passengers had been discharged, ten inspectors, under A. O. Hokansen, went aboard. They found bottles of whisky in and under mattresses, in pillows, concealed on top of boilers, in lockers and strung from the ship's hull, submerged in water. When they had completed their job the Government agents had confiscated enough liquor to fill the forty-seven sacks.

During the raid sailors and dock workers gathered on one of the decks of the Mexico and rapid deals were made for the disposal of wet goods on the gamble that delivery could be made before seizure. In this feverish trading whisky was disposed of for as low as 50 cents a bottle. The trading was detected, and Hokansen decided to search all the dock workers on board the ship. One negro, whose bulging apparel attracted attention, was found carrying eight quarts of whisky.

Prohibition agents in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon raided the wholesale liquor store of Porazzo Brothers, 446 Hicks Street, and seized more than $100,000 worth of alcohol, whisky and wine, which they said had been obtained upon forged removal permits. Frank Manno, Italo Caressa and Vincent Limandi, officers of the company, were arrested. They were held in $5,000 bail each for examination on Dec. 2 by United States Commissioner Barmore.

The seized liquor was removed in four ten-ton auto trucks. Fourteen barrels of alcohol, fifty cases of whisky and forty-four barrels of wine were taken. The agents also found what they said were the permits in question. Porazzo Brothers, they said, had a permit to distribute liquor for medicinal purposes on permits obtained in a legal maner, and other permits which were illegally obtained. The agents said that no one named Porazzo was connected with the firm.

Five men indicted for grand larceny after their arrest on Pier 59, Brooklyn, where, it was said, they had attempted to steal drums containing alcohol valued at $5,000, were held in $15,000 bail each by County Judge May, in Brooklyn yesterday. They pleaded not guilty. They were Nicolo Farello of 350 Hicks Street; Giuseppe Peraino, 110 Baltic Street; Lewis Parial, 61 Summit Street; Joseph Masino, 21 Woodhull Street, and Frank Bardello, 169 Union Street, all of Brooklyn.

George Meiderciercks, proprietor of a saloon at 4,301 First Avenue, Brooklyn, and his son, George Jr., were held in $2,000 bail each by United States Commissioner McCabe. Prohibition agents said they had found a package containing $1,500 worth of cocaine in the saloon.

PREPARE FOR DRY LAW.

State, County and City Officers Confer Here on Expected Legislation.

A conference on prohibition enforcement by State, city and county officials was held in the office of the Corporation Counsel last Saturday, it became known yesterday. No definite program was decided upon, and it was said that the conference was largely anticipatory of the passage of a State prohibition enforcement act by the next Legislature. Nathan L. Miller, Governor-elect, is known to favor the passage of such an act, and it is assumed by the local officials that it will go through as part of his program.

trict Attorney all I knew about the workings of the whisky ring.

"A week ago I gave to United States District Attorney Smith and Assistant District Attorney Cohen all my evidence. They have been conducting an investigation for the last week, and when arrests are made I stand ready with proof to back up the arrests that are made. I stand ready with proof also to back up the revelations I have made to them.

"This man got wind a few days ago of the fact that I was conferring with the Federal authorities. Monday night I returned from Hartford and was met at the railroad station by one of his gunmen, who threatened to shoot me if I did not keep my mouth closed. I immediately went to police headquarters and asked Assistant Superintendent of Police Thomas H. Flood for a permit to carry a gun to protect myself. He directed me to the Detective Bureau and I was told to apply personally to Superintendent of Police Patrick J. Flannagan for the permit. I have not yet been able to see the Superintendent but I am not worrying much as I've learned to protect myself with my bare hands."

Assistant District Attorney Cohn at Hartford refused to give out the details of the revelations Mulvihill claims to have made to his office, on the ground that evidence in a case of this character cannot be given out until prosecutions have started.

Mulvihill said tonight that the liquor which the bootlegging ring has disposed of has been of good quality, and has brought from $25 to $45 a gallon. "Most of the sales," he said, "were made in lots running as high as 300 cases to the consignment or in twenty-five-barrel lots."

Mulvihill promoted the Lynch-Herman fight at Waterbury last Labor Day. He bid for the Dempsey-Fulton fight, as well as the Dempsey-Carpentier match, but in neither case was his offer accepted.

Charles R. O'Connor, Director of the Prohibition forces in this State, said last night that he had no knowledge of revelations made by Joseph Mulvihill in Bridgeport regarding an alleged whiskey ring that had distributed $500,000 worth of whiskey in New England.

ENGINEERS TACKLE NATIONAL PROBLEMS

New Council Launched at Washington to Combine All Present Organizations.

PUBLIC SERVICE ITS AIM

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The American Engineering Council of the Federated American Engineering Societies was launched today when engineers and scientists from all parts of the country held a meeting at the New Willard Hotel. It was said that organizations with a total membership of 100,000 were represented through the delegates.

The united engineering forces of the nation will combine in a great national program of public service, it was announced. Sponsors for the council described it as a "super-engineering organization through which the efforts of the organized engineers of the nation will be enlisted in behalf of a constructive program of public service."

Among the chief features of this program are:

Conservation of the nation's resources in coal, oil, timber, water power, &c.; immediate work upon the national problem of transportation; a movement toward the solution of the relations between capital and labor in which the engineer, from his comparatively impartial point of view, is believed to be especially equipped to make recommendations; creation of a national public works bureau by means of a reorganization of the Department of the Interior, co-operation with the Drafting Bureau of Congress in its work of preparing for a national budget system, and other important legislation and guiding legislation for the licensing or registration of engineers.

After the election of temporary officers Philip N. Moore of St. Louis, Chairman of the War Relief Minerals Commission, spoke, in addition to L. P. Alford of New York, the recently elected Vice President of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and F. L. Hutchinson, Secretary of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, who discussed the engineering societies' service bureau, dealing with the problems of labor.

J. Parke Channing of New York opened the afternoon session with an address reviewing the work of the engineering council, of which he is Chairman. Other speakers and their topics were: "Conservation of Fuel," Edwin Ludlow of New York, who succeeds Herbert Hoover as President of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers; "Transportation," by Lewis B. Stillwell of New York; "Conservation of Water Resources," by H. W. Buck of New York, former President of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers; Samuel McCory, Chief of the Drainage Investigations, Department of Agriculture, and "Conservation of Labor," by L. W. Wallace of Baltimore, President of the Society of Industrial Engineers.

Election of officers of the new council and the effecting of a permanent organization will take place tomorrow.

In the evening Herbert Hoover will deliver the principal address. Mr. Hoover's subject will be "Some Phases of Relationship of Engineering Societies to Public Service."

"Do you know, Mr. Wanamaker," the kind old lady said, "that I come to your Store just as I go to our old family doctor or to my banker, who has charge of my money, or to the lawyer who has attended to our business matters.

"I feel your Store, knowing it as I do for long years of dealing with you, has in it everything I want, and that I can trust you for its proper quality and its just prices.

"You save me a lot of bother by having never disappointed me, and I am just as well satisfied with you and your Store as I am with my doctor, banker, lawyer."

Well, now, why shouldn't it be so?

Of passenger fares the commission says that the record leaves no doubt as to the "unduly preferential character of the intrastate fares and charges now in effect in the State of New York." It is pointed out passengers traveling between the State of New York and other States may be required to pay 3.6 a mile, the maximum interstate rate while passengers traveling within New York are required to pay only 3 cents a mile. This is discriminatory against passengers in other States in the same territory, the commission holds.

"The record," says the commission, "shows beyond question that there are no transportation conditions in the State of New York that justify lower rates or fares on the whole than those applicable in neighboring States or lower than the interstate rates and fares between points in New York and points in other States."

The same element of discrimination is found by the commission in the other intrastate rates under discussion.

A dissenting opinion was handed down by Commissioner Eastman, who says in concluding his argument:

"I am of the opinion that upon the record before us the decision of the majority involves the exercise of a power which goes beyond any 'clearly manifested purpose' of the Congress, and which we ought not to attempt to use until it is conferred upon us in plain and unmistakable terms."

Predicts Appeal by State.

ALBANY, Nov. 18.—Word concerning the Interstate Commerce Commission ruling regarding passenger fares and baggage charges in New York State was received here after the Public Service Commission had adjourned today. A member of the commission stated that undoubtedly the Public Service Commission which, with that of New York, refused to grant an increase of rates, would appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

DECLARES FOR OPEN SHOP.

Grange Favors Collective Bargaining —Wants Tariff Changes.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—The National Grange at its fifty-fourth annual session here today adopted a resolution declaring for the open shop and in favor of collective bargaining.

"We disapprove of any system," the resolution said, "which denies to any individual the right to work in any place where there is need of his industry at any time and at any wage which is satisfactory to him, or to quit his employment wherever and for whatever reason may be to him controlling, subject only to such contract obligations as he may willingly enter into and as may be imposed in an American court of justice."

The appointment of a committee to discuss agricultural problems with President Harding and his Cabinet was authorized. The grangers resolved that tariff laws should be equitable toward all industries, giving the same protection to agriculture as to others and asserted that the present tariff laws violated that position. Another resolution demanded the enactment of legislation to prevent private corporations from monopolizing the nation's water power under Government protection. Other resolutions opposed daylight saving and favored legislation to compel manufacturers to label woolen or part woolen [illegible]

TREGOE WARNS CREDIT MEN.

Sees Indications of a Hard Winter, With Much Unemployment.

Following a conference of city and up-State members of the New York Credit Men's Association at the Hotel Astor yesterday, at which many phases of the business situation were discussed, about 1,300 members of the organization attended a dinner at the hotel last night. H. C. Bainbridge Jr., President of the association, welcomed the up-State delegate and presided at the dinner.

Speeches were made by W. F. H. Koelsch, President of the National Association of Credit Men; Dr. Raymond L. Forman of St. Paul's M. E. Church New York City; Senator Thomas P. Gore and J. H. Tregoe, Secretary-Treasurer of the national association.

"The days of large profits are over," said Mr. Tregoe. "We must work to keep the wheels of our enterprises turning. Do not say that business is rotten. It is sick. Business must go to bed to recuperate.

"The 'strike' of the buying public should now be brought to a conclusion. Buy what you need, not extravagantly, but reasonably. That will keep business going.

"Today we face a hard Winter. According to present indications, there will be much unemployment. Don't fear it but play safe. Try to keep your employes, for unemployment is the worst menace the nation can face. Pay good wages but have a low labor cost which you can get by efficient production."

Resolute—

Special Value at $12.00

"I demand for myself absolute comfort in shoes which are at the same time smart looking, well fitting and long wearing and I can't expect any other man to demand less."
Chas. O. Emerson

TOO NEW TO BE COPIED

In my life time of shoe making I have never produced a shoe that so completely satisfied every demand for supreme style as this new "Resolute".

The last is new, the pattern is new, the color is new. The Resolute is too new even to be imitated.

It has all the swagger brogue effect in the perforations on the toe, the pinkings on the upper and the stitching round the heel.

Yet this medium English toe and the long forepart of the Resolute are different from the heavy effect of the Regular Brogue.

Best of all Style doesn't add to the cost of Emerson Shoes. My policy of stamping the retail price on the soles at the factory based on the costs of materials and labor only, protects you against inflated prices.

Come in and look over our wide variety of smart new models. You will find a shoe you want at just the price you want to pay.

MILLER HINTS AT BAN ON DEMPSEY FIGHT

Governor-Elect Indicates He Favors Repeal of Authority for Carpentier Bout.

STUDIES TRACTION MUDDLE

"I Wouldn't Give a Whole Lot for Rickard's Garden Lease," Fight Fan's Opinion.

Governor-elect Nathan L. Miller returned to this city yesterday from Absecon, N. J., where he had been resting from his campaign labors. He will remain here several days and will seek light on the local traction situation.

"I spent most of my time very pleasantly knocking golf balls around," he explained with a smile, when asked as to his legislative program.

When his attention was called to propaganda started by Canon William Sheafe Chase of Brooklyn, President of the Board of Trustees of the International Reform Bureau, a law and order society, in favor of repealing the Walker Boxing act, the Governor-elect said he did not know very much about that law, which gives sanction to bouts up to fifteen rounds with a decision.

When it was suggested that an impression seemed to prevail that he would veto any proposal to conduct the Dempsey-Carpentier fight at Madison Square Garden or anywhere else in the State, and also would urge the repeal of the Walker act, the Governor-elect smiled.

"During the campaign," a reporter said, "the Democrats gave wide currency to a statement that Governor Smith was in favor of boxing and sports generally and that you were opposed."

"Under the circumstances," said the Governor-elect with an even broader smile, "the people would be rather disappointed if the boxing law was not repealed after the victory we won, wouldn't they?"

That was all Judge Miller would say on the subject. A Republican leader who talked with the Governor-elect in the afternoon, said last night:

"I wouldn't give a whole lot for Tex Rickard's five-year lease of the Madison Square Garden."

Among the visitors of the Governor-elect yesterday were William L. Ward, Republican leader of Westchester County, George W. Aldridge, chieftain of the Republican forces in Monroe, and George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee.

For today Judge Miller has an appointment with Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo, who prior to the unofficial Republican State Convention at Saratoga, was his strongest rival for the Gubernatorial nomination. Mr. Hugo will be out of office by the first of next year, and, it is thought, may be appointed to some other position. Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the New York County Republican Committee, also expects to see the Governor-elect today.

ARREST MUCH-WANTED MAN

New Yorker Held in Maine Is Accused of Defrauding Hotels.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 18.—Stuart E. Eggleston of New York, alleged to be wanted by the police of New York, Washington, Baltimore, Montreal and a few other places for passing worthless checks while stopping at exclusive hotels, was arraigned in the Municipal Court today. He was charged with passing one of the checks here in August, 1919, and with being a fugitive from justice from Washington, D. C. The cases were continued until Nov. 26, bail being fixed at $5,000.

Eggleston, before his arraignment, claimed that he was a college graduate and that relatives live at 222 Riverside Drive New York. He said that he was shot down from a height of 1,000 feet while in the British air service, and later that he was with the American tank service forces.

Floors for Modern Homes

WHETHER you are building a home for yourself, or a group of houses to sell, there are two important reasons why you should consider floors of Armstrong's Linoleum.

The first is that linoleum can be laid as a permanent floor at less cost than other floors.

The second is that modern linoleum floors appeal to everyone because they are so attractive and will retain for years their original beauty and freshness. You can choose from plain colors, two-tone Jaspés, parquetry effects, and artistic carpet designs.

Linoleum floors are easy to keep clean, and the upkeep cost is low. Frequent and expensive refinishing is not necessary.

The illustration shows a room in one of a group of recently built semi-detached houses. These houses were floored throughout with Armstrong's Linoleum.

The linoleum was cemented firmly down to the soft wood under-flooring over a layer of builders' felt paper. It was waxed immediately, and given another coat six weeks later.

DANIELS ATTACKED FOR OIL RESERVES

STOCKS MUCH REDUCED

Government Participation in Oil Fields Objected To—Pesqueira to Be Heard on Mexican Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—An attack upon Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, by Thomas A. O'Donnell, President of the American Petroleum Institute, was the feature of the session of that organization today. The withdrawal of public oil lands on the Pacific coast through the pressure of the navy brought forth the following statement from Mr. O'Donnell:

"The producers of the Pacific coast feel that the Navy Department has not been fair with the producers of the West. We believe this to be due to the extreme prejudice of the head of the department. While an armistice had been signed with the Germans, no armistice has been offered to the oil producers by the Navy Department."

Criticism of Mexican policy toward American producers made yesterday by Frederick Kellog, general counsel of the American Petroleum Company, caused R. Y. Pesqueira, Mexican representative here, to ask an opportunity to reply. Mr. O'Donnell invited Mr. Pesqueira to speak tomorrow afternoon.

Dealing with the navy's attitude toward oil, Mr. O'Donnell said the greatest shortage of petroleum in this country existed on the Pacific coast. Stocks had been reduced from 60,000,000 to 20,000,000 barrels within a few years, he asserted. The reductions this year had already been nearly 8,000,000 barrels.

"With this dangerous condition confronting the people of the Pacific Coast the producer has had to contend with a most deplorable situation, the withdrawal of public lands, with active drilling in progress and many millions of dollars already invested, which brought about years of expensive and exhaustive litigation," continued Mr. O'Donnell. "A naval reserve was created on these lands two years after the development had started, and unjust public opinion created by constant publicity, promoted a general belief that the plutocratic oil producer of the West was trying to steal something from our navy.

"I believe Government participation either by Great Britain or this country would retard rather than promote the development of petroleum resources," said Mr. O'Donnell. "Many parts of the British Empire, as well as many other Governments, have at the present time restrictive laws, denying an equal opportunity to foreign citizens to participate in the development of their petroleum resources. Such legislative restrictions are not in the interest of active development, and it is just as important, if not more so, to the citizens of Great Britain to repeal such legislation as it is for Americans desirous of engaging in said development."

At the evening session of the institute, Admiral W. S. Benson, Chairman of the Shipping Board, told of the board's needs for oil, and asked the aid of producers. Requirements for 1919 amounted to 18,000,000 barrels, for 1920, 30,000,000 barrels, and the estimate for 1921 was 40,000,000 barrels, Admiral Benson pointed out. He said that a contract for 30,000,000 barrels between October 1920, and October, 1921, had already been made.

FARMER'S HOME BLOWN UP.

Maryland Man and His Two Stepchildren Are Killed—Mother Hurt.

Special to The New York Times.

GERMANTOWN, Md., Nov. 18.—The home of James Bolton, a farmer near here, was blown up by dynamite today, resulting in the death of Bolton and his two stepchildren, Evelyn Shipley, aged 6, and Harold Shipley, aged 2. The mother of the two children is seriously injured.

Vernon Thompson, a neighbor, is held on suspicion. Thompson is said to have had an argument with Bolton on election day. He came to the Bolton home, neighbors say, to get Bolton to go to the polls. Bolton was shucking corn and said he thought it more profitable.

It is alleged that Thompson then went into Bolton's house and obtained possession of the latter's shotgun, insisting the while that he should vote. There was a struggle under a white oak tree near by and Mrs. Bolton is alleged to have wrested the gun from the two men and to have run into the house. Then Bolton ran into the house and shot at Thompson, it is said. Thompson is reported to have just got out of the hospital.

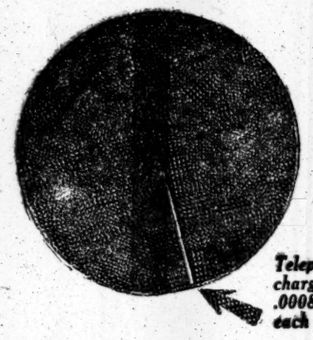
Telephone Service
—The smallest item on the list



Telephone charge .0008 of each dollar.

ONE of the best known business houses in New York City in a recent advertisement presented a chart showing just what it does with each dollar of its revenue.

The smallest item on the list was the amount paid for telephone service. The telephone charge was so small it could hardly be shown graphically.

From each dollar of its revenue only eight/ten-thousandths went for telephone service.

It spent over six times that proportion of its dollar for twine and containers.

This firm has four private branch exchange switchboards with 167 extension telephones and 22 tie lines connecting its three branches with its main store. It uses thousands of messages annually.

Under the proposed new telephone rates the firm would pay for the same amount of service only one/one-thousandth of each dollar of revenue.

When you analyze your expenditures in business or in the home you will find that the amount you pay for the telephone is one of the smallest items in the budget.

Measured by what it actually accomplishes the telephone is probably the most inexpensive and at the same time the most valuable servant you have. It will continue so, even with the proposed new rates in effect.

MISS LANIER SCORES TRIUMPH AT GARDEN

Rides Three Winners in Hunters' Class at Horse Show, Down East Taking the Blue.

OFFICIALS DISQUALIFY PONY

Miss Patty Vauclain's Little Fire Lady Is Ruled Out by Committee.

Miss Becky Lanier, daughter of Charles D. Lanier and who is one of the cleverest of the juvenile riders, scored a distinct personal triumph at the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden yesterday when she rode the first three winners in a single class. While this has been accomplished by professional riders, it is unprecedented among the amateurs.

This feat was accomplished in a class for ladies' hunters, ridden by ladies, which brought out a large number of entries. The class, as a whole, was one of the best shown throughout and bristled with fine exhibits and horsemanship. The performance was so good that but one horse refused a jump, the others taking the obstacles cleverly.

Miss Lanier was familiar with all her mounts, for two of them are owned by her father and the other was his property before being sold to Frederic McElhone. First prize went to Mr. Lanier's Down East, a favorite at the shows and a winner of many blues. Down East scored only after close competition. In the final trial Miss Lanier sent him around the ring in impressive style.

Silver Crest, which Miss Lanier had ridden before during the show, and which is owned by Mr. McElhone, was awarded second prize, having given the winner a good contest for first honors. However, the real triumph for Miss Lanier came when the judges pinned the third ribbon on Bolling, from Mr. Lanier's stable. Miss Lanier came in for a hearty round of applause for the feat. Fourth went to Miss Janice Liggett's Outlaw, a thoroughbred which had been a winner earlier in the week and which again fenced nicely.

Garden Filled to Capacity.

Though the Horse Show has attracted large crowds throughout the week, the Garden held its first capacity crowd last night. Among the visitors were many who prefer to wait until the earlier classes have been disposed of and then take in the finals, which lead to the championships in the various classes. When the evening session star.., all the boxes were occupied and all the reserve seats taken, the latter having been sold out early in the day. The galleries also held their throng and the size of the crowd added to the enthusiasm and made it, altogether the best session so far.

Had not Miss Lanier performed her unusual feat, the limelight would undoubtedly have centred on Glennie Dean, owned by Arthur E. Hopkins of Syracuse, which took the afternoon crowd by storm with a remarkable performance netting a blue ribbon. Glennie Dean is probably the best trained horse seen here in a long time. She went through her series of tricks with almost human intelligence.

The mare went at a walk, a trot and a canter while her rider sat perfectly still and without a bridle to guide his mount. The horse changed her pace at a word from her master and finally, coming to a halt, went to her knees to permit her rider to dismount. After a few more antics, she finally walked half way around the arena bowing to the audience, her head over the rail of the ring. Her reception duly recorded her triumph. Glennie Dean is a four-year-old and this is her first year in the shows. Previous to her appearance at the Garden she had won at Syracuse and at Albany. She did not have to depend entirely on her unusual training to win, for, as a saddle horse, she would have been a strong competitor in any of the classes.

Little Fire Lady Disqualified.

A mild sensation was created among exhibitors and horsemen last night by an announcement that Miss Patty Vauclain, daughter of Samuel Vauclain, would have to forfeit two blue ribbons won by her pony, Little Fire Lady, because it had been found that the horse was not eligible for the classes in which she competed. Miss Vauclain was not present and a telegram was sent to her by the Horse Show Committee advising here of the withdrawal of the ribbons.

The telegram was sent to the Broadlawn Stables, owned by Miss Vauclain at Rosemont, Pa., and read:

"It has been brought to our notice that your pony, Little Fire Lady, entered as a four-year old, was shown in Classes 148 and 151 and awarded the blue ribbon in both classes. Investigation shows that this animal was less than four years old and therefore not eligible. We beg to inform you that our executive committee has decided to withdraw these blue ribbons and prizes and not allow the pony to be shown in any other classes at the show, and to bring the matter to the attention of the other exhibitors in the classes in which the pony was entered. Furthermore, the matter will be laid before the Association of American Horse Shows."

Little Fire Lady defeated the hitherto undefeated Chestnut Blossom, owned by Mrs. F. P. Garvan, and later defeated Miss Corinne Poth's Bounce in a contest for a cup presented by John McE. Bowman. The defeat of Chestnut Blossom was a distinct surprise and this victory caused the investigation which led to the discovery that the horse was not of the age represented. Both classes were for horses four years old and upward. In the first of these classes Little Fire Lady was entered, according to the official program, as a six-year-old, and in the second one as a four-year old.

Thoroughbreds in Limelight.

The thoroughbreds have met with particular success during the present exhibition and were again in the limelight yesterday. A class for thoroughbred saddle horses brought out some fine exhibits, and the victory went to Harvey S. Ladew's Leading Lady, a chestnut filly by Star Ruby-Lady Lindsay. Leading Lady made her first public bow on the turf, and will be remembered by racegoers for winning at 100 to 1 at Havana. Though she was not particularly successful as a racing mare, she gave promise of being a good saddle mount, and was purchased for that purpose by Mr. Ladew. She met with strong competition in her class. Fire Bell, a chestnut gelding by Salvator, owned by Miss Constance E. Fabys, was second. Frank Donovan's Doctor Russell was third and the Wayside Stable's Tom O'Day took fourth.

The morning session was given over almost entirely to polo ponies, and the various classes brought out the largest collection ever seen in the Garden. Interest in the polo pony has been growing since the end of the war and the resumption of the sport and extension of its scope. Devotees of polo were able to see some fine specimens, and the classes were generally well filled.

The first of the classes had nine entries and among these were four pure Arabians, which were making their first appearance in this show. They made a good impression but failed to win in their class, as they are of a type not often seen among polo ponies and apparently did not impress the judges with their adaptability to the sport. Sinbad of the four drew fourth honors and was the only one to be accorded recognition. However, the Arabian horses were a feature at the show last year and will undoubtedly come in for more recognition during the last two days of the present show, when they will be seen in a number of classes.

The Three Sisters Farm scored in the class for two-year-olds shown in hand with Sheikus, a chestnut stallion, which won handily. The same owners scored with Gardination in the class for mares suitable for breeding polo ponies. Second went to Constance, owned by Squadron A Cavalry, and third to Forward Girlie, owned by Gerald H. Dempsey. Mavourneen, a black mare, gave a very good performance and took fourth.

The interest of the polo players and enthusiasts, and there were many present for the judging of these classes, was directed to the class for ponies up to carrying 150 pounds, which were judged for manners, conformation and handiness. This required a smart performance and brought out a large class. Doris, owned by Howard Phipps, captured the blue after the judges had spent much time in reaching their decision, and second honors went to J. E. Myer's Melody.

Pershing Horse is Second.

The Headquarters Stable, through which General Pershing is showing a number of horses, has made a number of strong efforts during the week, but has so far been able to finish with second honors only. The Pershing stable was second again in the contest for the Overseas Cup, which closed the afternoon session and which was a hard test for jumpers. The judges were kept well beyond their dinner hour deciding on the winner, and after each of the entries had been given a trial over the fences the horses were brought out and judged for manners, gait and other qualities. General Pershing was represented by his two favorites, Jeff and Princess, and this time he took second with Princess, the first honors going to Tom Velie, owned by Major Lewis Brown, Jr., who has met with considerable success this week. Tom Velie deserved his victory, for he jumped faultlessly and stood the test of conformation and gait under the required burden.

Mrs. Francis P. Garvan found some consolation for her defeats of the previous day when her Hamilton Flame and Hamilton Dianthus easily captured first and second honors, respectively, in the contest for ponies for the prize offered by George B. Hulme. Hamilton Flame made a fine showing and there was no question from the outset that he would redeem himself. His own stable mate was his closest rival for honors and third in this class went to Miss Isabella Wanamaker's Wild Honey.

HORSE SHOW ATTRACTS GAILY DRESSED THRONG

Society Pays Tribute to His Equine Majesty in Way That Recalls Ante-Bellum Days.

The attendance last night at the Horse Show was like ante-bellum days, with gaily dressed throngs and much animation. At 8:30 there was a long queue outside the Garden, and the crowd continued to pour into the arena until long after 9.

Many of the new faces noticed were on the promenade and not in the boxes, where the personnel remains about the same from day to day.

The judging of the Overseas Cup Class attracted many army officers during the afternoon, some of whom entertained parties in the boxes. Personally interested in the judging was the group presenting the prize, including R. H. Williams Jr., Victor C. Mather, Mrs. Bryce Wing, John D. Wing, her brother-in-law; W. Plunkett Stewart, R. Penn Smith Jr., who married Miss Carol Harriman, and Pierre Lorillard Jr. of Tuxedo.

Mrs. Richard L. Morris, the former Miss Carolyn Fellowes, and Mrs. David Wagstaff watched the events from Box 15. Mrs. John Booth Burrsall, Miss Farrell and Miss McCahill were the afternoon guests of Harry D. Holloway in Box 17.

Mrs. Morgan Belmont and her father, Paul A. Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Newton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Tod, whose young daughter appeared in the ring; Mrs. F. Burrall Hoffman, Mrs. Williams Haven, Mrs. Charles M. Ward and her daughter, Mrs. Leonard Cox; Morris R. Voick, son of Mme. de Gama, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador to Great Britain; Colonel Daniel Appleton, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pease, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Walsh, Mrs. Grenville Kane, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Willets, Mr. and Mrs. E. Von der Horst Koch, Mrs. John S. Rogers, Mrs. J. Allen Townsend, Harvey S. Ladew, Josika Herczeg, Howland Davis, Noel McVickar and J. Macy Willets were among others seen.

At the close of the exhibition last night Mr. and Mrs. John McE. Bowman gave a supper dance at the Biltmore for the exhibitors, members of the various committees, officials and their wives of the National Horse Show Association.

WEST POINT WINS FAST POLO GAME

Semi-finals in the polo tournament which is being held in connection with the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden started last night, the trio of Majors from West Point meeting the Brooklyn team, to which it had to allow 3 goals. That mattered little, however, as the final score was 15 to 9 in favor of the officers.

It was a hustling contest all through, and Brooklyn trio put up a game battle. H. M. Winn in particular played a strong game. The crowd found plenty to keep the blood stirring.

The great assemblage, the largest so far, showed an ever increasing knowledge of the fine points of the game and the Horse Show Association may now rest assured that it made no mistake in adding this thrilling sporting feature to the program.

When the game got under way, West Point's trio of majors took the ball down toward Brooklyn's goal and kept it there most of the time during the first chukker. The sons of Mars tallied six goals in succession before Brooklyn put one in, Winn drove the solitary Brooklyn score home by a cleverly directed shot when the ball slipped out of a hot scrimmage. Two more goals went to West Point before the chukker ended. Major Wilson scored four of the eight goals of the first period for West Point, while Majors J. K. and Louis Brown made two each.

The score, exclusive of handicap, was 8 to 1 in favor of West Point at the end of the first chukker, or, including Brooklyn's allowance of 3, 8 to 4. One of Major L. Brown's goals in that period was made in a beautiful fly from midfield right after the ball had been put into play.

The Brooklyn trio came back strongly in the second period, the clever work of Winn showing itself from the start. He drove the ball home for Brooklyn four times during that second chukker, while B. Waters made the other tally for Brooklyn. The Army trio put up a stiff game during the second chukker, and honors were about even among the three players. The riding off by Winn, upon a clever little pony, Sister, was one of the bright, particular features.

Other features of the second period were the unhorsing of Waters, who was up in a hurry and received a salvo of applause, and the accuracy of one of Major Wilson's drives for a goal. It hit the goal judge squarely in the chest.

The tanbark in the arena is in much better condition than the most hopeful of the players ever expected it would be, and they said many complimentary things about the management which made it so. The series will be continued tonight.

MAY AMALGAMATE TRACKS.

Union of Harness Racing Interests in Three States Is Proposed.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 18.—Connecticut followers of harness racing are interested in the proposal to amalgamate tracks in this State, Massachusetts and New York State, which comes before the Bay State Short Ship circuit at Springfield, Mass., today. The New York tracks proposed for membership would be those at Endicott, Goshen, Monroe and Middletown.

JADDA IS VICTOR IN BOWIE FEATURE

Again Proves His Liking for Mud and Wins Sprint Race by Two Lengths.

Special to The New York Times.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 18.—The feature handicap for all ages at six and a half furlongs was won here today by J. W. Bean's Jadda, which once more showed his liking for a muddy track and led all the way to win by two lengths from Ticklish and Dry Moon, among others, in a large field.

Jadda is at home in the mud, and his ability to run in this kind of going caused him to be made a favorite in the field of nine starters. He gave his backers little uneasiness throughout the running. He took the lead at the start and raced Dry Moon into submission. Jadda was in front all the way to the end, although Butwell took no chances and rode him out at the finish, as Ticklish, also a good mud runner, closed strongly in the stretch after a slow beginning. Dry Moon made a good showing for a two-year-old, and was close up with the leader for half a mile, but the pace told on him and he tired badly in the stretch. He saved third easily, but finished thee lengths back of Ticklish.

The Xalapa's Farm's two-year-old colt Bon Homme scored a clever victory in the one-mile test for two-year-olds when he won very easily from the Redstone Stable's Sporting Blood, which had been regarded as a high class juvenile. Bon Homme proved to be a better mudder than he was generally thought to be, and, taking the lead as the barrier went up, he opened up a gap of four lengths and was never threatened. He was not put to a drive, though Sporting Blood made a game effort and was second all the way.

Babe Ruth Popular in Cuba; Signs for More Games There

HAVANA, Nov. 18.—During the series of baseball games played by the New York Giants in this city, Babe Ruth, the champion home-run hitter, compiled a batting average of .345. He scored five runs, and his efforts with the bat resulted in two home runs, three triples, three doubles and two singles. He struck out six times. Ruth has signed with a local promoter for ten more games in this city. Torriente, a member of a team which met the Giants last week, eclipsed the efforts of Ruth by hitting three homers in one game. As a result of this feat he has been named by local fans the "Babe Ruth of Cuba."

SHILLING CASE IS DEFINITELY CLOSED

At Jockey Club Meeting Here Ross Withdraws Application for License for Rider.

The case of Jockey Carroll Shilling, which threatened for a time to cause trouble in racing circles, has been definitely closed and Shilling will not ride either in New York or in Maryland, where he recently obtained a license.

At a meeting of the Stewards of the Jockey Club held in this city yesterday and attended by representatives of the Maryland Jockey Club and the Maryland Racing Commission, Commander J. K. L. Ross withdrew all applications he had made for licenses for Shilling and announced that he would not again make an application for the reinstatement of the boy. He also withdrew the application which had already been favorably acted upon in Maryland, and this was consented to by the Maryland commission.

Shilling will retain his license as a trainer, but on being brought before the Stewards he stated that he would not seek reinstatement as a rider while in the employ of Mr. Ross.

There was no hearing of the Shilling case with a view to reopening his case, and the Stewards took exactly the action that was looked for following the statement issued by Major August Belmont a few days ago. The Maryland Jockey Club was represented by William Riggs, while the Maryland commission was represented by Joseph N. Kennedy and George Brown, Jr. Mr. Ross was present at the meeting, but Shilling remained in an anteroom until informed of the action taken.

The meeting brought about a better understanding between the New York and Maryland turf bodies, and it was announced that, following the close of the present meeting at Bowie on Nov. 20, a series of conferences between the two bodies will be held with a view to coming to a definite policy on turf regulations, so that the sport will not again be threatened with trouble over a case similar to the Shilling affair.

DEMPSEY TO START RACE.

Champion Agrees to Send Six-Day Riders Away from Mark.

Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion, will start the six-day bicycle race at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory Sunday night. The heavyweight champion yesterday accepted an invitation to start the cyclists on their grind of a week. In accepting this assignment Dempsey will be compelled to break one of his hard and fast rules. The champion is a stickler for the "early to bed and early to rise" axiom and regards himself as a practical illustration of its benefits. For the coming occasion, however, Dempsey has agreed to stay out of bed until midnight to start the race.

Although this is the first six-day race to be conducted outside the confines of Madison Square Garden the promoters report that demands for tickets indicate the change of scene will not militate against the success of the race. It is reported that several thousand dollars worth of tickets have already been sold. The thirty riders scheduled to start are said to be in good condition after their training activities on the Westchester roads around Mount Kisco.

The sprint races scheduled for tomorrow night are reported to have attracted unusual attention. Particularly is this said to be true of the ten-mile paced race, in which an attempt at a record will be made. As an incentive the promoters have agreed to distribute cash prizes among the leaders at every lap, as well as substantial bonuses to the leaders at intermediate distances. Another feature will be an Australian pursuit race, in which foreign and American riders will compete.

WILL RIDE AT GARDEN.

Spencer to Appear in Cycle Races Preceding Six-Day Grind.

Arthur Spencer, sprint cycling champion, will not ride in the six-day bicycle race scheduled for the Twenty-second Regiment Armory, beginning next Sunday night, according to an announcement made at Madison Square Garden yesterday by Joe Fogler, veteran bicycle rider. Spencer, according to Fogler, has signed a contract with John M. Chapman, giving the Newark promoter exclusive rights to his services for a period of three years. His first appearance under the terms of this contract will be at Madison Square Garden on Dec. 4, when a series of sprint races will be conducted in advance of the opening of the Garden six-day race, scheduled for Dec. 5 to 11. Whether Spencer will enter the Garden grind has not been announced.

Goldstein Pocket Billiard Winner.

A Class A pocket billiard tournament was started at the Progress Club last night with ten players entered, all competing from scratch. The opening game was won by M. A. Goldstein, who defeated S. S. Soss by a score of 100 to 91.

YANKS PLAN CHANGE IN SCOUT SYSTEM

Will Redistrict Country and Increase Staff by One—Young Infielder Signed.

The powwow of the Yankee clans held yesterday afternoon at the offices of the club's president, Colonel Jacob Ruppert, 1,639 Third Avenue, while prolonged and earnest, was rather general than specific and produced little in the way of outlining plans for the strengthening of Miller Huggins's baseball machine. There were present in the council chamber Colonel Ruppert, Colonel Huston, Manager Huggins, Ed Barrow, the business manager, and two of the club's three scouts, Joe Kelley and Bob Guks. The other scout, Bob Connery, didn't strike town in time for the meeting. He is expected to arrive today.

A large portion of the time was given up to discussion of the scouting system employed and various changes were planned to go into effect for the coming season. The entire country will be redistricted, with the three scouts now employed and one other, to be engaged soon, having each his own region in which to forage for talent. Andy Coakley, who did a little scouting for the local American League team last season, may go on the payroll as the fourth telescope. The tipsters in each district, according to the new scheme, will be marshaled by the scouts and will report directly to them when they get on the trail of a budding phenomenon.

After the conference Miller Huggins announced the acquisition of J. Mitchell, infielder, from the Vernon, Cal., club of the Pacific Coast League. Six players at least, possibly seven, will be turned over by the Yankees in this deal, but Huggins said he had not yet decided which men should hit the westward trail.

Huggins manifested pleasure over his success in arranging the deal for Mitchell, whom he considers the most valuable infielder who was on the market. The Vernon player is 26 years old and has had experience that has seasoned him far beyond the usual rookie stage. Mitchell has been playing shortstop for the last three seasons, and was previously located at second base. His fielding last season was of a remarkably steady nature, and he is reported to be a good man at bat in a pinch. His average with the cudgel last season was .276.

The Yankee chieftains, in their interchange of ideas, failed to arrive at a decision in the matter of a training camp for the coming Spring. Huggins said that the players would go either to Florida or Louisiana. New Orleans will not be the chosen point, he announced. It is possible that Jacksonville may once more draw the plum, but not probable. In any event the Yankees are likely to meet the Robins again in a series of games on the way North.

Alexandria and Shreveport are under consideration for training camp purposes. The selection will finally be based on the way the team is routed for games during its progress toward New York. If a Louisiana point is chosen the Robins will travel westward from their Miami camp to travel with their rivals.

Texas will be full of big league baseball clubs during the training camp season. There will be the Giants at San Antonio, the White Sox at Dallas, the Reds at Cisco, the Tigers at Waxahachie, and the Browns, Cardinals and Indians will also do their preliminary work in the Lone Star State.

The Giants yesterday released Outfielder Frank Griffin to the Memphis club of the Southern Association. Griffin was secured from the same team late in the past Summer.

The new chieftain of the widespread realm of baseball, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, will be the guest of the New York Nationals at the Army and Navy game on the Polo Grounds gridiron Saturday of next week. The invitation, extended through Judge McQuade, received an affirmative response yesterday.

WHITE SOX SIGN PLAYERS.

Outfielders Mostil and Micky Collins to Be Given Trial.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Secretary Harry Grabiner of the Chicago White Sox today announced the signing of two players. One of them is Johnny Mostil, an outfielder, who has been with the White Sox at the Spring camps for the last few seasons. He played with the Milwaukee American Association team the last two seasons. Mickey Collins, the other player signed, performed last season with an independent local team as outfielder.

Pitcher McWeeney, who was purchased from Milwaukee in the Fall by the White Sox, has not come to terms, claiming a bonus promised him by Milwaukee before signing.

BANQUET FOR JOHN EVERS.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—The date for the homecoming banquet to be tendered newly appointed Manager Johnny Evers of the Chicago Cubs was set today for Dec. 7. Judge Landis, recently appointed Chairman of the National Commission, will be asked to act as toastmaster. Many baseball officials from other cities are expected to attend. Jack Hendricks and Roger Bresnahan, American Association managers, have sent in reservation requests.

Evers is remembered as the "keystone pivot" of the Cubs in the 1907 and 1908 championship years, in which the "Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance" combination became famous.

DUNN NOT WORRYING.

Baltimore Manager Has Signed Nearly All of Championship Team.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 18.—With virtually his entire team signed up, the same players who won the championship of the International League for the Orioles in the last two seasons and the interleague series with the St. Paul American Association Club this Fall, Jack Dunn, manager of the Baltimore club, is not worrying about next year's baseball problems. His team very probably will train at Goldsborough, S. C., next Spring, it was understood today, if some improvements he desires in the club are made.

C. C. N. Y. DATES ANNOUNCED

The 1921 swimming schedule was announced yesterday at the College of the City of New York. All the members of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association will appear in the pool of the uptown college at least once during the season.

In addition to these meets, the team will also swim against the Johns Hopkins team and those from Rutgers, Amherst, Wesleyan and Rensselaer Polytechnic. The last three will be contested away from home. The season will open on Dec. 3, when the University of Pennsylvania swimmers make their first appearance in the city, and it will continue until March 19, when the intercollegiates will be held at the Columbia pool. There will be one meet every week between those dates.

The varsity's schedule follows:

Dec. 3, University of Pennsylvania at C. C. N. Y.; 10, Columbia at C. C. N. Y.; 17, Princeton at Princeton.

Jan. 7, Johns Hopkins at C. C. N. Y.; 14, Princeton at C. C. N. Y.; 15, Yale at C. C. N. Y.

Feb. 4, Rutgers at C. C. N. Y.; 11, University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; 18, Rensselaer (tentative) at Rensselaer; 25, Amherst (tentative) at Amherst.

HEAVYWEIGHT BAN LIFTED

State Authorities Convinced They Are Now Prepared to Permit Such Matches.

The Boxing Commission, of which Joseph Johnson is Chairman, and the License Committee, headed by Larry McGuire, at their joint session yesterday afternoon lifted the ban on heavyweight boxing contests in local arenas under the provisions of the Walker law. This action will pave the way for the championship battle between Jack Dempsey and Bill Brennan, which will be held in Madison Square Garden Dec. 14. In addition the official sanction for bouts between heavyweights is expected to result in a number of important matches in this division in the immediate future.

In announcing the decision to permit heavyweight bouts, the two sport governing bodies issued the following statement:

"The Boxing Commission and the License Committee at a joint meeting today decided that a point had been reached in the operation of the new boxing law where they felt justified in permitting heavyweight boxing contests.

"Accordingly, they acted favorably on the application of the Madison Square Garden Sporting Club to hold the Dempsey-Brennan contest on Dec. 14, next."

The decision in favor of the heavyweight bouts was not unexpected. It had been generally understood that the officials intrusted with the supervision of boxing under the Walker law had passed the initiation stage in their activities and were prepared to permit bouts on an elaborate scale in all classes. The contests, like others which have been conducted since the revival of boxing, will be attended with careful attention to the minutest detail, for the governing officials are determined to continue their vigilance.

Three Title Bouts.

With official permission to conduct this important ring bout, Promoter Tex Rickard has now completed arrangements for three bouts in which world's ring titles will be at stake. The first of these will be the Benny Leonard-Joe Welling lightweight championship match, Nov. 26. The Dempsey-Brennan clash on Dec. 14 follows, and the third will introduce Pete Herman, bantamweight title-holder, in a contest in defense of his crown, on Dec. 21, according to present plans. Herman's opponent has not been definitely selected, but he is tentatively matched to meet the winner of the bout between Joe Lynch and Jack Sharkey, which will be decided at the Garden Dec. 2.

Promoter Rickard has practically arranged for another titular battle, which will be fought at the Garden next Spring. This contest will bring Dempsey and Jess Willard, former champion, together in a return bout of fifteen rounds. The contest will probably be held on March 17. The formality of actually signing contracts for this match has not yet been performed by either the principals or their representatives. It is a formality in every sense of the word, however, for both Dempsey and Willard are willing and eager for the bout, and Promoter Rickard is similarly inclined. Only a few days ago the Garden promoter was in receipt of a telegram from Willard, who is at Lawrence, Kan., instructing Rickard to proceed with negotiations for a return meeting with Dempsey. The dethroned title-holder is reported to be devoting considerable time to training activities, in order that he may be in better conditions than he enjoyed on the occasion of his previous meeting with Dempsey at Toledo.

Promoter Rickard was elated over the approval by the boxing authorities of his heavyweight championship match between Dempsey and Brennan. The Garden promoter has been eagerly awaiting this indorsement for several weeks past. In connection with the match, Promoter Rickard announced that he would institute a scale of prices for tickets ranging from $5 to $25. This information was disclosed after it had been submitted to the boxing authorities and had received official sanction. The Garden promoter is confident that with this scale of prices the bout will attract a capacity crowd to the Garden.

Dempsey's First Bout Here.

The forthcoming match will afford local boxing fans their first competitive view of Dempsey since the Salt Lake City mauler wrested the title from the brow of Willard. This feature, coupled with the popularity of Dempsey and the tremendous interest in his ability, are factors which Promoter Rickard expects will draw a crowded house to the bout. Brennan is not conceded much of a chance against the rushing, tearing, smashing Dempsey. Unless the Chicagoan has improved wonderfully in the last year or two he probably will succumb to the Dempsey punch, as have others who questioned Dempsey's qualifications in this respect. Brennan is regarded as the best of a comparatively poor crop of white heavyweights. Harry Wills, colored heavyweight, probably would give Dempsey a more serious ring argument, but Dempsey evidently is not yet ready to mingle with the big New Orleans negro.

The Dempsey-Brennan match has been tentatively arranged for the last three months. Promoter Rickard originally planned to conduct the contest in September, but it was deferred and dated for October. The edict from the Boxing Governors, prohibiting contests between heavyweights until the sport had, by easy stages, attained that point where it would be possible to sanction the more important bouts, compelled another postponement of this match, as well as the bout between Georges Carpentier and Battling Levinsky, which was subsequently shifted to Jersey City. Promoter Rickard then scheduled Dempsey and Brennan to settle their quarrel on Dec. 2 but the absence of official indorsement in time to permit of the necessary training caused the promoter to again defer holding the bout. Then Rickard set the bout for Dec. 14.

Dempsey, through the latter arrangement, was compelled to discard a lucrative moving picture proposition. The champion, according to his original plans, was to visit the Coast Dec. 8 and begin work on another screen serial. Under the present arrangement Dempsey is foregoing the camera work for the chance to defend his crown. Whether he will pose for the pictures after the bout is not definitely determined. Manager Jack Kearns said last night that he was considering a picture proposition, but was not decided, as he also had under consideration a proposal to organize a tour of the country for the champion.

Boxers in Training.

Dempsey will do all his training in this city, Manager Kearns said last night. The champion takes daily road runs from his apartment on the upper west side, through part of Central Park, and does gymnasium work aboard the naval training ship, Granite State, at the foot of West Ninety-sixth Street. Dempsey will follow a course of light training for about a week, and then enter upon a serious preparatory campaign. The champion weighs about 192 pounds now, Manager Kearns said, and will enter the ring against Brennan weighing about 186 pounds.

Brennan has been training at Joe Thomas's gymnasium at Diamond Hill, Providence, R. I. The Chicagoan has been assisted by Panama Joe Gans and Kid Norfolk, colored boxers, under the management of Leo Flynn, who also looks after Brennan's ring affairs.

The scheduled hearing into the circumstances surrounding the bout between Silent Martin and K. O. Jaffe, local middleweights, at the Commonwealth Sporting Club last Saturday night, was not held yesterday by the Boxing Commission. The officials plan to conduct the hearing today when the board will again convene.

Formal Welcome Today for Horemans, Belgian Cue Star

A luncheon will be tendered Edouard Horemans at the Hotel Astor at 1 o'clock this afternoon. It will be in the nature of a formal welcome to the famous Belgian billiard player who has come to this country for the express purpose of trying to strip Willie Hoppe of the balkline crown he has now worn for fifteen years. Hoppe and some of the leading men identified with the sport in this section as well as newspaper representatives have been invited to attend. It is practically certain that the champion will be among those present. It will be the first time that Horemans and Hoppe have ever met. The Belgian intended to begin practicing yesterday afternoon, but it was impossible to get a table set up for him in time. He, therefore, proposes to hold his first limbering up in this country this morning.

SPEAR IS WINNER OVER STEINBUGLER

Ties Servatius for Lead in Class C Billiard Tourney—Johann Defeats Low.

Charles Steinbugler last night met the first reverse he has suffered in the Class C 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at the Broadway Academy for the metropolitan championship of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. He was defeated in the second match of the evening by George Spear by a score of 150 to 90. In the first match Joseph Johann turned in his initial victory in the final round of play when, by a score of 150 to 141, he took the measure of John Low in one of the most keenly contested matches thus far staged.

Because of the fact that Spear and Steinbugler were regarded as having equal chances in the quest for the title, their match attracted chief interest. A big gallery had assembled by the time they stepped to the table, and the enthusiasts were rewarded by some really good playing by Spear. Steinbugler was a disappointment. For some unaccountable reason he was unable to find his normal stroke and throughout the game he was off his stride. The result was that Spear scored a comparatively easy victory by the decisive margin of 60 points. Spear was in excellent form, as his average of 3 15-27 attests. He made high runs of 33 and 18 and injected them into the proceedings just when they did him the most good. He made them early in the game, and, to a great extent, they seemed to have a psychological effect upon Steinbugler. The loser's average was 3 12-29.

Spear started the game with a run of eighteen. In the seventh inning he followed this with a cluster of thirty-three. By that time he was leading by 75 to 24, and had the game on ice. Steinbugler managed to pick up a little toward the middle of the game, but he never made any serious impression upon the commanding lead that Spear piled up early in the match.

As a result of his victory, Spear advanced to a tie with Louis A. Servatius for first place in the tournament. Each of these players has scored two victories and no defeats in the final round of the championship hunt.

In the game between Johann and Low, the former broke away from the barrier to a flying start. At the end of the thirteenth inning, he was leading by a score of 71 to 39 and the game threatened to develop into a virtual walkover for him. The fact that he had such a comfortable lead may have caused him to slow up in his work. Whatever the reason, Low gradually gained on him and, had it not been for the fact that he missed a masse shot after having scored fifteen points in his last inning, he might have run out the game and won. At the time he made his unfortunate miss he needed only nine points to win.

In this game Johann averaged 3 36-38 and Low 3 30-37. The winner had high runs of 23 and 20 and Low's best efforts netted him 17 and 15.

Player.	Won.	Lost.	Per Ct.
L. A. Servatius	2	0	1.000
G. Spear	2	0	1.000
C. Steinbugler	1	1	.500
J. Low	1	2	.333
J. Johann	1	2	.333
J. Langdon	0	2	.000

MILLS TAKES ANOTHER.

Adds to Lead in Pocket Billiard Tourney by Defeat of Renauld.

John Mills last night cued his way into an impressive lead in the pocket billiard tournament at the Rational Recreation Academy for the Interborough championship of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. By defeating Jack Renauld, 100 to 73, Mills scored his fourth consecutive victory. He has not yet been defeated. The nearest man to him is Robert Crespi, who has won both of his matches.

Ever since the beginning of the tournament Mills has demonstrated an ability as a shot maker that has far surpassed anything shown by the other players, with the possible exception of Crespi. He has been steady in all his games and nothing seems too difficult for him to be able to pocket. Furthermore, his game is rounded out with excellent position play.

Had it not been for the fact that Mills was inclined to wax a bit careless after gaining a commanding lead in the early frames of last night's play, the chances are that he would have scored an even more decisive victory. He got away in front and, while he was never headed, Renauld crept dangerously close at one stage of the proceedings. It was then that Mills spurted and regained complete command of the situation.

At the end of the seventh frame, Mills was prancing along in front by a score of 59 to 36. He became careless for a few frames and Renauld managed to cut down his lead until, at the end of the tenth frame, the score stood 79 to 68 in Mills's favor. Realizing that Renauld was dangerously close, Mills speeded up his work and managed to win a few frames later.

Gus Gardner and Robert Crespi are scheduled to meet in tonight's match. The standing:

Player.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
J. Mills	4	0	1000
R. Crespi	4	0	1000
C. Hund	2	1	.667
G. Gardner	1	2	.333
F. A. Saunders	1	2	.333
J. Renauld	1	3	.250
A. Wickers	0	3	.000

COHEN IS EASY WINNER.

Defeats Sasaki, 35 to 14, in Three-Cushion Billiard Tourney.

Playing an excellent open game, Monroe Cohen last night defeated K. Sasaki, 35 to 14, in the amateur handicap three-cushion billiard tournament at Joe Thum's Academy. Sasaki is a scratch player and was called upon to concede nine points to Cohen, but, as the final score shows, Cohen did not need his handicap to win by an appreciable margin. The game lasted sixty innings. Tonight Sasaki and Frank Baker will meet. The standing:

Player.	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
M. Letzter	6	0	1000
S. Garfunkle	5	2	.714
J. Cohen	4	2	.667
J. McDaniel	5	3	.625

TIGERS LOSE ONLY THREE OF 'VARSITY

Callahan, Legendre, Scheerer First-Line Players Who Will Not Return.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 18.—Old Nassau's football prospects for next Fall are rosy, for the Tigers lose by graduation only two of the men who started in the Yale game last Saturday. Captain Mike Callahan and Armant Legendre are the only members of the class of 1921 who drew first-line positions on what was probably the greatest team that has worn the Orange and Black in the past decade.

The original Yale backfield will return intact next September, barring ineligibilities. Joe Scheerer, who started in the Harvard game and replaced Frank Murrey at fullback last Saturday, is a senior and will be lost to the team at the June commencement, as will Shad Davis, the crack end, who has been alternating between first and second string all year. Thomas, substitute centre, and Halsey, substitute tackle, complete the list of seniors on the team. Of these only three, Scheerer, Callahan and Legendre, are first string players.

Don Lourie, who remained at quarterback throughout both big games and proved himself one of the greatest field generals and open field runners of the season, is a junior this Fall. His 20-yard dash to a touchdown at Cambridge and his run of 50 yards through the Yale team on Saturday from a fake kick formation were high lights of Princeton's season.

Lourie Champion Jumper.

In addition to his prowess on the gridiron, Lourie is champion broad jumper of England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, a title which he won at Stamford Bridge, London, last Summer, when he competed in the championships there as a member of Princeton's track team, which later defeated Oxford at the Queen's Club. Lourie registered a leap of 23 feet and 1 inch against Harvard last May, and is Princeton's best sprinter. He has done the century in 10 flat.

Gilroy, the left halfback, is a sophomore, and has two more years of intercollegiate football before him, while Hank Garrity, the Tigers' best plunging back, is a junior. Garrity is a star infielder on the baseball team. Frank Murrey, fullback, who has booted drop-kicks against Yale in two successive years, is also a third man at Princeton. Like Lourie, he develops his speed on the track during the Spring and Winter, and finished second in the national 600-yard championship last year.

In addition to these men, all of whom are good students and should be on hand ready for play next Fall, Princeton possesses several crack substitutes. Al Wittmer, who played regular fullback a year ago and subbed in both games this year, is a junior. He was handicapped slightly this Fall by an injured shoulder which was thrown out in the navy game and prevented him from scrimmaging much after that. Cleaves, substitute back against Harvard, is only a sophomore.

Keck Will Return Next Year.

As for the line, Stan Keck, the Tigers' best forward, who is considered at Princeton as the hero of the season, has another year to play, and for the second time the Tigers' defense will probably centre about his 210-pound bulk. He made a perfect record at goals after touchdown this Fall, without a failure to his credit. Dickinson and McManmon, the guards, and Bob Hooper, the other tackle, are all members of the class of 1922 and have another year. These men will have no easy job to make the team next Fall, if the forwards on Princeton's famous "omelette" eleven manage to keep up in their studies during the current year. Pink Baker and Bill Morgan, regulars in 1919, have been playing with the scrubs all Fall and would have found their way into the games again this Fall had they not been below in their class work last June. Pixley, the transfer from Ohio State, who drew Camp's 1919 selection as third All-American tackle, has lost nothing of his prowess at Princeton, and Lipscomb, the "omelette" centre, will be available in Captain Callahan's place. Lipscomb was twice All-American scholastic centre at Exeter and once All-Freshman centre on the 1919 freshman team here.

Ed Stinson, right end, is a junior, and so is Dick Raymond. The latter did not get into either of the big games because he was in poor physical condition, losing about fifteen pounds during the last month, but should return to form next year. Both Davis and Legendre will be graduated in June. Snively and Griffin of the "omelettes" are of Varsity calibre on the wings.

Johnny Gorman, sub quarterback, is another player who may develop into a regular before his two more years of football are over. The freshman team this Fall, which lost to Yale and tied Harvard, was decidedly light and will probably not furnish a great deal of material to Roper next Fall.

CHAMPION IS ELIMINATED.

Morgan Hughes Defeated in Pocket Billiard Match at Doyle's.

Another champion was eliminated at John Doyle's Academy last night when Morgan Hughes was defeated in the annual handicap pocket billiard tournament by Vernon Whittle by a score of 75 to 49. Hughes last year won the national pocket billiard championship of the American Amateur Billiard Association, and last night he attempted to concede Whittle ten points handicap. Later developments proved that Whittle did not need the handicap, as he defeated the champion better than even.

It was the last game in the elimination round. Nearly 100 players started in this tournament and five now remain. They are Vernon Whittle, Edward Dale, John Meaney, Charles Le Huquet and Max Winchell. Play in the final round will begin tonight.

The result of the match came as a distinct surprise. Hughes was generally favored to win. In seeking a reason for the upset of the more or less well-known dope it was decided that Hughes has been devoting too much attention to three-cushion billiards this season and has not had sufficient practice at the pocket game. Whittle, however, earned his victory. He played a strong game, and, even if Hughes had been at his best, it is doubtful whether he would have been able to concede his opponent a margin of ten points and still win.

In an earlier game in the same tournament, Charles Le Huquet worked his way into the finals by defeating Edward Smith. The score was 75 to 66. Both players enjoy a handicap of thirty-five balls, so that they competed on even terms.

Staging one of the most thrilling finishes yet seen in the annual handicap snooker tournament at Doyle's, Edward Driscoll last night defeated Edward Townsend, 77 to 72. Townsend virtually threw the game away by failing to think. He had the game well in hand and needed only the brown ball, counting four, to win. He had a shot at the ball and it was not particularly difficult, but, in attempting to play position for the blue—something which was not at all necessary—he missed the brown ball. Then Driscoll knocked off the brown, blue, pink and black in succession for a total of twenty-two points and won.

In another match in the snooker tourney Nat Lewis defeated John Anderson, 128 to 77. The game was fairly close until the color balls were reached. Then Lewis's uncanny ability to snooker his opponents stood him in good stead and he forged ahead to win by the most decisive margin yet recorded.

CAMBRIDGE, England, Nov. 18.—The American women's hockey team scored its first victory today against a combined team of Girton and Newham Colleges. The score was 4 goals to 2.

O'NEILL'S MEN HAVE FINAL SCRIMMAGE

Long Clash With Second Team Completes Columbia's Preparations for Penn.

Columbia's last scrimmage of the year yesterday was also one of the longest, Coach O'Neill keeping the 'Varsity battling against the scrubs for more than an hour and a half before he called a halt to the hostilities. The scrimmage was the third straight this week for the Blue and White, and to all intents and purposes drew the curtain over the team's preparations for the final game with Penn tomorrow at the Polo Grounds. There will be the usual Friday afternoon drill this afternoon, but it will be of an easy-going nature and will not call for anything more strenuous than a signal practice.

Several of O'Neill's cripples were still on the sidelines yesterday, but they could have been injected into the scrimmage if necessary. Walder, Modarelli, Moszczenski and Canapary were the first-string men who were idle during the scrimmage, although they all took part in the signal drill. They are all expected to start tomorrow's tussle, Walder being the only doubtful one among the quartet. If the big guard is still limping with his injured knee, Hinch, a regular guard last season, will start in his place.

Defensive measures to check Penn's attack formed a chief part of the scrimmage battle. After the 'Varsity had tried its attack against the seconds for an hour and with great success, its opponents took the ball. The seconds were equipped with several of Heisman's choicest formations, and the scrimmage was frequently interrupted while the coaches pointed out the most effective method of stopping certain plays. The ends came in for a long session on ways and means of checking the speedy Rex Wray, who is expected to be the chief trouble-maker for the Quakers because of his unusual speed in circling the ends. With the redoubtable Joe Strauss missing from the Penn backfield, the brunt of the Red and Blue attack will fall on the shoulders of the undersized halfback who shone against Penn State, Pitt and Dartmouth.

Yesterday's workout on South Field was brought to an end before dark, the players reported at 3:30 and, after the field had been cleared of spectators, O'Neill wasted no time in launching on his program. Besides the scrimmage, the 'Varsity was sent through a five-minute signal workout, with all the cripples getting back into action. With Modarelli at tackle again, Calloway was returned to his old position at guard, where he was paired with Hinch. Captain Jack Kleninger and Ralph Forsythe were at the ends, and it seems improbable that Bob Pulleyn will be assigned to start against Penn. In the backfield were Harris, quarterback; Canapary and Thornton at halfback and Moszczenski at fullback.

The Penn squad will arrive in New York this afternoon and as soon as possible will go to the Polo Grounds for a short practice. Heisman wants his punters and halfbacks to study the air currents of the Harlem stadium and will familiarize his players with the field. The team will stop at the Hotel Pennsylvania. On Saturday morning the Red and Blue rooters, to the number of 3,000, will follow in the wake of their team. The Penn Band will accompany the delegation and play between the halves at tomorrow's battle. In addition to the contingent coming from Philadelphia, there will be a considerable number of Penn graduates from this city present in the Red and Blue cheering section.

Columbia athletic authorities said last night that a crowd of 30,000 would watch the two old rivals play tomorrow. Columbia undergraduates and Alumni will be there in force. The game will be the first home contest that the Blue and White has played outside the confines of South Field since football was restored in 1915 and is the first of a series of tussles in which Penn and Cornell will alternate as the attraction at the Polo Grounds. The game will begin at 2 o'clock.

NEW YORK BOXERS WIN.

Take All but One Bout in Intercity Tourney with Philadelphia.

The boxing contingent sent over by Philadelphia for the intercity amateur boxing tourament last night at the Crescent A. C., Brooklyn, fared poorly at the hands of the sturdy fighters representing New York City. Out of the twelve bouts contested in four classes the Quaker City ring men were able to win only a single bout, the lone victory being gained by A. Slattina of the Shamrock A. C., Philadelphia, in one of the trial bouts in the 135-pound division. Slattina won the judges' decision over F. Harlan of the Paulist A. C. and was the only Philadelphia representative to reach any of the final rounds.

When he finally did reach the final round, however, Slattina found more than his match in Ben Bostein, a two-handed fighter from the Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., who stopped the Quaker abruptly in the second round. Slattina absorbed a great deal of punishment in the opening period and some more in the second round, before the referee intervened and saved him from further trouble.

The other final clashes, in which the New Yorkers fought it out among themselves, all went the regulation distance. W. O'Connell, Paulist A. C., won the laurels in the 130-pound division, in which he triumphed over Patsy Wallace of Philadelphia in the semi-final and conquered Willie Hausner of the Clark House A. A. in the last set-to. Hausner had previously stopped J. Blasland of the Shamrock A. C., Philadelphia, in the first round of their encounter.

The 145-pound class also brought together two New York lads in Milton Weiss, Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., and Louis Aldrin, Norwegian Turn and A. C., the former gaining the judges' decision in three rounds. W. Singer, also of the Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., was the winner in the 118-pound class, defeating Sam Fritz, Clark House, in the regulation three rounds.

The summaries:

118-Pound Class, Trials—S. Fritz, Clark House A. A., New York, defeated Charles Rice, Shamrock A. C., Philadelphia, three rounds, judges' decision; W. Singer, Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., New York, stopped G. Johnsen, Shamrock A. C., Philadelphia, one round, referee's decision.

135-Pound Class, Trials—B. Bostein, Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., New York, defeated J. McGurk, Shamrock A. C., Philadelphia, three rounds, judges' decision; A. Slattina, Shamrock A. C., Philadelphia, defeated F. Harlan, Paulist A. C., New York, three rounds, judges' decision.

Automobile Race Has 13 Entries.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 18.—Indicating the racing drivers' disregard of superstition, thirteen entries were on file today for the 250-mile championship automobile race to be run on the Los Angeles Speedway Thanksgiving Day. On the entry list, which closed last night, were Eddie O'Donnell, Roscoe Sarles, Eddie Miller, Jimmy Murphy, Tommy Milton, Waldo Stein, Al Melcher and Jim Crosby. Captain Eddie Rickenbacker will act as referee.

Jones Lets Team Off With Dummy Breaking-Through Practice and Signal Workout.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 18.—Instead of driving the Yale eleven through high-geared scrimmaging this afternoon to test its speed and team cohesiveness, Head Coach Tad Jones let the players off with dummy breaking-through drill, combined with an exacting signal rehearsal.

A tentative change was made in the line-up when Bob Lay succeeded Frank Kelly at right halfback, and the coaches said tonight that, although indications were that Kelly would be given the assignment, Lay is a strong possibility to start the match. He is a former Lawrenceville player and starred in the freshman backfield three years ago. Last season and this Fall he was prevented from becoming a regular selection because of a severe injury. He has not yet fully recovered, but the coaches feel that his defensive game is greatly needed in the backfield and he will get into one of the playing periods if he does not start the match. Kelly's brilliancy has been punctuated with stretches of irregular ability to gain and poor tackling, although he is probably the most powerful line forcer in the Eli backfield.

With this exception, the line-up which was ordered when the eleven returned from Gedney Farms on Tuesday was maintained and the coaches expect to use that playing combination against the Crimson, including Perry Bean and Jess Strum, third-string players, at right end and fullback, respectively.

Seconds Use Harvard Plays.

In today's drill the second team players were given Harvard formations and the regulars in dummy defense attempted to check them. The play was halted frequently to allow the coaches to point out to individual players their failure to cover certain strategic points.

At the close of the drill the scrub team was dismissed for the season. Head Coach Tad Jones and Dr. Billy Bull, who had been director of the scrub squad, made speeches thanking the reserves for their valuable help in developing the regulars. The scrubs broke training tonight with an elaborate banquet.

Plans for tomorrow's practice include an early visit to the bowl by the first and second elevens and signal rehearsal of forty minutes, after which the bowl will be turned over to the Harvard squad for the afternoon.

Heach Coach Tad Jones was greatly disappointed today because scrimmage was impossible, in view of the closeness of the Harvard match. Since the eleven returned from the Princeton game rain has fallen daily until today and actual football has been impossible. The Yale eleven which played against Princeton was composed without practice in any previous game, and seven of the men who have been picked for Saturday's match have been given their places only in the present week and have not had the advantage of even scrimmaging together, much less playing again as a cohesive team. The novices include Perry Bean, right end; Jess Sturm, fullback; Herbert Kempton, quarterback; Malcolm Aldrich, left halfback. Kempton and Aldrich, however, have had previous 'Varsity experience.

Gridiron Still Soft.

The coaches were somewhat depressed tonight at the condition of the gridiron in the bowl. It had been muddy for several days because of the continued rain, and the dry, warm atmosphere today helped to harden the playing surface only slightly. Only a weather miracle can turn it to a compact footing for the players by Saturday.

While no poolroom betting has taken place and few individual wagers have been made, all wagers that have been laid indicate a belief that Yale's showing against Harvard will be much superior to that against Princeton.

Today's line-up was:

MAY BOX IN ARMORIES.

Decision Expected to be Made by Maj. General O'Ryan's Board.

Whether boxing under military supervision will be permitted in State armories under the provisions of the Walker law will probably be known today following a meeting of Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan's State Armory Board. The meeting is scheduled for the Municipal Building at 4 o'clock, and it is expected that a decision on the matter will be forthcoming when the proposition is reviewed.

The proposal has many advocates who favors the conduct of bouts in the armories. Among the leading proponents of the plan is Senator James J. Walker, who introduced the bill re-establishing boxing here. Senator Walker's reason for advocating the use of the armories for boxing bouts is contained in the following declaration:

"Boxing should be conducted on as wide a scale as possible. It should not be confined to any one or two clubs of importance. The sport should be available in a number of clubs and at reasonable prices, with strict regulation and supervision, of course. One of the best means of making boxing available for the general public would be to permit the use of armories. With bouts conducted in the armories popular prices would prevail and everybody would have an opportunity to witness contests. For this reason I am heartily in favor of permitting the use of armories for boxing bouts."

Women Will Help Handle The Harvard-Yale Throng

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 18.—War service of the Wellesley relief unit will be turned to account at the Yale-Harvard game Saturday. Members of the New Haven Club announce canteen and motor parking arrangements in which women will figure. This will be the first big game in which women will have had a share in the arrangements.

Room hunting in New Haven went into the class of a major sport among Yale graduates and others today. The advance guard of ticket holders poured in and the first quest was for a sleeping place. Hotels were sold out months ago and handy spare rooms weeks ago.

The ticket office was besieged by applicants for tickets to the game, of which there was none. The speculative individual who knew of "a pair of godd ones" was asking $35 for them. The Police Department has unleashed a squad of plain-clothes men to watch for violations of the ordinance against speculation.

HARVARD APPLIES FINISHING TOUCHES

Crimson Will Start Almost Same Eleven Against Yale as Against Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 18.—The Harvard football coaches today put the finishing touches on their eleven, which tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock will set forth for New Haven, confident of another victory in the Yale Bowl. The drill was a final rehearsal of plays, followed by a long session of kicking practice, after which the Stadium gates were thrown open and the students, marching behind their band, trooped into the concrete seats.

The parade was led by McCagg, Emmons and O'Connell, the 'Varsity crew, baseball and track captains, and behind them marched seven fathers of young football players who will represent the Crimson in the Bowl tomorrow. The players whose fathers watched their last practice from the stands were Hubbard, Macomber, Humphrey, Owen, Churchill, Fitts and Tierney, and the "lucky seven" omen is considered a good sign for the Crimson Saturday afternoon.

The graduates and undergraduates cheered the three 'Varsity teams as they ran up and down the gridiron, the 'Varsity lineup being: Kane, left end; Sedgwick, left tackle; Stolbert, left guard; Havemyer, centre; Brown, right guard; Hubbard, right tackle; Crocker, right end; Fitzgerald, quarterback; Owen, left halfback; Churchill, right halfback, and Horween, fullback. Prior to this drill, Tom Woods had returned to his regular place at right guard, but he did no other work. There is no doubt about Woods starting the game Saturday, so Coach Fisher says. Woods not only will start, but Trainer Donovan says there is no reason why he should not go the full distance. The presence of Sedgwick at left tackle was according to expectations. With the exception of Sedgwick, Harvard's front against Yale on Saturday will be the same as it was at the kickoff against the Tigers two weeks ago.

Tomorrow, when the team works out at New Haven, Coach Fisher will make his final decision regarding the backfield. If the going is heavy, he may use Huhphrey, and just now it looks as if there were no intention to use Fitts at the beginning of the game. If the going is heavy Harvard wants all the weight it can muster. The team, as it walked through signals, with Tom Woods at right guard, includes five men, Kane, Woods, Havemyer, Hubbard and Horween, who were in the thickest of last year's Yale game in the Cambridge Stadium. Although six of the present players are new, the coaches consider that they have a much better backfield than a year ago and that the eleven is likely to be more powerful on attack and better on rushline defense than in the 1919 game. A great effort has been made this year to perfect the kickers, and also to provide a more versatile forward passing game.

BATTLE FOR MAROON TEAM.

The Fordham varsity footbal team whipped the Maroon scrubs in a practice game at Fordham Field yesterday afternoon by a score of 21 to 0. This score, however, does not indicate the spirited opposition which the regulars encountered. The three touchdowns were directly due to forward passes, two from Noonan to Fitzpatrick and one from Kearns to Ryan. Berry, the second string quarterback, and Halloran, who played with the scrubs yesterday in the first scrimmage that he has been able to participate in since he was injured nearly three weeks ago, made some long gains for the losers, but they were unable to break through the regular line once they got the ball in the varsity's territory.

Pat Miller also broke into the game yesterday. It was his first appearance in scrimmage since the Georgetown game last month. He went in at centre for the regulars and displayed his usual fine brand of football. He blocked a punt by Granfield, the scrub fullback, early in the contest, and this led to the varsity's first touchdown a moment later.

The Maroon athletes are all in fair shape again, and unless there are further injuries Dumoe will be able to start his entire regular team against Holy Cross next week. Several substitutes will probably appear in the Fordham line-up against Muhlenburg tomorrow, as Dumoe intends to save the men who tend to injuries until the contest with the Purple.

DARTMOUTH BURNS PRACTICE DUMMY

Eleven Holds Final Drill of Season at Hanover—Line-up for Brown Game Settled.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 18.—Dartmouth today completed its home training. After a light workout in the baseball cage in Alumni Gymnasium, the eleven proceeded with the burning of the dummy and other traditional observances in connection with the final practice. Captain Robertson was the first speaker at the impromptu celebration, and Coach Spears followed with a few words of thanks for the splendid showing made by the whole squad, regulars and substitutes. Coach Spears expressed himself as confident of the Green's ability to defeat Brown Saturday at Braves Field, and concluded with the prediction that the transcontinental trip the following week, which takes the team out to Seattle, Wash., would also result in victory for the Darmouth squad.

Spears put the team through one of the hardest workouts of the season this afternoon. He gave them an hour's signal drill, and followed this with a dummy scrimmage against the second team, equipped with Brown plays. The Green attack moved smoothly, an great improvement was shown in the defense against the trick plays of the Providence team. To conclue the practice season Spears tried out the Green trick plays and announced himself as satisfied with the results.

The backfield line-up as announced by Spears for the Brown game on Saturday will consist of Jordan at quarter, Robertson and Burke, halfbacks, and Shelburne, fullback. This is regarded as the best possible quartet. Spears has also the following men in perfect condition on whom he can call at any time: Grundman, Bower, Holbrook and Malmquist. Burke has been given the call over Holbrook at right half on account of his brilliant showing in the Penn game a week ago. Despite the fact that he is but a sophomore, Spears feels that he will be able to stand up against the opposition sure to be developed when the team tackles the Brown Bear, and for this reason has decided to start him instead of Holbrook, a veteran of three years' experience.

In the line, G. Moore and Lynch, 145-pound star, will start at ends, with Gordon, Forster, Strong and Thressie ready to be substituted. Sonnenburg, the Green's best bet for All-American honors, will be at tackle, with Neidlinger as his running mate on the other side of the line. Aschenback and Crisp will start at guard, with Texas Bill Cunningham at centre.

Thirty men will make the trip, and immediately afterward Coach Spears will select twenty-one of them for the transcontinental jaunt to the University of Washington game at Seattle a week later.

Howard Jones Picks Players For All-Conference Eleven

MEDAL FOR CHESS WIZARD.

Rzeszewski, Boy Marvel, Solves Problems in Record Time.

Award of a gold medal to Samuel Rzeszewski, the 9-year-old Polish chess wizard, for his solution of three problems propounded by American experts, was announced by Frank J. Marshall, United States champion, at the Marshall Chess Club last night. The problems were solved in the record time of three minutes and twenty-five seconds.

The medal will be formally presented Thanksgiving Day, when the boy will play more than twenty American masters here. Among the players who will try their skill against him are Z. L. Hoover, President of the Correspondence Chess League of America, and Archibald J. McClure, President of the Eighth American Chess Congress, to be held next year.

DOBIE PLANS NEW ATTACK AT ITHACA

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 18.—The first favorable weather conditions of the week permitted the Cornell football squad to get out of doors again today, and Coach Dobie took advantage of this opportunity to hold the stiffest workout of the drive for the Penn game, one of the few remaining scrimmages on the program being played. The 'Varsity showed plenty of pep, and the plays were snappy as long as the regular lineup was in the game, but when Dobie sent in substitutes, and he did that early, things did not go as well, and the scrubs almost held their own. The wear and tear of a long season has begun to tell on some of the first-string men, and though no serious injuries have developed minor ailments are being treated by Trainer Frank Sheehan and Dr. Balderry, the squad's physician.

It is not expected that these will keep any of the regulars out of the line-up for the Penn game, but this condition is causing Coach Dobie to use caution in handling the regulars.

The Ithacans did well in rehearsing the new plays for the Penn game, and they had made marked progress in the education by the time substitutions compelled a change of tactics. Dobie had Mayer, Kaw and Carey playing on the scrubs. They used a series of new running plays.

The impression has been gathered that Dobie realizes that the simple stuff he has used this year will not do against Penn, and he is planning a new style of attack.

Among the early substitutions were Kay for Knauss at left tackle, Goetz and Ebersole for Pendleton and Miner at guards, Dorrill for Brayton at centre, and Dunley, Livingston and Jewett in the backfield.

N. Y. U. LINE IS SHIFTED.

Tackle and Guard Positions Altered in Year's Last Scrimmage.

Coach Gargan gave the New York University football team its final scrimmage session of the year yesterday afternoon on Ohio Field. Today's workout, which will be only a light drill in the formations, will be the last practice of the season. The Violet meets Stevens tomorrow in the final game.

In yesterday's scrimmage the Violet players showed more power than ever before this season. They took the ball the full length of the field three times on nothing but straight football. On the defense they put up stiff opposition and the scrubs were unable to make any good gains.

Gargan surprised the onlookers yesterday by making several shifts in the line, but whether these will be permanent or not is still a question. Horrigan, who has been holding down one of the guard positions, went to tackle, as did Edgar, who has also been playing guard. This combination worked at tackle all afternoon and made a good showing.

At the guard places Gargan had Guiney and Maccomber, both veterans of last year's eleven. The former has been in this position all season and Maccomber has worked in several of the games. The coach seemed to like the way this set of forwards worked and it is very possible that this combination will start against the Engineers.

Levin, the little end who has been out for some time with a pulled muscle in his hip, was in for the full time yesterday and he will probably be in shape to start on Saturday. Adams at left end has been a consistent player all season and has not been out of any of the games, but on the other end there have been a great many shifts. With Levin and Adams on the wings again, the defense will be materially strengthened and the overhead attack will be bettered.

WARNING TO AUTO OWNERS.

Must Drive Carefully to Yale Bowl, Says Official.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—All roads will lead to the Yale Bowl at New Haven, Conn., on Saturday, but the automobile drivers who use them to reach the scene of the Harvard-Yale football game will lose their licenses if they drive so as to endanger life by violation of the laws, according to Frank A. Goodwin, State Registrar of Motor Vehicles. In an announcement tonight he said that Massachusetts would work with Connecticut in keeping down accidents on Saturday, and that inspectors would be stationed along the highways to report all offenders.

OHIO STATE READY FOR SUPREME TEST

Only One Regular Is Likely to Be Missing in Line-Up Against Illinois Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 18.—Several hundred students were on hand to cheer the Ohio State team here tonight as twenty-eight players, led by Coach Jack Wilce, departed on the first leg of their journey for Urbana, where Illinois will be faced Saturday afternoon in a struggle which will decide the championship of the Western Conference. The Buckeyes will stop at Danville, Ill., Friday, thirty miles from Urbana, until Saturday, when they will enter the lair of Bob Zuppke's Illini, shortly before noon.

Both elevens indulged in a snappy signal drill on their home gridirons this afternoon for the last time before their title clash. Coach Zuppke will take his squad to the Champagne Country Club Friday morning, where they will remain until a few hours before game time. Wilce declared this afternoon that the Buckeyes were in good shape for the game. Every first string man will be in the lineup, with the possible exception of right tackle Spiers. Trott made a very creditable showing in this position against Michigan.

ILLINOIS CAPTAIN INJURED.

Depler May Be Missing in Gridiron Game with Ohio State.

URBANA Ill., Nov. 18.—Joy over the news that Halfback Don Peden of the Illinois eleven may recover from the injury to his arm and be able to play part of the game against Ohio State next Saturday was turned to gloom today when it was learned that Captain John Depler, centre, had received a serious injury to his shoulder in the final four minutes of scrimmage last night.

The only reserve centre of the Illinois football team, Reitsch, is almost without practice, since Captain Depler had been fortunate in avoiding injuries and was regarded as one of the strongest factors in the light forward line of the Illinois team. It was feared Peden's arm had been fractured playing against Wisconsin last Saturday, but Coach Zuppe today said he had so far recovered that he might be used in one period.

HARD DRILL FOR STEVENS.

'Varsity Eleven Beats Scrubs in Regular Game by 28 to 7.

The Stevens Tech football squad held its last practice yesterday afternoon before the wind-up of the season in the game with N. Y. U. tomorrow. When Coach Durborow retired from the field, he seemed well pleased with the dress rehearsal, but he would not express any undue confidence of the result of the game.

Coaches Durborow, Harris and Mitchell had the first and second teams going nearly all afternoon. The side lines of the field were desolate, the guards keeping everyone out of sight of the gridiron. A complete veil of mystery shrouds the movement of the team and very little could be learned following the practice.

One thing was learned, however, and that was that a regular game was staged between the regulars and the scrubs and the first team won by a score of 28 to 7.

The band of the Eighth Coast Artillery, New York Guard, has been engaged to give a concert at the game. A huge bonfire is being arranged for, in the event that an undefeated season may be celebrated, and two dances are to be held in the evening, one in Castle Stevens and the other in the gymnasium. Both of these buildings are being used and two dance orchestras engaged to accommodate 500 couples which have already subscribed to the affair. The members of the team will be the guests of honor.

PRACTICE IN THE MUD.

West Virginia Football Players Work Out on Heavy Field.

Special to The New York Times.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 18.—A field deep in mud and water did not deter Coach McIntire in his determination to have the West Virginia football players get a workout today, and for a full hour the varsity plowed up and down the gridiron. Only the most favorable weather can prevent a heavy field for the Bethany game Saturday, and Coach McIntire thinks that a wet or heavy gridiron will be against the Mountaineers.

HARDING'S SECRETARY OF STATE.

In Washington, according to The Tribune's correspondent, there is a positive expectation that Mr. ROOT "will be offered, and will accept, the post of Secretary of State." Information to this effect is said to come from a man who was "closest to HARDING during the campaign." That description may be taken as pointing to ex-Senator SUTHERLAND. In his opinion, it would be a "public calamity" if the new President were to fail to obtain Mr. ROOT's services in the Cabinet. And if he entered it at all, it would inevitably be as head of the State Department. It is announced that Mr. ROOT has an appointment to confer with Senator HARDING on Dec. 10. These indications, together with the prompt opening upon Mr. ROOT of certain newspaper mud-batteries, furnish presumptive proof that he is at least being seriously thought of as the next Secretary of State.

If his coming appointment to that office were definitely to be made known, what would be the effect? It would at once fix in the public mind the international policy of the Republican Administration. We should know that Mr. ROOT's campaign speech, in which he outlined a plan for bringing the United States into the League of Nations, was more than a personal view, more than an individual argument, and was, in fact, the considered program of a party. This would be of great and immediate benefit. It would clear away a mass of uncertainties. It would put France and England and other friendly nations on notice what they have to expect from the Government at Washington. At one stroke, the next President could in this way settle the main features of his foreign policy. It would be sufficiently embodied in Mr. ROOT.

It may be objected that the selection of Mr. ROOT for the State Department, would instantly precipitate a party row. The terrible wrath of HIRAM JOHNSON and Senator BORAH would blaze forth full in the President's face. Delightful Republican harmony would be shattered at the very beginning. But the plain truth is that Mr. HARDING has got to have it out with the bitter-enders sooner or later, and the more quickly he gets it over with the better for all concerned. Besides, the election of a large Republican majority in the Senate has sensibly weakened the Johnson-Borah clique. They no longer hold the balance of party power. They can now be disregarded with impunity. If they elect to fight, they will be in danger of being known, not as bitter-enders, but as little-enders. And the strong probability is that they would not venture to attack their new President. They would doubtless feel compelled to do a certain amount of oratorical face-saving, but beyond the ordeal of listening to that, little need be feared from them. Anyhow, if there is to be a breach in the Republican Party, it may as well be faced from the start. Certainly it cannot be salved over with words, no matter how honeyed.

Both at home and abroad the news that Mr. ROOT was to be Secretary of State would make an excellent impression. He would be felt to be a man level with his tasks, fitted to his opportunities. To ample and recently enlarged knowledge of sentiment in Europe, he would add experience in the State Department along with skill in negotiation and in the management of men. Above all, his appointment would give to the country assurance that it would speedily find its path in international affairs. A thousand difficulties for the incoming President would be solved if he were in due course to make public the fact that Mr. ROOT was to be his Secretary of State.

PUTTING OUT THE RADICALS.

It is cheering to see the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor taking steps against some of the most dangerous enemies of organized labor. It has made over the committee to unionize the steel workers. JOHN J. FITZPATRICK, Chairman, and WILLIAM Z. FOSTER, Secretary, extreme radicals, have been taken off the committee. Their successors are conservatives. If President GOMPERS in the last year or two has seemed to yield too much to the wilder leaders, to the radicals "boring from within," he has seen his mistake.

He and the other trusted leaders of the Federation are opposed both to foreign and to domestic radicalism. In the temper of the country and its economic conditions conservative action on the part of organized labor will be a stabilizing and helpful influence. The preponderance of extremists would not only be injurious to the general interest, but it would be sure to set public opinion against organized labor, to diminish its strength. Moreover, the great body of its membership being moderate and thoroughly American in its views, it might be disrupted and much of the gain, so hardly won, be lost.

Never was a moderate and conciliatory policy more needed by employer and employé.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We are pleased to announce that Dr. JOHN H. FINLEY, at present Commissioner of Education of the State of New York, becomes a member of the editorial staff of THE NEW YORK TIMES on Jan. 1 next.

ADOLPH S. OCHS, President.
Nov. 18, 1920.

Dr. FINLEY was several months ago invited to come into an important advisory and contributing editorial relationship with THE TIMES. He has been reluctant to leave his present post, which is, in some of its aspects, the foremost public educational position in America, but he has at last accepted, feeling that in his new association he can not only be more helpful to the cause of education generally, but can also, at the same time, have a field of wider public usefulness. During the last few years he has declined to consider several university Presidencies on the ground that the basic popular education is of supreme importance to a democracy, and he leaves an administrative and judicial position in this service only because of his conviction that the press can immediately and more powerfully promote an interest on the part of the public in that which should most deeply concern it.

Dr. FINLEY's early training looked toward journalism. Though born on a farm in Illinois, he early learned the printer's trade. After graduation from Knox College, where he worked at this trade, he entered Johns Hopkins University as a student in politics, economics and history in order to prepare himself for work in the field of journalism. While there he assisted in the editing of historical and economic publications, and was associated with one of his professors in the authorship of a work on "Taxation in American States and Cities." He came to New York City on leaving the university to take a position through which he became acquainted with problems in the field of public and private charities, and, incidentally, edited for a period of several years the first Review in that special subject in America. He was then called to the Presidency of his own college, in Illinois, five years after his graduation. There he remained seven years—two years beyond the period for which he accepted—returning to New York City to engage in magazine editorial work. He was planning with the late WALTER H. PAGE the founding of World's Work, to which he gave the name, when he was invited to be the first incumbent of the newly established chair of politics in Princeton University, the first chair of this name and scope in America. He was there but three years when he was asked to take the Presidency of the College of the City of New York. In this post he remained during the period of the reorganization of the college and the erection of the new group of buildings on St. Nicholas Heights, resigning in 1913 to accept the unanimous election of the Board of Regents to the Commissionership of Education of the State of New York.

During his years in New York he has been called upon to perform many public services outside of his own field. He was one of the two independent members selected by the trainmen and railroad officials for arbitrating their differences when the great railroad strike was threatened in 1913. He has been a member of three special State commissions and of several national boards and committees during and since the war. He made the first recommendation leading to the organization of the Army Educational Service and was a member of the Advisory Committee. He was the Harvard exchange lecturer in France in 1910-11 and went on a special mission to the universities and schools of France in 1917. He was the head of the Red Cross Commission to Palestine and the Near East in 1918-19. He is co-author of a work on "The American Executive" as well as of the work on "Taxation," referred to, and is author of "The French in the Heart of America," which was crowned by the French Academy, and of "A Pilgrim in Palestine." He has for many years been the editor-in-chief of an encyclopedia. He was one of the original members of the League to Enforce Peace.

HOME MARKET JOY.

It was a night of triumph in Boston. The Home Market Club, janitor of that palladium of our liberties, the tariff that fell from heaven, chortled in its joy. Mr. WILLIAM BRADFORD HOMER DOWSE accepted reluctantly for the eleventh time the Presidency of the renowned institution. He has long wanted to give the honor to other hands, but "when the country has "decided so overwhelmingly in favor "of the doctrine of protection, and "when it appears as though there "would be so much that our club "can do in aiding in the re-establishment of a protective tariff," he couldn't shirk his sacred duty. He basted the wretched revenue-only Underwood-Simmons tariff. It must be revised and transformed. "It is safe "to say that the Government can "derive an income of $500,000,000 "from a wise revision of the tariff "schedules."

That is about $200,000,000 more than even anti-pauper-labor tariffs can usually be induced to yield, but there is something mystical and magical in the manufacture of high protective schedules that only the initiated can be expected to understand. Besides, the Home Marketers were full of festival. "Jubilation over the "result of the national election and "optimistic prophecies for America's "coming prosperity were the features" of the meeting, The Boston Transcript tells us. Why are the people outside the sacred circle in such doleful dumps? Why has the economic, business and financial world been so blind to the bright promise of high tariff and prosperity? No sooner was the country sure of "Republican good times" than all the bears came out of the garden and everybody seemed to turn indigo blue. Congressman PAIGE doesn't "believe that "the business of this country, our "great industries, can ever get back "into normal condition until such "time as we have a proper re-"vision of the tariff," and he hopes that Secretary MARVIN of the club "will see that this propaganda is put "out before the people if they do not "already understand." The propaganda ought not to be needed. The restoration of the high tariff, mother of wealth and stuffer of dinner pails, can't be delayed long. Why can't we all be as happy as the Home Market Club?

"Wise leaders have been chosen to direct the policies of the nation," President DOWSE says. "With united "effort and with the determination to "serve our country in times of peace "as we served it in the dark days of "the war, we can enter the golden "era of American prosperity." United effort is the thing. Especially united effort in behalf of that economic Grand Secret and Philosopher's Stone, the heaven-descended and heaven-high protective tariff. Mr. HARDING is already asking the South to rally around protection. The Home Market Club pours forth its grand, sweet song. The American Protective League is suffused with happiness. Everything is for the best in the soon-to-be-protected-copiously United States.

SHIPPING BOARD BOOKKEEPING.

The evidence of Mr. GILLEN—who had been executive assistant to Chairman PAYNE—clears up the mystery of lost and wasted millions through the Shipping Board. It seemed incomprehensible that so much money could have vanished. The explanation, as given by Mr. GILLEN, is simple enough. Most of the officers and executives in an organization twice the size of the United States Steel Corporation were not of tested administrative ability, but men who wanted the jobs and had political influence enough to get them. Indeed, Mr. GILLEN affirmed that too many "politicians" were placed in the chief administrative posts. They were Republicans as well as Democrats. So that when the country was in dire straits and the winning of the war hung in the balance, it had to pay cruelly for a system to which could be traced profligate spending by the Government ever since its foundation.

No proper method of accounting was established by the Shipping Board. No one knew where the money went until ALONZO TWEEDALE, former Controller of the District of Columbia, was made Treasurer in August, 1919. Mr. TWEEDALE had to work back to July, 1918, and by March 1, 1920, he was able to submit for audit accounts for $2,700,000,000, but for $1,500,000,000 of that amount Controller WARWICK declined to pay because the vouchers lacked necessary dates.

Mr. GILLEN was asked by Chairman WALSH whether "the conditions "which you have found have been "such as to make it extremely difficult "to ascertain if there had been any "frauds." The reply was that "it "would be almost impossible to find "out whether frauds had been committed on the outside." There can be no doubt that there were frauds, for contractors with an itching palm found that they were dealing with innocents or, in some cases, with rogues like themselves. But it does not follow that all the millions unaccounted for went to swindlers and profiteers. A vast deal of the money is "loose" upon the country, and no small part of it tracers, to use a railroad term, should be able to find. The salvage may yet amount to a very considerable sum.

There is a lesson for Congress in these unwelcome disclosures, and also for Mr. HARDING. No more politicians should be put on guard in positions of trust and responsibility. It is high time for an era of business administration.

MOPPING UP IN RUSSIA.

So long as the Poles and the Bolsheviki and DENIKIN were fighting one another and absorbing one another's attention, the Ukrainian army of PETLURA was able to control a considerable amount of territory. When DENIKIN was beaten and superseded by WRANGEL, PETLURA came to an arrangement with the Poles, and for a time last Spring it seemed that PILSUDSKI's great plan of a strong Ukraine, allied with Poland and centring in Kiev, would be realized. But the Red armies were too much for Poles and Ukrainians combined. The Poles had to make peace, WRANGEL was driven into the sea, and now the Bolsheviki are settling with PETLURA.

The capture of his capital, Kamenetz-Podolsk, follows a Red offensive in which the inferior forces of the Ukrainians have been beaten everywhere. The Poles promised in the peace terms signed at Riga to have nothing more to do with PETLURA, and they have just denied the Bolshevist assertions that they have been giving him underhand support despite the promise. But in any case PETLURA was done for the moment the Polish armies withdrew from the war. Poland will doubtless receive him and his troops, but as refugees.

PETLURA was the best representative of the national aspirations of the Ukraine. The Ukrainian nationality was real enough to enable PETLURA to maintain a respectable army for nearly two years. The Bolsheviki profess to be great admirers of self-determination. They have from the beginning of their rule in Russia admitted self-determination for the Ukraine, but it must be a Red Ukraine. There is a nominally independent Ukraine now; it was represented at Riga. It is ruled by Soviet Commissaries among whom actual Ukrainians are few and far between. Soviet Ukraine is a crown colony of Red Russia; the real Ukraine is disappearing at Kamenetz-Podolsk. And this is exactly what the Bolsheviki would have done with Poland if the Polish troops had not won their great victories in July. LENIN will let any of the neighboring nations retain its independence so long as it takes its orders from Moscow. The Baltic States with which Red Russia signed such solemn peace treaties must find a good deal to interest them in contemporary history in the Ukraine.

BILLIONS IN IT.

Mr. WASHINGTON VANDERLIP, on his way back from Russia, pauses in Stockholm to deny that he was sent by Senator HARDING to arrange for the recognition of the Soviet Republic. The denial is welcome, though hardly necessary; but Mr. VANDERLIP has some good news over and above that. His syndicate has leased 400,000 square miles in Siberia for sixty years. That sounds like a large enterprise to the average man, but it is nothing to Mr. VANDERLIP's further achievement. He has arranged for the purchase by the Bolsheviki of $3,000,000,000 worth of American goods, to be shipped to Russia preferably on vessels of the American merchant marine.

An order of such size ought to offer a welcome antidote to business depression, if the goods can be paid for. Mr. VANDERLIP knows that they can be, and will be; paid for in "gold, "platinum, furs, oil products, manganese, copper, timber, wood pulp, "flax, hides, grains and other raw "materials," doubtless including ivory, apes and peacocks. Great quantities of all these things, Mr. VANDERLIP tells us, are ready for immediate shipment.

Unfortunately, he is the only one who tells us this. Everybody else who has come out of Russia has said that nothing can be shipped immediately except a little flax. Two or three years of railroad reconstruction—on long credits—must come first; after that something may be produced, if the Bolsheviki can make the people work. As for gold, doubtless some of the old supply is left, but the Rumanian Government has a good legal claim on the first $125,000,000 of it that may go abroad. Mr. VANDERLIP doubtless believes what he says; but he comes from Los Angeles, a city where long contemplation of the climate has developed the lens of the human eye into a high-power magnifying instrument, and close association with motion picture press agents has induced a carelessness in arithmetic.

These great purchases which the Bolsheviki would undoubtedly like to make, in America or any other country, will have to be financed by credits. Several billions of American money are already tied up in Western Europe. We believe that was a good investment. It would be a good investment even if it were never repaid, for it helped win the war. And it will ultimately be repaid, for the winning of the war preserved free nations with an economic system which makes payment possible. Billions sunk in Russia would be a bad investment, for they would build up a political and economic system which is not only repugnant to the majority of Americans, but which as yet has shown no indication of being able to pay its obligations even if it regarded them as binding.

INTRODUCING A NEW SENATOR.

The Louisville Courier-Journal asks the country to make the acquaintance of the Republican Senator-elect from Kentucky, Mr. RICHARD P. ERNST. It appears that, personally, though a "slight man" he is a "bundle of electric energy." His "bristly mustaches" give him an air of grim determination, but the observer must not fail to note the "wrinkles around the corners of his eyes." These betray a "ready humor."

The reader, feeling now that he knows exactly how Mr. ERNST looks, will wish to be informed what he thinks. He denies indignantly that he is in favor of "scrapping" the League of Nations. The "basic idea" of it he fully accepts and would heartily support "any reasonable "plan for a League that is submitted "by President HARDING." Asked how he stood with regard to BORAH and JOHNSON, his prompt reply was: "Let "me tell you, I will never line up "with those fellows." Another question put to Mr. ERNST related to the proposed freeing of American ships from Panama tolls. Though he understands that Senator HARDING favors this exemption, the new Senator from Kentucky declares positively: "I will "vote for nothing that is in violation "of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty."

This tame submission to what Mr. ROOSEVELT called the "dead hand" of a treaty doesn't look much like electric energy. If the Senator-elect from Kentucky is for the League and against any disregard of our international obligations, it will go hard but he will be called a Democrat in disguise, or that even more fearful thing, a reactionary. But the public will be content if he makes his votes in the Senate square with his sensible talk before he goes to it.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Bequest Reveals an Illusion.

A man of excellent intentions and of many virtues, including some of the very best, like courage and patriotism, General RUSH HAWKINS sometimes reached conclusions on inadequate data, and not infrequently it was these conclusions that he supported with especial vehemence. One of them is revealed in his will, which contains a bequest of $100,000 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the money to be used, as he put it, "to abate the wicked horrors of vivisection, and to compel those who practice it to make known to the public the actual methods of their unspeakable calling."

These phrases come near to being proof that General HAWKINS, like not a few other amiable and estimable people, without the slightest investigation, had accepted as truths or facts what a psychologist would call the "cruelty phantasies" of the anti-vivisectionists; of a group, that is, who cover from themselves and others their own inclination to inflict pain by loud and voluble descriptions—which they thoroughly enjoy making—of imagined cruelties inflicted by others. The only other way to explain the statements in regard to animal experimentation that come from its foes is that they are deliberate and intentional falsifications—a charge in most cases probably undeserved and in all cases less charitable than its alternative.

Presumably somebody asked the General if he did not hate cruelty to animals, and when he said, as he inevitably would, that he did, told him that he was an anti-vivisectionist and must help in the holy work. That is the way the anti-vivisection ranks chiefly are recruited, strangely many people being unable to see that there is no logical connection between hating cruelty to animals and hating those who make use of animals in the advancement of medical and other science.

California Was Not Misguided.

Among the things voted on at the recent election in California was a bill prohibiting vivisection in that State. This is the first time that subject has been submitted to popular decision, the anti-vivisectionists hitherto having confined their efforts to the convincing of Legislatures. The device failed, for the vote was adverse, in spite of the fact that the local supporters of the measure had a lot of help of one kind and another, including, it is said, large contributions of money for use in the wide diffusion of all the familiar calumnies and absurdities in regard to what is done in the "torture chambers" of the vivisectors. That the work of animal experimentation simply could not be conducted in the conditions described, just as modern surgery would be impossible without the use of anesthetics, is only one of the many facts ignored in the anti-vivisection campaign.

Magazines like The Ladies' Home Journal and The Country Gentleman were somehow moved in October to revive the worst of the old myths—the Journal of the American Medical Association is unkind enough to think that the purpose was to influence the vote in California and to do it too late for a reply—but the Californians were not convinced either that vivisection is cruel or that it is useless. These are the fundamental dogmas of anti-vivisectionism—twin fallacies and characteristic basis for a false cult—and in California, as in the other States, animal experimentation will go on as before.

A Literary Man's Library.

In the inventory of property constituting the estate of the late WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, his books count as one item, but they count for strangely little. There are 2,000 of them, it seems—quite enough for anybody, however literary, who has access to the great collections in the public libraries. What surprises is not that Mr. HOWELLS did not have more books, but that the official appraiser set them down as worth only $300.

Of course, one remembers the purpose of the appraisal and the naturalness of not putting the figure too high; but also remembering the kind of books that a man of Mr. HOWELLS's quality would have around him, and the added value which, for many, his mere possession would give to them, one can view that appraisal only as illustrating anew what a vast difference there is between buying and selling a book.

It would take something of an arithmetician and not a little paper to compute what the present cost would be of 2,000 new books such as Mr. HOWELLS would care to keep about him. Not 15 cents would be their average price, but $3 or $4 at the very least.

He Wanted to Be Unpleasant.

One of prohibition's myrmidons has made the pain-causing statement that anybody who buys whisky now must do three things—pay an exorbitant price, have dealings with criminals on terms of moral equality, and risk death in a particularly displeasing form.

This statement causes pain because—well, because its essential truth is demonstrable by the prohibitionists and not easily disproved by other people. It might, indeed, be said that no price is exorbitant when the purchaser thinks that, in the circumstances and considering his need, it is not too much. As for the criminal association, it could be said that buyers are under no obligation to investigate the characters of sellers, while the risk of death never did work very well as a deterrent in a world where "safety first" is a phrase much oftener spoken than felt to be a sound and practicable basis of conduct. But after all this has been said the statement causes pain.

JUGOSLAV CONCESSION.

Adriatic Settlement Not Without Dangers, for the Future.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Most students of international affairs will heartily agree with your editorial article of Nov. 14, in so far as you felicitate the Italian and Jugoslav Governments upon the friendly character of the accord which they have recently settled in the matter of the vexatious problem of the Adriatic. The Jugoslavs in particular merit warm praise for the conciliatory attitude which they have adopted, and for the good grace with which they have accepted the very serious sacrifices stipulated in the agreement.

It is important, however, that the American public, which has felt a keen interest in this problem, should realize that the solution which has now apparently been decided upon contains many germs of grave difficulties and dangers for the future.

The territorial contiguity between Fiume and Italy, which seems to have been conceded to the Government of the latter power, is almost tantamount to a guarantee that sooner or later the City of Fiume is actually to be annexed. Such annexation, unbiased students of this problem have unanimously agreed, would threaten vitally the independence of Jugoslav commerce. With Fiume as the sole adequate port for Croatia and Slavonia to the south and east, as well as for the Slovene districts to the north, Italy's control over Fiume as well as Trieste would make her commercial domination of the Adriatic almost complete.

It was largely to assure the independence of Jugoslav trade that the American officials at Paris consistently opposed the Italian annexation of Fiume, an attitude in which they were warmly supported by the British and French experts.

But even if the annexation of Fiume by Italy should be delayed, the boundary line as drawn in the recent agreement seriously affects the Jugoslav commercial independence, inasmuch as it allots to Italy a vital sector of the railway northeast of Fiume, and running to the Slovene metropolis, Laibach. Whether the Jugoslavs will be content to feel themselves continually endangered by a commercial pressure which Italy will have it in her power to exert, is a question for the future to decide.

Another element of future danger is contained in Italy's acquisition of Zara, with a generous hinterland. The territory in question is almost entirely Jugoslav in character, containing at most probably 11,000 Italians. The concession made by the Jugoslavs to Italy can hardly be justified on the ground of strategic necessity, inasmuch as Italy is amply protected by her acquisition of some of the smaller islands, and since neither at Fiume nor at Zara were strategic considerations anything of a factor. The concessions were by no means in accordance with the ethnographic situation, for in every case the territories involved contained more Jugoslavs than Italians. It seems clear that the conciliatory attitude of MM. Trumbitch and Vesnitch resulted from the fact that Jugoslavia was dealing with a stronger power which has forced a settlement on a weak neighbor.

The settlement is almost exactly that which the Americans have consistently opposed, not from any sentimental fondness for the Jugoslavs, but from a fear that Italian dictatorship in the Adriatic meant an atmosphere of tension for the future, and would seriously endanger the permanence of the settlement of Southeastern Europe.

One hesitates to suggest a formal protest on the part of the United States to a solution accepted by both parties in the Adriatic, but it is right that the incoming Republican Administration should realize that this solution of the Adriatic problem carries with it few indications of permanent tranquility and success. For Relief of the Russian Fugitives.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The American Central Committee for Russian Relief has just received the following pitiful appeal from Constantinople: "Over 40,000 fugitives from the Crimea, among them 6,000 wounded, must be urgently helped. Our means are nearly nil."

The disaster which has overtaken the loyal Russian forces who have been fighting Bolshevism in South Russia for so long against overwhelming odds and the helpless civilian refugees who have been driven from their homes by terror of the advancing Reds has forced us to make a special appeal at this time.

Warm clothing and especially money, which can be cabled at once, are most urgently needed, and anything which is sent to the office of our committee at 621 Fifth Avenue will be most gratefully acknowledged and promptly utilized.

We should never forget these unfortunate Russians have been fighting for our allies and for the ideals for which we entered the war since 1914 without a respite, and the forces now overwhelming them are precisely those which, first in Germany, then in Russia, destroyed the peace of the world and threatened the very basis of civilization.

HUNTER'S MOON.

Now the full splendor of Diana's breast
And swift her arrows will the goddess seize
To hasten forth upon her nightly quest
Of fresh adventure, for no languorous rest
On cloud-soft couch she seeks—the chase will please
Better her eager limbs; in rushing breeze
Or frost-still air delighting, down the west
Her silver sandals outspeed many a star.
And many mortals on the earth below,
Catching from her far horn an echoing bar
Seized with the hunter's madness, in their dreams

SHERATON BOOKCASE, $1,200

Highest Price at Charles of London Sale—Total Now $313,259.

Yesterday, the fourth day of the sale of Charles of London at the American Art Galleries, brought the returns to $313,259, the afternoon session yielding $36,737. The highest price was $1,200 given by Seaman, agent, for one of the great inlaid mahogany wing book cases, upon which Sheraton lavished his finest work and which are now difficult to obtain, as at the time in which they were made they were in great demand for the English colonies, where they were used in the Capitols and Vice Regent Lodges. That in the sale was 10 feet 7 inches high and 11 feet 2 inches long. The upper portions were fitted with glazed doors and the lower part with drawers and doors. There was much inlaying, cross-bandings, medallions, wreaths, &c.

A carved oak tester bed of the Elizabethan period brought the second highest price, going to P. W. French & Co. for $1,050. This was supported on two bulbous, balustered frontal posts with an elaborate headboard and was inlaid as well as elaborately carved.

Of the pieces bringing other of the higher prices a William and Mary walnut table, richly inlaid with colored woods, ebony and finely matched oyster-grained root walnut, 35½ inches long, sold to M. E. Stewart for $800; a Queen Anne tapestry walnut settee went to Lenygan & Morant for $675; John Simon paid $770 for an inlaid walnut desk, Queen Anne period, with slant hinged fall, lined with green morocco, with secret drawer and the original brasses, an unusually complete specimen. Iselin paid $825 for a Sheraton inlaid mahogany side table with bow front, tapering square legs and stock toes; an Elizabethan carved oak refectory table of massive character, supported on elaborate square bulboots legs, went to Sylvester Gutheton for $875, and Ginsburg & Levy paid $675 for an English Renaissance carved and inlaid oak bedstead. An inlaid William and Mary walnut bureau went to Otto Bernet, agent, for $725, and the same buyer paid $850 for a marquetry walnut bureau of the same period and $675 for a Jacobean carved oak court cupboard.

GIVE TEXTILE DESIGN PRIZES

Pieter Mijir Wins $200 Award in Art Alliance's Contest.

Ninety prizes were awarded at the fifth annual textile design competition, which opened on the third floor of the Bush Terminal Building on Forty-second Street yesterday, under the auspices of the Art Alliance of America. The prizes ranged from $200 to $10 given to sixty-nine competitors for honorable mention.

Pieter Mijir took the $200 prize for a design for dress silk; May Marshall won first prize, $150, for a very charming design for decorative silk; Katherine Ball received $100 for the best design for dress cotton; Mary Tannahill won first, $150, for cretonne; Emma B. Lowd took the first, $50, for ribbons, and L. B. Heller ranked No. 1 for technical excellence, getting $100. Five special prizes of $25 each were awarded. Marion Poor carried off first, $150, in the poster design competition.

More designs were submitted than ever before, by a greater number of artists, and the standard of excellence was higher. The exhibit will continue through Dec. 4.

HONOR SULGRAVE DELEGATE

Harry S. Perris, Luncheon Guest, Praises American-British Move.

The Sulgrave Institution gave a luncheon at the Lawyers Club yesterday afternoon, in honor of Mr. Harry S. Perris of London, Secretary of the British Sulgrave Committee. These organizations, for the past two months, have been celebrating jointly throughout Great Britain and this country, the tercentenary of the first American Legislative Assembly and the Mayflower compact. Among those present were:

Mr. John A. Stewart, Chairman of the Executive Committee, presided.

Mr. Perris, in returning thanks for the reception accorded him, said:

"The commemoration of the tercentenary of the Mayflower compact and the Jamestown Assembly have done much to educate the public mind both in Great Britain and the United States, as to the strength of the racial and other ties which unite the English-speaking peoples."

SOLVE TRANSIT BARGAINING.

B. R. T. Men to Treat Directly with Garrison Under New Plan.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company announced yesterday that a plan had been worked out by which its employes may bargain directly with Lindley M. Garrison, the receiver, thus doing away with outside interference from such as the locals of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America which recently lost its fight with the company. During the strike Mr. Garrison, acting under instructions from Federal Judge Mayer, refused to confer with any committee not composed entirely of the company's employes.

For a long time a number of the employes have been trying to organize a brotherhood similar to that of the employes of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company.

The plan provides for the election by the employes of representatives to deal directly with the management. The election is to be by secret ballot and the votes will be canvassed by Public Service Commissioner Alfred M. Barrett and Transit Construction Commissioner John H. Delaney.

AWARD D. S. C. TO CORPORAL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The War Department today announced that, by direction of President Wilson, a Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded to Corporal Michael Larkin, who served in the Twenty-eighth Infantry, and whose nearest relative is Mary Walton of 62 Newark Street, Hoboken, N. J. The citation for Corporal Larkin reads:

"Corporal Michael Larkin, Company I, Twenty-eighth Infantry, for extraordinary heroism in action near Soissons, France, July 18, 1918. When his platoon had been halted by heavy machine-gun fire from the front, Corporal Larkin, with three others, pushed forward through heavy fire and attacked the enemy machine-gun nest. Two enemy machine guns were captured and their crews forced to surrender. He then reorganized the enemy position and assisted in the repulse of a strong enemy counterattack. He served with distinction until a serious wound forced his evacuation."

WILSON'S HEALTH IMPROVES

He Gives Much Time to Annual Message and Other Business.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—President Wilson's health was said today by White House officials to have shown improvement since the election and the consequent removal of the anxiety.

Despite the cold weather, Mr. Wilson spends some time each day on the south portico of the White House. He is also devoting much time to public business and to the preparation of his annual message to Congress.

HUGHES DEFENDS DIRECT PRIMARY

Holds It Would Be a Mistake to Drop System Because of Some Defects Developed.

FOR STRICT ENROLMENT

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 18.—A plea for the retention of the direct primary system in making party nominations for offices in States and lesser political units was made by Charles Evans Hughes in an address tonight before the convention of the National Municipal League, of which he is President.

Speaking on "The Fate of the Direct Primary," Mr. Hughes declared that the primary was the "essential complement of the short ballot" and that it would be a mistake to throw over the system in favor of a return to the old convention system or its predecessor, the party caucus. He made it plain that his remarks could apply only to systems under State jurisdiction, it not being possible under the Constitution to provide for direct Presidential primaries.

After declaring that the direct primary was established as one method of giving the people means to combat the evils of boss rule, Mr. Hughes said:

"There has been a period of experimentation which has made it manifest that there has been a disregard of the essential requirements of a proper primary system. The methods which have been employed have disclosed grave defects, and naturally there is widespread criticism. The question is, What is the remedy? Should the direct primary be retained? Or should there be a return to the old convention system? Or should there be a modification in an effort to secure the advantages of both?"

Objects of the System.

Mr. Hughes held that the object of the direct primary was not to destroy or impair party organization, but rather to make it representative and responsible. He set forth the advantages of a proper direct primary system thus:

"First—It places a weapon in the hands of the party voters which they can use with effect in case of need. They are no longer helpless. This puts party leaders on their best behavior; it is a safeguard to the astute and unselfish leader who is endeavoring to maintain good standards in line with sound public sentiment. It favors a disposition not to create situations which are likely to challenge a test.

"Second—The fact of this control gives to the voters a consciousness of power and responsibility. If things do not go right they know that the trouble lies with them. The importance of this assurance should not be overlooked in any discussion of the apathy of the electorate."

Mr. Hughes said that the primary system could be made an effective barometer of the will of parties only when the law provided for strict enrolment of voters, thus insuring that nominations were strictly along party lines and within the control of the members of the party. The open primary, in which citizens vote the ticket of whichever party they choose, he said, had been proved a failure.

He cited as the leading criticism of the existing primary methods:

"(1) That the direct primary overburdens the election machinery, by requiring two campaigns;

"(2) That it entails heavy expense;

"(3) That it ignores the necessity for consultation and conference in the selection of candidates;

"(4) That it affords no suitable opportunity for the formulation of party platforms;

"(5) That it aids the efforts of self-advertisers and demagogues;

"(6) That, even in the case of those who are not to be so characterized, it leads to unseemly appeals for personal support, especially in the case of candidates for judicial office;

"(7) That frequently men who would be desirable candidates will not enter a primary contest; and

How to Meet Objections.

The first two objections, he said, applied equally to the convention system. As to opportunity for conference and enumeration of party views, he held that any proper primary system would provide this.

The question of obtaining the right kind of men as candidates was the most vital one, he thought, and he discussed the manifest and natural aversion of men of ability and character to enter into a scramble for office, although these were exactly the men who were needed in public life.

The ideal method of making nominations, Mr. Hughes said, was to have a gathering to which representatives would be chosen by elections within the membership of the party. The distinctive feature of this gathering would be that it would consist of a directly responsible group, instead of a host of delegates selected in such a manner and in such numbers as to be without any real personal responsibility to the party voters. It would be, in a sense, a nominating committee, appointed by the party in a convenient manner so as to charge each representative with direct responsibility.

Mr. Hughes went on:

"If such a body did its duty well there would be no necessity for a double campaign. Its choice would be ratified on primary day without contest. The difficulty of giving to opposing candidates no opportunity to have their merits discussed except in a primary contest would normally be removed, and the bitterness engendered by such contests would generally be avoided through a full consideration of the qualifications of candidates and the decision of the party representatives.

"The action of such a body should not be final. If it ignored the sentiment of the party voters, if it appeared that some ulterior or sinister purpose had been served, if the candidates, or any of them, which it selected were unworthy, then there should be opportunity for the party members, immediately and without difficulty, to express themselves in opposition and on primary day to have a chance to show whether or not the designation of the organization body was approved.

"This would mean that the body representing the party, chosen in the manner I have described as a really representative body, would not care to invite a challenge of its choice; that it would endeavor to meet the wishes of the party voters so far as these could be ascertained.

"The party representatives would act under a check, which as a rule would preclude any action but that which the party voters would be ready to approve. But the party voters would always have their chance to disapprove and to present other

REFORMATORY BOYS ILL-USED, SAY MANY

ANGERS PRISON OFFICIALS

Alleged Methods Not Applied to Hardened Criminals, They Declare —Warden Was Warned.

Long spells of solitary confinement, bread and water dieting and beatings were methods of maintaining discipline among the youthful first offenders at the New York City Reformatory at New Hampton, N. Y., according to testimony yesterday before the State Prison Commission, meeting on Blackwell's Island.

"The alleged ill-treatment of New Hampton inmates," declared Prison Commissioner Leon C. Weinstock after the hearing, "is absolutely degrading to the citizenship of this city."

Deputy Attorney General Robert C. Beyer conducted the examination of witnesses, who included Major Lewis Lawes, who left New Hampton to be Warden of Sing Sing; Warden Joseph McCann of Blackwell's Island, Deputy Commissioner of Corrections William Dalton and a number of former New Hampton charges who failed to "reform" under New Hampton ideas, and are now prisoners on the island—second or third offenders.

According to the testimony of Commissioner Dalton, his orders were violated by Major Sidney W. Brewster, Warden at New Hampton, who failed to stop severe punishment of the young inmates.

Major Lawes and Warden McCann both testified that, although they were dealing with hardened criminals, they never had to resort to the methods which witnesses declared were practiced at the city reformatory.

The first of the prisoners to testify was Joseph Perrella, highwayman, serving time on Blackwell's Island. He said that while cleaning a cell in the reformatory some one struck him on the back of the neck. He swung around and hit back. He made a mistake; he hit a keeper. For this he was put in isolation for twenty days.

"Three keepers knocked me down," he swore, "and kicked me, and one of them stepped on my face. Later Keeper Mell entered my cell and beat me with his club."

Robert Bruno, burglar, testified that he had been put in solitary confinement for thirty-seven days. This was for an attempt to run away.

"After they brought me back," declared this convict, "Keepers McSweeney and Ryan beat me up. They took all my clothes off. Then they beat me with a rubber hose."

Serving time on the island for peddling drugs, Richard Canoni recalled the days he had put in at New Hampton some time ago. He was in isolation for twenty-five days, also for trying to get away.

Another witness was Henry O. Schleth, Supervising Warden of the Corrections Department, whose duty it is to inspect conditions in the State's institutions. He admitted that the bread and water diet was in vogue at the reformatory and that solitary confinement also was enforced there, but said that the maximum term was "twenty days."

Major Lawes, in telling of his régime at the institution, said he had used the isolation cells only four or five times.

FORM JUNIOR CINEMA CLUB.

Society Women to Give Subscription Performances of Movies for Children

Well-known society women have formed the Junior Cinema Club, with headquarters at 489 Fifth Avenue, which has arranged for subscription performances of motion pictures for children this Winter at the Broadhurst Theatre. The performances are to be given with the co-operation of the Parents' League of New York City, which has appointed a committee of three of its members to view all pictures with the four Directors of the club, and to decide which are to be shown. The subjects will be carefully selected for quality and interest and will include educational pictures of travel, animal life, comedies, cartoons and also feature films of moving picture stars. Special programs are being arranged for the Christmas holidays.

The Directors of the club are Mrs. Christopher Wyatt, Mrs. Langdon Geer, Mrs. W. Hewlett Adams and Lewis Hooper. The patronesses include Mrs. John W. Alexander, Mrs. Edward Livingston Coster, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. J. Magee Ellsworth, Mrs. John Henry Hammond, Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn, Mrs. Lewis Gouverneur Morris, Mrs. Roland Redmond, Mrs. D. D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Hilborne L. Roosevelt, Mrs. Willard Straight, Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer, Mrs. Schuyler N. Warren, Mrs. W. J. Schieffelin, Mrs. Graham Lusk, Mrs. Charles Auchincloss and Mrs. W. K. Dick.

The subscriptions are divided into two series of six Friday afternoons at 3 o'clock and six Saturday mornings at 10:30 o'clock, except in Christmas and New Year's weeks, when they will be held on Tuesday morning and Wednesday afternoon. The first two performances will be on Dec. 3 and 4.

TENNESSEE SOCIETY DANCES

The Tennessee Society in New York held its sixteenth annual supper dance at the Hotel McAlpin last evening. More than two hundred guests attended and among them was Lieut. Commander Alexander G. Lyle of the battleship Tennessee, who was decorated on last Armistice Day with the Congressional Medal of Honor for extraordinary heroism and devotion to duty while serving with the Fifth Regiment of Marines under heavy shell fire.

Captain Richard H. Leigh, Commander of the ship, who was also decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross, attended the dance with Mrs. Leigh.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Miss Beatrice Sackett to Wed Alfred Purdy Hodgman.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Sackett of 247 Fifth Avenue announce the engagement of their younger daughter, Miss Beatrice Sackett, to Alfred Purdy Hodgman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Hodgman of 399 Park Avenue and Greenwich, Conn.

Miss Sackett's father is President of the Mutual Bank of this city. She is a sister of Miss Eleanor L. Sackett. Mr. Hodgman has two brothers, John Martindale Hodgman, and George Barker Hodgman, Jr. The latter married Miss Esther M. McDonald. His father is President of the Hodgman Rubber Company.

Farrell—Comstock.

Mrs. Albert Comstock of Montclair, N. J., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Elise C. Comstock, to the Rev. Gabriel Farrell, Jr., of Boston. Miss Comstock is a graduate of St. Mary's School in this city. Since her graduation she has been active in church work in the diocese of Newark.

Canon Farrell, who is graduate of Dartmouth College and of the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Cambridge, is attached to the Episcopal Cathedral in Newark and is in charge of the department of religious education in that diocese. During the war Canon Farrell served as chaplain with the 14th Infantry. Before entering the army he was assistant minister at Trinity Church, Boston.

SAYS RUIN FACES MERCHANT MARINE

B. W. Morse Asserts American Ships Cannot Compete With Foreign Rates.

BRITISH TONNAGE CHEAPER

B. W. Morse, President of the Adriatic Steamship Corporation and its seven subsidiaries, now in the hands of a receiver, said yesterday that conditions under which American ships were operating were so unfavorable that the disintegration of practically all of the steamship companies here was threatened. He said British ships were able to carry freight at rates which would ruin American companies, and that the British Government was selling old ships at about $65 a ton while the United States Shipping Board was charging approximately $124. He was not criticising the Shipping Board, he said, because he thought it was doing business without sufficient liberty of action.

"This receivership," he said, "was brought about wholly by circumstances entirely beyond our control. Every American ship owner today is facing the same situation, and it is only a question of time until they find themselves in similar condition unless speedy action is taken in the enactment of favorable legislation.

"The American people have invested nearly four billion dollars in a merchant marine which is second only to that of Great Britain. The vital question is now whether this colossal investment shall be a national asset or shall be allowed to become a liability.

"Conditions today make it necessary for American ship owners to operate in competition with ship owners of other nations, particularly the British. It has been necessary to insure our ships either in British insurance companies in order to get the most favorable rate, thereby yielding large profits to our competitors, or in American companies at a higher rate, thus handicapping operations. This Government could make laws providing for lower insurance.

"It is futile for us to try to operate ships with a 100 per cent. American crew who demand higher pay than foreign labor, while our laws compel us to put more men on a ship than would be necessary under a foreign flag.

"We must bear in mind that it is impossible for a ship under the American flag to command any higher freight rate than any similar ship under a foreign flag. So long as a dearth of tonnage existed and abnormally high freight rates prevailed it was possible to operate ships profitably, but now we are again facing pre-war conditions, and a remedy is not rapidly forthcoming a disintegration of American shipping interests and a rapid return to our pre-war status in international marine affairs will confront us."

Mr. Morse explained that his company was in no way connected with the companies in which his father, Charles W. Morse, was interested.

Federal Judge Mayer yesterday appointed William J. Coogan as equity receiver for the International Maritime Corporation in a suit instituted by the Monumental Stevedore Company, a creditor for $4,248. This company also bought ships from the Shipping Board on the partial payment plan and the complaint says the Government is threatening to seize the ships. A petition in bankruptcy was filed against the company on Nov. 10.

300 HARVARD MEN DINE.

Name Committee to Seek Addition to Endowment Fund.

Harvard's needs and finances were discussed at the dinner last night in honor of Eliot Wadsworth, President of the Harvard Alumni Association and Joint Chairman of the Harvard Endowment Fund, which brought together 300 of the graduates at the Harvard Club.

The final recommendation adopted after the discussion calls for the appointment of a group of the representative members of the alumni to be known as the Committee on Service to the University.

John W. Prentiss, President of the Associated Harvard Clubs and Treasurer of the Harvard Endowment Fund, asserted that the present campaign for funds will not solve completely Harvard's financial problems. When the present goal is reached the university will still have a deficit.

Mr. Wadsworth, comparing the attendance at preparatory and high schools for four decades, said:

"In 1920 we have five times as many men and women seeking higher education as in 1890. Higher education is not self-supporting. Tuition fees do not pay 50 per cent. of the cost of operating a college."

Referring to the increasing costs, Mr. Wadsworth said wage scales had not increased sufficiently to keep teachers and instructors from seeking better pay in other lines of activities.

TAFT ASSAILS ANTI-SEMITES.

Anti-Semitic propaganda was condemned last night by William Howard Taft in a talk on the world's races delivered before members of the Brooklyn section of the Friends of Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va. Mr. Taft is President of the Board of Trustees of the institute, which is concerned with the improvement of the lot of the negro.

"It outrages one's feelings," declared the ex-President, "to hear that there is even now an effort by small-minded and perverted people in this country to establish and spread anti-Semitic propaganda. It must and it will fail. We are too enlightened for such a recession to the Dark Ages."

TAFT SEES IN RELIGION FOE TO WAR REACTION

Exhorts Unitarian Workers in $3,000,000 Drive to Place Church Among Militant Faiths.

William Howard Taft, addressing more than 300 workers in the Unitarian religious and educational campaign and drive for $3,000,000 at a luncheon yesterday at the Hotel Astor, exhorted them "to go forward and to take our place in the militant religions and show to the world the faith that is in us by our missionary work in the fields where we ought to succeed."

The reaction following the war, ex-President Taft said, has developed "a frightful lack of seriousness, extravagance, luxury and a turning again to the things of the world in a way that, in phases of it, is most discouraging. But," Mr. Taft added, "it is only temporary, I am convinced."

"It is only getting over something in a way of the fullness of heart and soul that poor human nature cannot stand too long," he continued, "there has to be a little reaction from it. But the lessons of the war have not been lost. It is now, when there is danger that they may be lost, that we need this forward march, this movement in the interest of religion, to stir the indifference and inertia of men who have left the church on the excuse that they do not believe in the creed or dogma, and have given up religion altogether on that account.

"Education is an essential basis for successful popular government, and it is predicated on the assumption that with education men will make good citizens, will see clearly what the public interest is and will use their influence and vote and activities to promote that interest. But education alone, without the instilling of moral principle, and without the strengthening of that morality with religious spirit, may often prove to give to citizens a knowledge without the moral impulse to use it properly. Therefore, where freedom of religion prevails, where religion cannot be united by government with education, the burden upon the churches to make up for this lack is greater, and the danger from a failure of the churches is more threatening."

Among those present were:

Alexander J. Hemphill, Honorary Vice Chairman; Dr. W. B. Dunning, Chairman; Charles H. Strong, President of the Unitarian Laymen's League; the Rev. Minot Simons, Vice Chairman of the Taft Committee; Albert H. Wiggin, Ira A. Place, Eugene V. R. Thayer, Percival R. Moses, Mrs. Emile Glogau, George W. Smith, Miss Ida Slade, Edwin G. Marks, William L. Enequist, John F. Thompson, O. Ellery Edwards, M. R. Porter, Mrs. Edgar S. Wiers, Carl Sayward, Mrs. Caroline Atherton, Alexander V. Fraser, Judge Willard Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. E. Morgan Grinnell, Mr. and Mrs. John Burnet Nash, Dr. William L. Sullivan, Mrs. Sullivan, the Rev. Charles Francis Potter, Mrs. Potter, Mrs. William B. Dunning, Mrs. Charles H. Strong, Miss Elizabeth R. Wellington, Alfred T. White and Mrs. Samuel Untermyer.

Italian Prince Who Renounced His Title to Enter Monastery.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—De Landas Berghes, an Italian Prince, who renounced his title to enter the Monastery of St. Thomas, at Villanova, died last night after an illness of three days. He was formerly the Archbishop of the American branch of the old Jansenistic Catholic Church and renounced that body to enter the monastery.

Dr. Berghes was 47 years old and would have been admitted to the Augustinian Order next March, having become a novice last Spring. He was the son of Count de Lands Bougogne de Roch and Adelaide M. de Grimont-Hamilton. His elevation to Archbishop in the Jansenistic Catholic Church took place in 1916 after his arrival in this country.

In 1916, while the Bishop was residing at the Ascension Rectory in Brooklyn, he sued F. Cunliffe-Owen, the writer, for $100,000 alleged libel of his character and social standing.

Ex-Congressman Oakey.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 18.—P. Davis Oakey, former member of Congress from the First Connecticut District, died here late today at a hotel where he had lived for some time. Mr. Oakey was born in East Millstone, N. J., 60 years ago. He was on the staff of The Hartford Courant for several years and held several city offices in Hartford. He was elected to Congress on the Republican ticket in 1914 and served two years in the Sixty-fourth Congress.

Captain George W. Fulmer.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—George W. Fulmer, one of the oldest and most widely known towboat captains in the Philadelphia harbor, died today at his home here. He was 85 years old and had spent seventy-five years aboard vessels of various types. He had been a captain of towboats since he was 19. During the Civil War he commanded the Philadelphia tug Commodore Foote, which was used by the Government in Southern waters.

Viscountess Falkland.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The death is announced of Viscountess Falkland.

Viscountess Falkland was the wife of Byron Plantagenet Cary, twelfth Viscount Falkland and twelfth Lord Cary, representative peer for Scotland. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Mary Reade, daughter of Robert Reade of New York. Her London address was 26 Upper Grosvenor Street.

FUSION FEELER PUT OUT BY REPUBLICANS

Resolution at County Committee Demands Leaders Take Stand.

KOENIG WARNS HIS PARTY

Says Vote Merely Represents Lack of Confidence in Autocratic Regime.

A resolution introduced at the meeting of the Republican County Committee in Bryant Hall last night would force the Executive Committee of that body, composed of the Republican district leaders in Manhattan, to take a definite stand on the question of whether the Republicans should go in for fusion in the Mayoralty campaign or nominate a straight ticket and "go it alone."

The victory won in the election a year ago by F. H. La Guardia and Magistrate Henry Curran as candidates for President of the Board of Aldermen and President of the Borough of Manhattan, respectively, on a straight Republican ticket inspired the Republicans with hope that they might score a victory in a municipal election without resort to fusion. This idea has been strengthened by the overwhelming majorities received in this city in the recent election.

The resolution follows:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee is hereby respectfully requested to inquire into the advisability of holding unofficial party conventions for the purpose of recommending to the enrolled voters candidates for nomination to the city, county and borough offices to be voted for at the primary and general elections next year; and further

Resolved, That said Executive Committee also inquire into the advisability of recommending independent candidates for some of said offices; to the end that all such Republican nominations to be voted upon at the general election in 1921 shall be representative of the best interests of the city and of a calibre to commend the enthusiastic support of all citizens desirous of a standard of conduct of the public business worthy of New York; and further

Resolved, That said Executive Committee duly report its recommendations to the County Committee.

The resolution was introduced by Martin Saxe, who after serving as a State Senator became State Tax Commissioner during the Whitman administration at Albany and now is credited with aspirations to become a candidate for Mayor. It was referred to the Executive Committee without debate. Mr. Saxe told reporters it was intended as a feeler for Fusion.

After authorizing Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the County Committee, to appoint a committee on amendments to the election law which is expected to recommend the introduction of voting machines in this city, a committee on city legislation and a third on State legislation, the meeting resolved itself into a victory celebration.

Chairman Koenig in his introductory remarks sounded a note of caution. "I trust no one will regard the overwhelming victory we have won as a vote of indorsement of the Republican Party," he said. "It merely represented a lack of confidence in the party now in power and resentment of its autocratic methods. The Republican Party will be on trial for the next four years."

Reginald Farrer Dies in India.

MOVIE SAFETY LAW TO BE ENFORCED

Mrs. O'Grady Orders Arrests When Children Are Admitted Without Guardians.

DIRECTS RIGID INSPECTION

Fifth Deputy Police Commissioner Instructs Lieutenants to Watch Theatres.

A police campaign for the strict enforcement of the laws regarding moving picture houses, following the killing of six children in the panic on Sunday at the New Catharine Theatre, was started yesterday by Fifth Deputy Police Commissioner Ellen O'Grady.

Mrs. O'Grady addressed sixty-five police lieutenants and twenty-two police women of the Police Welfare Bureau yesterday on this subject. The excuse that children induce a grown-up man or woman to pose as their parents and escort them in will no longer be accepted.

"Some of the theatre proprietors are unscrupulous and money mad," said Mrs. O'Grady. "It is up to you officers to show no leniency where violations are detected."

Mrs. O'Grady said that most of the high-class houses, which do not depend largely on the patronage of children, had been scrupulous in carrying out the law, and that the laxity had been largely with the smaller neighborhood houses.

Mrs. O'Grady directed the policemen to make a practice of entering the motion picture houses, looking over the audiences, ordering out unaccompanied children, calling for the refund of the ticket money, and for the arrest of the proprietor of the place, where such violations were discovered.

She said that some proprietors had obtained possession by subterfuge of cards purporting to bear the permission of a parent for children to attend motion pictures and used these cards as a defense when children were found alone on the premises. Mrs. O'Grady said that the evasion of the law was sometimes due to careless parents.

George Lewis, 35 years old, of 259 South Third Street, Brooklyn, manager of the Police Moving Picture Theatre at 133 Essex Street, was held in $500 bail in Essex Market Court yesterday on the charge of admitting minors without parents or guardians.

URGES SEGREGATION IN DRUG HABIT CURE

65 ARE SELF-COMMITTED

They Told Prison Commissioner They Went to the Island Under a Misunderstanding.

ALBANY, Nov. 18.—Criticism of the practice of the New York City authorities in treating drug addicts with no criminal record but who are seeking relief from the drug habit, the same as the addicts convicted of crimes, is expressed by John S. Kennedy, President of the State Commission of Prisons, in a report on the municipal farm on Riker's Island.

The municipal farm is devoted exclusively to the treatment of drug addicts. When Commissioner Kennedy visited the institution on Oct. 12, it had 278 inmates, 65 of whom were self-committed and 49 of this number had never been in an institution before.

One man told the Commissioner that he had come to New York from Tennessee for treatment. Although he was well supplied with money to pay for his care he was sent to the municipal farm to be treated at city expense.

"It was found," the report says, "that while the self-committed addicts had a separate dormitory and separate tables at mess, they are in almost all respects on the same basis as those convicted of crimes and serving sentences. They wear the departmental criminal uniform, work the same and are under the same discipline and subject to punishments as the delinquent inmates.

"Among the self-committed addicts there was practically a unanimous complaint that they had been committed to the institution under a false understanding. They stated that a representative of the city Department of Health had assured them they would be detained only sixty days, whereas the rule of the institution is 100 days and this is invariably carried out. Whether 60 or 100 days is the proper time, they should be told correctly at the outset."

We offer the astounding number of 10,000

FOR MEN AND YOUNG MEN—In All Models, Fabrics, Colors & Patterns

Made to Retail at $40 $45 $50 $55 & $60

You can judge something of the magnitude of this sale when we tell you that there are in this selection at $27.50 alone more than 10,000 garments. Do you wonder that this is the one big outstanding and absolutely unmatched sale of New York today?

This tremendous saving is the outcome of what has since turned out to be the biggest piece of business strategy we ever made. And the reason we alone, of all the leading clothing merchants of New York, are able to make this astounding offer is because we had the courage and foresight to stand by while all others, with practically no exceptions, bought heavily at top prices. Wholesalers laughed at our attitude, predicting that we would pay dearly for our policy of waiting. You know the rest. The market suddenly sagged, and in the past 45 days we have rounded up over $1,000,000 worth of high grade clothing at practically 50c on the dollar. If any store can match these values, we will refund your money.

For $5 Extra

At time of purchase of Suit, you can buy an extra pair of pants to match for $5. This price applies only to the Suits at $27.50

NOTE—Due to our extremely small margin of profit on these Suits and Overcoats, alterations will be charged for at actual cost of time involved in making them.

NEW CABINET TAKES CONTROL IN GREECE

BRITISH REFUSE NEW CREDIT

Talk in Athens of Serbs Seizing Saloniki if Balkan Balance Is Upset.

VENIZELOS SLIPS AWAY

Opposition of Britain and France to Restoration of Constantine Is Forecast by Paris.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Greek Legation announced today that the new Greek Cabinet formed by George Rhallis was as follows:

Minister of War—DEMETRIOS GOUNARIS.

Minister of Marine—JOHN RHALLIS.

Ex-Premier Venizelos left for Nice yesterday on board the yacht Narcissus, says a Reuter's dispatch from Athens. The yacht was escorted by a British cruiser and two destroyers.

Queen Mother for Regent.

ATHENS, Nov. 18 (Associated Press).—George Rhallis, the new Premier of Greece, with three members of his Cabinet, took the oath of office before Admiral Coundouriotis, the Regent, at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Those who qualified in company with the Premier were M. Gounaris, Minister of War; M. Baledris, Minister of Interior, and M. Kalogeropoulos, Minister of Finance.

Immediately after he had qualified for office, M. Rhallis demanded the Regent's resignation. The other members of the new Cabinet will take the oath before Queen Mother Olga.

Parliament will be convened on next Thursday, and Queen Mother Olga will then take the oath of Regent.

Great Britain has notified Premier Rhallis that it will refuse a credit guarantee for a new issue of bonds amounting to 400,000,000 drachmas.

Former officers and civil servants under King Constantine are being reinstated, while the Venizelists are resigning office.

It is expected that General Nider will be the new commander of the army.

If the Balkan balance is upset it is anticipated here that the Serbs will seize Saloniki.

Athens was quiet today, except for scattering shots at various places. Soldiers were walking up and down the principal streets joyfully firing their revolvers and rifles. The portrait of Constantine has replaced that of Venizelos in the shop windows.

Acceptance of the Premiership by Rhallis was conditioned upon the written resignation of former Premier Venizelos, assurance that order would be maintained and that plots by Venizelos officers would be suppressed, the new Premier said.

"The Regent has already been assured by the commander of the troops in Athens, General Othonaios," he continued, "that order will be kept, and that there will be no attempt at a coup d'état. Constantine is wanted by the people or what can be the meaning of this great demonstration at the ballot box, in which M. Venizelos himself was 9,000 votes behind the least successful of his party's candidates in the district of Attica?

"The reasons for the defeat of M. Venizelos were, first, the Greeks had a chance to revolt against the régime of arrest and murder which has been in power for the past three years. I, myself, was several times in prison, and all the people about me were persecuted and locked up. Second, the Greeks voted against the foreign domination which was supporting M. Venizelos.

"However, we purpose to start anew and forget the past. We will suppress the censorship of the press, including foreign correspondence, which was exercised by the followers of the former Premier."

Venizelos Takes Leave of People.

Venizelos, before leaving Greece, issued a message to the Greek people, telling them he was without hard feeling toward them because of their decision. The message read:

"I bear no bitterness on account of your vote, as I believe it would have been difficult for any other nation to have remained under arms two years after the armistice.

"My friends, I beg you to abide by the principles of the Liberal Party, and I thank your for your support. I shall always serve my country first."

Venizelos's destination is Nice, where his son, Sophocles, is to marry Mlle. Zervoudaki, a wealthy young Greek woman.

Like a college town at a football game, Athens turned out to celebrate yesterday afternoon, the first natural expression shown here in many weeks, if not months. The crowds, having managed to get some sleep after the past strenuous days and refreshed by the sunshine and windless weather, let themselves go. They organized a parade in University Street, marched past the home of the fallen Venizelos, swept on through Stade Street into Constitution Square, thence to the King's Palace, thence to the Stadium and back again, flooding the the side streets.

Allies Expected to Oppose Ex-King.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—(Associated Press)—Conversations over the situation in Greece created by the defeat of Venizelos are in progress between France and England, it was stated at the Foreign Office today. Neither country, it was explained, will act without the other.

The expectation is that an understanding will be reached taking the form of a declaration of policy to the new Greek Government. In this declaration, France and Great Britain, it is forecast, will reiterate their opposition to the return of ex-King Constantine to the throne.

No action will be taken, it is believed, until some definite indication has been received from the Greek Government to the effect that Constantine will be asked to reascend the throne. According to the latest reports reaching the Foreign Office no decision has been taken by the Rhallis Cabinet regarding the vacant throne, but it is believed in French circles that ex-Premier Gounaris, leader of the Government party, will urge a plebiscite to determine the status of Constantine. (In an interview Tuesday with an Associated Press staff correspondent in Athens, M. Gounaris declared such a plebiscite would be held.)

The Foreign Office up to noon today had received no confirmation of the reports that Queen Mother Olga had been named Regent of Greece. The unofficial report to that effect, however, was regarded as authentic, it was said.

Fraudulent Polish Passports To America Disclosed in Berlin

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—Investigation here disclosed that many Polish passports for the United States, Canada and Mexico were fraudulent and the visés forged. The disclosure followed the investigation into the recent labor troubles in Belgium, which the authorities there expressed the belief were fomented by Russian agitators.

Information obtained by the British passport office in Berlin also led to the discovery that numerous holders of Polish passports visé for America were seeking to enter England on the representation that their passage had been paid on liners from English ports. Forged receipts for the passage are said to have been shown.

It is stated that about fifty arrests have been made in Belgium in connection with the fraud. The destination of most of the emigrants who have gone to Belgium, it is understood, is Mexico, from which country they think they will be able later to enter the United States and Canada.

FRANCE MAY TREAT WITH KEMAL PASHA

INCLINED TO SCRAP TREATY

No Choice Between Coming to Terms with Nationalists and Fighting Them, It Is Held.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—France is considering overtures to the Turkish Nationalists, as a result of the Greek election and the Asia Minor situation. When the first shock of surprise caused by Venizelos's defeat was passed the Quai d'Orsay began to realize that perhaps from the French viewpoint it was not wholly regretable.

It will be remembered that the Greek expedition into Asia Minor to enforce the Turkish peace treaty—which had never been very highly approved in Paris—was an Anglo-Greek scheme, arranged between Lloyd George and Venizelos in London and rather reluctantly agreed to by Premier Millerand at Boulogne. At San Remo Marshal Foch had informed the allied Premiers it would need 300,000 men to clean up the Nationalists properly. Venizelos believed he could manage it. He has failed.

Alarming reports about the demoralization of the Greek forces have reached Paris. There are stories of squabbles between Venizelists and Constantinists with even more ominous talk about mutinies due to the desire of the men to return home and fanned by insidious propaganda launched far to the northeast. It appears certain that the area occupied by the Greeks will be very greatly reduced in the near future. The consequent marked access of Nationalist influence cannot leave unmoved the French who, as The Temps points out tonight, are holding territory 100 miles hundreds of miles deep beyond Cilicia.

An inspired Temps editorial says plainly that the best thing to be done is to negotiate with the Nationalists, who represent the de facto power in Turkey. This would, of course, mean tearing up the Sèvres treaty, but as the Greeks, who would be the principal losers by that, have themselves pronounced against the Venizelist policy of expansion France is now free to consider her own interests. Italy, who is also concerned, has virtually renounced occupation of the territory assigned to her and the British are withdrawing their outposts beyond the Mesopotamia area.

Unless the French come to terms with the Nationalists they have no choice but to fight them. Already there are protests here against the expense of the Near Eastern forces and any extension of their activities would be strongly opposed.

CONSTANTINE DENIES HOSTILITY TO ALLIES

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—"I shall obey the wishes of my people." That is the policy of ex-King Constantine of Greece as he expressed it in an interview with Stephane Lauzanne at Lucerne yesterday, and he added: "One is very strong when one follows the wish of one's people."

His face, usually rather heavy, was lit up with a fire of joy which he didn't try to conceal, Lauzanne says, and he tapped a tattoo on a pile of congratulatory telegrams on the table.

"I am proud of my people," he declared, "but I won't remount the throne till they have signified by another act which will positively take the form of a plebiscite that they want me again for their sovereign."

"But what will you do if the allied powers oppose your return to Greece?" Lauzanne asked.

"Why should they oppose it?" cried the ex-King. "Why should they oppose the wish of my people?"

They might not do that, Lauzanne suggested, but they might refuse their confidence to a country with such a King, and without the Allies' confidence Greece might find herself in an uncomfortable situation.

"But why, but why?" cried the ex-King. Why hadn't they allowed that he should explain and defend himself before them? Why had they shut him away behind the barbed wire of the Swiss frontier? Why? Why?

Lauzanne suggested as reasons the troubled past and his unfortunate family connections.

"But I'm a cousin of the King of England as well as the brother-in-law of the Kaiser," exclaimed Constantine. He had never shared the ideas or sympathized with the plans of the Kaiser. He was always loyal to the Allies. All he wanted was a "white peace," a peace without all sacrificed to victory. He wanted to be neutral.

Then he launched into a tirade against Venizelos. It was he who made the trouble. He was fatal to Greece. He was a man without any heart. He had only ambition.

Constantine went off into a bitter complaint that while King Alexander was dying telegrams of his family were never answered.

Lauzanne took it on himself to remind the ex-King that others in the war had suffered the agony of lack of news.

"If you have to choose between the wish of your people and the wish of the Allies," he asked, "which will you follow?" And dramatically the ex-King announced that he would follow the wish of his people. His people alone must decide who their King should be, and there does not seem to be much doubt in Constantine's mind that their choice will be Constantine.

IRELAND IN CHAOS, WITNESSES ASSERT

Irishman and American Visitors Tell Villard Committee of "Disorders by Troops."

SAY PEOPLE ARE REPUBLICAN

Chairman of Inquiry Says We Are Affected and Should Aid to End Hatreds.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (Associated Press).—Eyewitness reports of disturbances in Ireland connected with the movement for Irish independence were given today at the opening hearings of the commission of the Villard Committee of One Hundred investigating the Irish question.

Four witnesses, including Denis Morgan, Chairman of the Town Council of Thurles, Ireland, and three Americans who visited Ireland recently—John F. Martin, of Green Bay, Wis., and two clergymen, Father Michael English, of Whitehall, Mont., and Father James H. Cotter, of Ironton, Ohio—were heard by the commission. All expressed sympathy for the Irish independence movement and told of violent events which they had seen, and agreed that civil processes, except of the "Provisional Irish Republic," were virtually at an end under the rule of the British military forces.

Mr. Morgan said his home was riddled with bullets prior to his arrest and deportation to England without any definite charges being preferred against him. With 200 other Irish Republican leaders, he said, he went on a hunger strike until they were released. He also told of "murders" of Irish citizens by constabulary and soldiers, including the "black and tan" forces.

Father English asserted that while he was visiting his parents in Ireland soldiers entered his father's home, searching all the men and his baggage for arms. He said that when he protested on the ground that he was an American citizen, the English officer replied:

"Your American citizensnip don't count here."

"An inspector who searched the house," said Father English, "took a picture of George Washington from the mantelpiece, threw it on the floor and ground it with his heels, saying, 'This is what all these Americans should get.'"

Father English also told of having witnessed the shooting of an Irishman whose body, he said, was beaten into unrecognizable form.

Father Cotter, a Catholic editor, told of the killing of a Galway civilian by a British soldier, whom, he said, he knew. The soldier, he said, was seized by another civilian and reprisals against the town followed an hour later. Soldiers shot up the streets "for several hours," he said.

"The aged priest added that he lay for an hour and a half under a window ledge of his house to escape the flying bullets. The military, he added, later set fire to two houses and fired into a Galway newspaper plant whose management was friendly to the Republican movement.

Father Cotter and Mr. Martin, a Knights of Columbus official, stated that sentiment in Ireland, as they found it, was virtually unanimous for independence.

"Sympathies of everyone I met, Catholic and Protestant, were for the Republicans," said Father Cotter. "The belief that religious prejudice or differences were involved in Ireland was unfounded," he added.

"There was absolute unanimity of opinion for Home Rule," Mr. Martin told the commission.

Easy Law Is Suspended.

All witnesses said that civil court procedure was suspended in Ireland, Coroners' inquests were prohibited by the British Government and the only authority exercised, except for the British military forces, was that of the Irish Republicans.

About 600 soldiers and 400 police are stationed constantly in Limerick, the Rev. Father English told the commission. Military raids through Penniwell, a Limerick district, were so frequent, he said, that it had been named the "Pennivill Sector." He told of a fire started either by hand grenades or incendiaries which injured 200 houses in Penniwill and said he saw many marks of bullets and bombs.

Mr. Martin said he was halted and searched frequently by soldiers during a journey from Limerick to Cork. He said there were great numbers of military motor lorries in Cork, patrolling the streets continually.

In the space of five blocks, Mr. Martin said, he noticed that about 80 per cent. of the windows of houses and stores had been shattered by the activities of the soldiers.

"No compensation has been made by the British Government for the destruction of property whose destruction has been proved against its own forces," he declared.

Father Cotter said he spent eight weeks in Ireland last Summer visiting Cork, Galway, Queenstown and many smaller towns. In Cork, he said, a sister of Terence MacSwiney, the late Lord Mayor, showed him a dum-dum bullet which had been fired at her but missed.

"Nights in Cork are hideous with the shots of the military," said Father Cotter. He and Father English told also of seeing intoxicated soldiers firing their arms in the streets.

In the examination of Mr. Morgan, Frank H. Walsh and Dudley Field Malone, counsel for the "Commission for Irish Independence," participated, but Frederick C. Howe, Chairman; Senator Walsh of Massachusetts and other members of the investigating commission questioned the American witnesses. It was made clear by Senator Walsh that all of the witnesses were summoned by the commission, which pays their expenses, without relation to any other organization in the country.

In opening the hearings Chairman Howe said the commission was to conduct an "impartial inquiry" into all the facts, both from Irish and English sources, and later send a committee to Ireland for further inquiry.

The hearings here are expected to continue, for several weeks. Tomorrow John Derham, a Republican leader of Balbriggan, Ireland, will be heard, together with other American visitors to Ireland, including Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hackett of New York, Mrs. William King of Ironton, Ohio, and Paul J. Furnas of New York.

Chairman Says We Are Affected.

"Only the direst necessity can justify a resort to arms for the adjustment of disputes in Ireland," said Chairman Howe at the opening of the commission's hearing. He added that the conditions in Ireland "have created and are creating a widening rift in the friendly relations of English-speaking people not only in America, but all over the world.

"What the world needs is peace," Mr. Howe continued. "It needs an ending of hate. Discussion should resume its ascendancy and reason should displace the employment of force.

"The orgy of destruction which is now ravishing Ireland is sending its reprecussions to every corner of the civilized world. It cannot fail to postpone indefinitely the return of ordered tranquility to civilization. In addition to all of this, the political life of America as well as its social processes are profoundly disturbed by the injection of the internecine war between peoples of our own flesh and blood."

Mr. Howe said the commission had determined to ascertain the facts and to learn as nearly as possible what conditions are in Ireland and the reasons for them.

"The commission plans to send a mission to England and Ireland to make an inquiry into conditions in the latter country," Mr. Howe explained. "It will investigate the killings and disorders. Quite as important to the permanent adjustment of the dispute, it will investigate the economic conditions in Ireland, the extent to which the Irish have developed a self-contained economic and cultural life, as well as the extent to which the Irish people have evolved their own agencies of self-government during the last few years."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 18.—The Bolshevist movement in Holland has shown hardly a ripple on the surface in the last six months, and so far as the Dutch are concerned it has not greatly increased its membership.

I learn, however, that Dutch Government authorities recently obtained possession of documents proving that Lenin still considers Holland the main and most important base for international propaganda, as well as the best field for Bolshevist financial operations, and that in spite of the constant organized efforts of the American Consulate and Legation to shut down on undesirables, Lenin still looks upon Rotterdam as the most favorable port from which to reach America. Holland is, in fact, now the pivot of Lenin's courier service toward the Western hemisphere.

In the aforesaid documents Lenin lays stress on the valuable possibilities afforded through the crews of the large number of vessels leaving for the United States. Stringent measures were recently enforced for passport control of ships' companies.

SAYS IRISH PLANNED TO SPREAD MICROBES

THREE KILLED IN CORK

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Sir Hamar Greenwood, in the House of Commons today, said that in a recent raid an official Sinn Fein document was captured which favored plans to communicate typhoid fever to troops and glanders to army horses. In view of the possible discussion which might arise over the document, the full text was officially issued tonight. It follows:

"From the Commander in Chief of the Irish Republican Army to his Chief of Staff.

"Subject—The troops themselves.

"How about spreading typhoid fever among the British troops? I know of no other ordinary disease that could be spread among them with safety to the rest of the population. They might retaliate, but that is for consideration. To get typhoid fever one must eat or drink the typhoid bacillus or microbe. It is easy to get fresh and virulent cultures. The best medium of conveying them is through milk. They can also be conveyed in water, but through water it is difficult unless there are special cisterns or tanks near each place into which a pint or so could be poured. Milk is by far the best medium, but if milk is used it can be investigated.

"Caution! There is no danger to the operator unless he gets the microbes on his hands or clothes. Care would have to get special attention after infected milk had been emptied. They could in turn convey the disease to the civil population.

"It should be possible to give horses glanders. I know they can be inoculated, but that method would be impossible. The disease is got from harness and by putting a horse in a stable from which an infected horse has been removed. Therefore, it should be possible to pass the infection by means of doctoring the oats, and it should be possible to get the oats at railway stations, &c.

"Method. Any doctor or veterinary surgeon will be able to tell you how to grow microbes. If they don't know they can look it up in any text book on bacteriology. It is necessary to get a fresh culture, that is, microbes grown from the discharge of an infected horse. This should easily be got around a veterinary college or some place. Microbes kept in a laboratory lose their virulence with each sub-culture. If you get microbes they can be grown in a chicken incubator. If you can't get them grown in a laboratory any doctor can find out the medium in which they can grow.

"Assume you have half a pint of active microbes. Then take a hollow stick or piece of piping. Get another stick to fit in this like a ramrod of a gun. Put this stick down in a sack of oats. Withdraw the ramrod, then pour in the microbes while you at the same time withdraw the hollow stick or piping. In this way you can distribute the microbes from the bottom of the sack to the top without disturbing the oats, and it can be done quickly.

"Caution! Operators must not allow any of the fluid to get on their hands or clothes. The stick and bottle should be burned after use. A couple of thousand horses infected would make a sensation. Saddles, &c., would have to be burned and the stable disinfected.

"If these ideas are of any use you will need expert advice, so I need not go into the matter further. If these are thought practical let me know, and I'll study other things in the same line in the hope of discovering the possibilities. At the moment I can't think of anything else in that line.

"Give my regards to all and hope the success will continue. I enjoyed my visit, and will now feel in personal touch more than ever. God bless you all."

Kill Three in Cork.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Three men were lying dead today in the Cork mortuary while two others badly wounded were in hospital as a result of several attacks last night on individual houses by armed men foiling the killing of Sergeant O'Donaghue of the constabulary, according to a Cork dispatch to the Central News this afternoon. The people, in consternation, were afraid to venture outdoors, the dispatch added.

The first affair occurred near midnight, the dispatch said, when two former soldiers were dragged from their beds, one of them killed and one wounded. Later a civilian was called to his door, shot and killed. Some time after midnight another civilian was shot dead and a former soldier wounded.

Art O'Brien, President of the Gaelic League in London, authorized a statement last night that he had been threatened with death unless he "cleared out" of the city within twenty-four hours. He declared that the warning had been signed "Black and Tans," and had been dropped in a letter box at his office.

Egan Quits Irish Inquiry.

Dr. Maurice Francis Egan, ex-United States Minister to Denmark, recently appointed a member of the Committee of One Hundred Investigating the Irish Question, yesterday sent a telegram expressing his regret at being obliged to resign from the committee, as he felt no findings could be useful unless the committee had power to enforce the presence of witnesses.

A statement by Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University, made public here last night, said that he was invited to join the committee but never accepted.

CALIFORNIA ISSUE STIRS THE JAPANESE

Speakers Agree There Is Cause for Hostilities, but Differ on Question of Expediency.

TOKIO, Nov. 18 (Associated Press).—A committee of Tokio journalists passed a resolution here today demanding that a national protest be made against Californian legislation hostile to the Japanese. They decided to hold a mass protest meeting in Tokio, and also to amalgamate with the twenty scattered societies dealing with the emigration question.

The Kokumin Shimbun and the Yorozu Choho, which led the outcry against the California legislation, simultaneously advocate appeals to public opinion in preference to stronger courses. The Kokumin Shimbun suggests a war of tongues as a middle course between the old alternatives of humiliation and war. Japan's resistance to Californian legislative discrimination, it says, "should take the form of an appeal to the public opinion of the world."

The Asahi Shimbun suggests that the Shantung question should be decided by international arbitration. It says that Japan has nothing to fear from such a course.

Two thousand university students met here Tuesday night to discuss the question "Shall Japan Fight America?" The debate lasted four hours and was marked by vehement oratory, but the audience remained in good humor during the evening. The managers of the meeting, out of deference to the police, decided not to take a vote on the merits of the question as disclosed by the speakers, and apparently the audience was equally divided as to the expediency of war between the two countries.

Speakers taking part in the debate agreed that the action of California in legislating against Japanese owning property in that State furnished a sufficient cause for hostilities, but they differed concerning the expediency of going to war. Many pointed out the fact that America's wealth and preparedness contrasted with Japan's weakness. One student thought that if Japan attacked America over this question other white races might combine against Japan. The orators freely praised America's past friendliness for this country, but added: "Now that Japan is grown up, America is tired of us."

Notwithstanding all this there is a distinct improvement in the situation between Japan and the United States relative to the California controversy, and officials evidently believe real progress is being made in the negotiations between the two countries.

Members of the House of Peers are showing their interest in the International Cable conference being held in Washington. A deputation of all parties in the Upper House of Parliament waited upon Viscount Uchida Foreign Minister, today and discussed the cable connection between Japan and the Island of Yap. Later, representative members of the Upper Chamber met and decided to urge the Government to protect Japanese interests in this line.

SCOTLAND YARD WANTS TO HEAR W. D. VANDERLIP

American Embassy Is Informed of Intention to Question Him on Russian Negotiations.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The American Embassy here was notified today that Washington D. Vanderlip, California oil and mining engineer, who recently was in Moscow, will be closely questioned by the Intelligence Department of Scotland Yard on his arrival in London if the present plans of the police are carried out. The notification was given as a matter of courtesy and is not given in like cases of lesser importance.

The interrogation will not necessarily be made with the view of taking action against Mr. Vanderlip's presence in England, it was said, but with the intention of ascertaining exactly what his activities had been in Russia in view of the many conflicting reports published in London. Such interrogation, it was pointed out, would be in conformity with the recently adopted attitude of the British Government of discouraging travel between Russia and England.

W. D. Vanderlip was in Stockholm up to a few days ago. He recently returned from Moscow and gave out a statement, asserting that he had secured a concession for 400,000 square miles of land in Siberia, including Kamchatka, for a syndicate of Americans.

APPROVES RAPALLO TREATY.

Committee of Chamber Accepts Settlement—Large Vote for Giolitti.

ROME, Nov. 18.—The Committee on Foreign Affairs of the Chamber of Deputies today approved the treaty of Rapallo. The Socialists refrained from voting, saying their party had not yet considered the situation.

Heated debate, during which Premier Giolitti defended his political record and the policies of his Government, preceded the vote of confidence given the Cabinet in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. A Socialist motion censuring the Government's intrnal policy was defeated by a vote of 202 to 83.

Lloyd George Tells Commons He Hopes to Have It Ready for Soviet in Few Days.

AGENTS ACTIVE IN CANADA

Washington Officials Intimate Policy of United States Government in Matter Will Not Be Modified.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Premier Lloyd George stated in the House of Commons today that the Cabinet had decided that a draft of an agreement to carry out the July arrangements for trade with Russia should be prepared and he hoped it would be ready for submission to the Russian Government in a few days.

The Premier said the agreement would not be entered into until Great Britain was satisfied that the undertaking given by the Soviet Government regarding the release of British prisoners was being carried out.

An authorized statement has been issued denying that the British Government contemplates evacuating General Wrangel's forces or stores. The statement says the British ships have been engaged solely in removing British subjects from the Crimea and a small party of Russian children from a hospital at Sebastopol.

It is also denied that Great Britain had any intention of seizing Batum or other ports on the Black Sea.

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—Fresh attempts by the Soviet Government of Russia to open trade relations with Canada were forecast here today as a result of the defeat of the anti-Bolshevist forces in the Crimea.

Soviet Government agents already have called on the Department of Trade and Commerce seeking a guarantee from the Dominion Government that gold shipped in payment of purchases would not be alienated for the settlement of claims made by other creditors against Russia. This request was refused, but the agents were informed any Canadian could trade with Russia at his own risk.

To Stand by Colby Note.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The reported announcement in London today that the British Government contemplated carrying through the arrangements for trade relations with Russia entered into provisionally in the negotiations held last Summer with the emissaries of the Soviet Government of Russia, with the idea of trying to restore normal trade relations between England and Russia, will not alter the present Russian policy of the American State Department.

It was intimated in high official circles today that the State Department stands on the Russian policy outlined in Secretary Colby's note of Aug. 10 last and that there would be no change in the previous attitude of the department with respect to Americans trading with Russia under which policy it is possible for Americans to engage in such trade, not with the official sanction and support of the Washington Government, but only at their own risk and in the face of the warning that they would have to abide by the consequences in the event of trouble or loss.

The reported intention of the British Government to carry through the provisional arrangements entered into last Summer does not come as a surprise to officials and diplomats in Washington, who have rather expected that the collapse of the Wrangel military movement would result in some such action by the British Government in the face of renewed efforts by Moscow to bring about the carrying out of the arrangement which had been under negotiation with the British Cabinet.

At the outset of the negotiations the British Government demanded explicit pledges from the Bolshevist authorities that the Soviet Government would not undertake to spread Bolshevist propaganda or conduct a political fight against British interests in Persia, Mesopotamia, Afghanistan and India and not seek to carry forward its movement for the overthrow of recognized Governments by violence.

No commitments respecting Russia's foreign debt were made by the Soviet representatives. Officials of the American Government are of the opinion that a reliable or dependable promise of this sort is too remote to be worth serious consideration.

The belief is strong here that England's action, unless upset by some sudden development in the situation, is a step in the direction of possible political recognition of the Moscow régime by the British Government. It will amount to a recognition of de facto authority on the part of Soviet Russia, as distinguished from recognition of a de jure government. It was pointed out today that the British Government practiced more than the United States the policy of granting de facto recognition in cases where de jure recognition is not considered expedient.

The belief here is that national sentiment will develop in Russia against any nation that is found, after the liquidation of the Bolsheviki, to have acquired Russia's gold. The prospect is that little of it will be found in American hands.

50,000 FROM CRIMEA CROWD ALLIED SHIPS

Some of 41 Vessels in Bosporus Said to Have 10,000 Refugees Packed Aboard.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 17.—Forty ships of various flags, with 50,000 Crimean refugees on board, including those from Theodosia and Yalta, are incumbering the waters of the Bosporus. Sanitary conditions on board the ships are described as terrible. Some steamers are carrying as many as 10,000 refugees. About 20,000 men who fought in the Anti-Bolshevist Army were brought from Sebastopol.

Only sick and wounded refugees, numbering about 5,000, have been allowed to land.

Gallipoli colony, where camps for the refugees are being prepared, is reported to be in the utmost disorder.

M. de Martel, French High Commissioner to Turkey, has proposed to his Government that some of the refugees be sent to Madagascar.

The Jugoslav Government has undertaken to provide a refuge for several hundred of them.

It is not yet known where the Russian Army will be reorganized. Eighteen Russian organizations met at the Consulate here yesterday and adopted the following resolution:

"Representatives of all Russian organizations feel that the struggle against the Bolsheviki must continue, and consider General Baron Wrangel as their leader."

It was decided to create a Russian National Committee.

SALONIKI, Nov. 19.—Instructions have been received by the American Red Cross unit here to prepare to assist 7,000 Russian refugees coming from the Island of Lemnos, in the Aegean Sea.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The French Foreign Office is informed that 50,000 Russian refugees from the Crimea has arrived in Constantinople on French and American ships. Only the seriously ill and wounded have been landed, owing to the overcrowded condition of the Turkish capital. The allied authorities, particularly the French, are seeking where the refugees can be housed.

Latest reports indicate that the total number of persons who fled from the Crimea is about 100,000.

Non-Partisan League Paper Goes Into Receiver's Hands

ABERDEEN, S. D., Nov. 18.—The Northwest Square Deal, the Non-Partisan League daily newspaper here, today went into the hands of a receiver. The stockholders' petition states that farmers of this vicinity invested $51,585.52 in cash and notes in support of the paper since January of this year. In addition, a mortgage of $6,000 against the real estate of the newspaper and a running indebtedness of $1,500 monthly is said to have been incurred by the publication. The mortgaged plant is the sole asset of the firm, stockholders declare.

General Debeney Regards Some Form of Intervention as an Eventual Necessity.

FRENCH HOPE FOR OUR AID

But Will Make No Move to Obtain Co-operation Until New Administration Is Installed.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—There is a growing feeling here that something definite must be done about Russia, and hope is entertained that American co-operation may later be available.

The French believe that the world will never regain a state of peace and prosperity as long as Moscow despotism remains.

On the one hand, the Bolsheviki persist in fomenting internal trouble in every nation of the world under the impulse of distorted fanaticism. On the other, they have reduced Russia, which ought to be one of the greatest world sources of raw materials, to utter ruin and a wilderness. The French believe, too, that the rule of the Bolsheviki is abhorrent to the great mass of the Russian people, that they have seen attempt after attempt of the anti-Bolsheviki fail completely, and their information goes to show that expectation of any internal revolution against Bolshevist tyranny is not to be seriously entertained.

Rightly or wrongly, there is a pretty strong impression here that these views are also held by the United States, with perhaps one im ortant difference. The French judge from the American note to Italy about Russia and from various other sources that America generally believes the Bolsheviki cannot last, and that therefore it is a mistake to meddle with Russia now or in the near future.

This view obtained here also some months ago, but now it is thought that on the contrary the Bolsheviki are too strongly established for the cowed and dejected Russian people to react against them. Nor do the French put faith in the alternative hope that the Bolshevist attitude might be modified as time goes on. This appears to be the impression in England, but the French object that the Boisheviki are not a political body in the ordinary sense, but rather a band of fanatics inspired by almost religious faith in their own doctrine, and that their adherence to it has only crystallized and become more uncompromising.

The extent, however, to which French feeling is stirred, is shown by the following statement given to THE NEW YORK TIMES by General Debeney, who commanded the First Army during the latter part of the great war and who recently has been appointed head of the French Staff College. This post, formerly held by Foch, is one of the most important in military system circles. Debeney is a close personal friend of Foch and Weygand, and his views undoubtedly reflect those of the highest army circles.

"There can be no real peace in the world," he said, "until the Russian problem is solved. Apart from political considerations, the people of Russia are hunted by the spectre of famine, and as a result the economic breakdown are continually pushing toward the south. This Winter food conditions will become desperate, which will exaggerate the unrest and outward pressure.

"I believe a solution of the Russian problem will prove an imperative necessity to the European countries and America as well. We shall not have to 'colonize' Russia—that word is too strong—but to help in restoring this unfortunate country to normal conditions.

"I thought last year that it was better to let Russia work out her own salvation. I still think that it is better not to dabble in Russian affairs for the present. But next year, when we have had time to examine the matter more closely and obtain the necessary data, I am convinced that we shall have"—the General emphasizes these words—"to solve the Russian problem which the Russians are unable to solve by themselves."

General Debeney also expressed the belief, which is general in France, that German influence is very strong among the Bolsheviki, especially in the Red Army.

At the beginning of this year I had access in Latvia to statistics regarding several thousand Red prisoners of all ranks captured in the Legalen campaign. With the exception of a few expirisoners and an occasional adventurer there was little evidence of German participation. On the other hand, both Germans and Reds are bitterly hostile to the Poles, and there are numerous factors which make for a community of interests between them.

But no matter whether there be cooperation or not, the fact remains that France believes it exists, and this belief alone is an exceedingly strong motive to drive the French to try to bring about the overthrow of the Bolsheviki.

LOOK TO US FOR AID.

French Say Americans Alone Can Handle Relief of Refugees.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—In the opinion of French official circles unless America will come in on a large scale, either officially or through her voluntary associations like the Red Cross, the situation of the refugees from South Russia will be one of the most tragic and fatal of the whole war.

Constantinople, already packed with thousands of refugees from Asia Minor, has been swamped. The French figures are that 50,000 have arrived from the Crimea and that another 50,000 are on the way. Food, already dear, has gone to famine prices, and there simply does not exist enough in the city and districts to feed the crowds arriving.

The French are seeking to establish refugee camps in Bulgaria, but in all they do they are handicapped by the absence of men with time to devote to organization, and the absence of material with which to help and the absence of money.

"It needs a Hoover to organize the appalling situation that has arisen," one French official said today, "and it needs some great association such as the American Red Cross which has trained organizers at its disposal and can get money. If some such body does not take the whole job in hand and deal with it in a big way we are going to have a most appalling condition of things in the Near East."

The refugees are largely, according to reports which have reached here, the best type of Russians who, fleeing before the Red Terror, have in the past three years taken refuge in Crimea and are now forced to leave this last place of shelter. None of the nations represented in Constantinople can deal with them adequately, and the only hope is that the Americans, who have done splendid work in taking off the refugees from the peninsula, will continue to succor those whom they have saved.

MEXICAN TROOPS IN SABINAS

WORK OF RADICAL MINORITY

Mexico City Reports That Most of Men Want to Work — Ultimatum to Owners.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—On account of the seizure of three mines and the threatened seizure of others by the workers, who have been on strike, all American citizens and their families in Sabinas, State of Coahuila, Mexico, are returning to this country.

The Governor of Coahuila has gone to Sabinas, but telegraphic reports received today stated that he had been powerless so far to control the situation, although there had not been serious acts of violence. Advices stated that an agent of the Mexican Government who had been sent to Sabinas to compose the troubles had carried on an agitation that had resulted in the seizure of the Agujita, Closete and Rositata mines.

The Mexican Government is reported to have proposed taking over the Lampacitas, Closete and Rio Escondido mines to assure a supply of coal for railway purposes, but its purpose was thwarted by the action of the miners. In the case of the Rio Escondido mine the strikers refused an increase of 20 per cent. in wages offered by the management on condition that the owners be allowed to operate the property. There is fear that the mines may be extensively damaged while in the hands of the strikers.

Increases Concern in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Seizure of coal mines in Coahuila, Mexico, by striking miners has served to increase the concern felt by American Government officials over the steady spread of radicalism in Mexico, it was said today at the State Department that no formal protest would be made unless representations were received from the owners of the property.

The property which the laborers have taken over was one owned by the American Metals Company, a German corporation, whose stock has been taken over by the Alien Property Custodian during the war and later acquired by Americans.

LAREDO, Texas, Nov. 18.—Striking Mexican coal mines, who seized the mines in the Monclova district of Coahuila yesterday, have notified all Americans to leave the district, according to reports reaching the United States Consular office at Nuevo Laredo today. No Americans have been victims of violence, the report said, but a number of refugees were reported to have arrived at the border at Eagle Pass today.

PREDICT PRICE DROP IS SURE TO CONTINUE

Two Bankers Assert Lowest Levels of Readjustment Are Still to Come.

WORST PASSED, SAYS ONE

R. H. Williams Optimistic—E. C. McDougal of Buffalo Sees Two More Years of Strain.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Business, which is now in a buyer's market, must continue in a process of readjustment until lower price levels are found to put into action the purchasing potentialities of the domestic and foreign markets, Roger H. Williams, Vice President of the National Bank of Commerce in New York, told the Knit Goods Manufacturers of America at tonight's session of their semi-annual meeting here.

Once these lower levels are established, he said, "there should be no reason to doubt that we will see an era of gratifying business activity."

"When that period comes the business man who has prepared and equipped himself to do a large volume of business on a narrow margin of profits should have no fault to find with the times," he added.

It is primarily on efficiency that American manufacturers must depend for the protection of their industries against foreign competition, Mr. Williams declared. He urged self-reliance of the industries and warned against expecting too much from the tariff as protection against foreign competition.

Says Europe Must Send Goods.

In this connection he explained Europe must ultimately liquidate her vast debts by sending her goods to America and attracting investments in her enterprises.

"This does not mean," he added, "that the tariff must be torn down so as to permit the dumping of cheaply produced goods upon our domestic markets. Unrestrained competition from cheap foreign labor and industries would be ruination. But, nevertheless, a tariff wall should not be reared so high as to make it impossible for Europe to liquidate debts here by sending us such goods in such quantities as we have a real economic need for. In the immediate past, prosperity has been thrust upon us; in the future, it must be more a matter of our own making."

Concerning the recent reaction and price slumps, Mr. Williams asserted many sought to blame Government banks or the Federal Reserve System. He said Americans should be thankful that things have not been worse, asserting "the chief credit for the fact that we are not now in the midst of a serious panic lies with the Federal Reserve System."

Credit Strain Peak Passed.

"Although we have probably never seen a more severe collapse in prices than we have witnessed in the last few months, we have not had the same general breakdown of business as has occurred in the great panics of the past," he added, noting that there were "unmistakable signs in the last fortnight of a turn for the better in the present movement."

"We are warranted in feeling that the peak of the credit strain is passed," he said, "and that from now on we shall see easier money conditions."

The Secretary of the organization reported that many knit goods factories were closed throughout the country and that nearly all others were running on part time. A plan was presented to do away with cancellation of orders and it will be discussed and amended during the session. There seems to be a disposition to adopt some such plan, as the mills have suffered severely from cancellations in the last few months. The meeting opposed the so-called "truth in fabrics" law as class legislation in the interests of woolen manufacturers and growers. They unanimously favored the Rogers bill which prohibits misbranding and mislabeling and will work for its passage.

Sound Basis in Two Years.

BUFFALO, Nov. 18.—That the fall in prices has only begun and that it may take two years for the business conditions of the country to reach a normal basis was the opinion expressed by Elliott C. McDougal, President of the Marine Trust Company of this city, in an address before the Buffalo Chamber, American Institute of Banking, here tonight. He characterized as appalling the "lack of foresight shown by many business men during the recent period of expansion" and declared that "the day of reckoning is at hand."

Plain talk about these facts, Mr. McDougal said, might not be welcomed in some quarters, but the best friend business men can have was the banker who told him the truth. He deprecated optimistic predictions of bankers all over the country and appealed to business men not to shut their eyes to facts.

"The fall in prices is only begun," he exclaimed. "We shall have strikes against reductions in wages and reduction of wages without strikes, but in any event we shall have the reductions. For some years labor has had the upper hand. Now the employer has the upper hand. Unless he shows more foresight and moderation than has been shown by labor he will cut labor to lower wages than will be fair, just as labor when it had the upper hand, forced higher wages than were fair. In either case the purchasing power of the public will be largely reduced, prices will continue to decline and manufacturing failures will increase. Until these unsettled conditions settle themselves, business depression must continue. Unless experience means nothing, we shall be very fortunate if, at the end of two years, we have reached a sound basis upon which to begin reconstruction. When that sound basis is reached, when business does revive, we should have a period of prosperity exceeding anything that this country has ever known."

Mr. McDougal differentiated between business depression and financial panic. The old-fashioned monetary panics were things of the past, he said, because of the working of the Federal Reserve system.

FARMERS' UNION URGES STRIKE BY PRODUCERS

Calls on Them to Hold Goods From Market Until Prices Reach "Profit-Making Levels."

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 18.—A nation-wide producers' strike to combat the falling prices of farm products was urged in a call sent out today by the National Farmers' Union to its local unions throughout the country.

The call, in the form of a resolution adopted at the national convention of the organization here, went forward to secretaries of local branches of the organization, which represent producers of grain, cotton, wool and livestock, said to number 800,000.

The proposed strike was urged in retaliation for what the convention considered abnormal deflation in prices of farm products, through which it was asserted "American farmers have been robbed of $1,000,000,000 in reduced value of products now on hand." All farmers were urged to hold this year's production from the markets until "profit-making levels" were restored.

The action of the National Farmers' Union was in line with a "wheat strike" called several weeks ago by the Wheat Growers' Association of the United States. Delegates asserted that a considerable quantity of this year's wheat crop was being held off the market by farmers.

Reduction of production in the future was threatened "unless the prices of our products are fairly readjusted to the end that we may obtain just returns for our labors and investments" in another resolution approved by the convention.

Officials of the organization pointed out that members were not under obligation to obey the terms of the strike, but expressed the belief that such a movement would be effective.

A conference of representatives of all farmers' organizations of the country was called to meet in St. Louis on Dec. 16 to consider the creation of a national farm marketing board.

CONDEMNS CANCELLATIONS.

Gov. Coolidge Says Tradespeople Should Live Up to Obligations.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—Cancellations of contracts by tradespeople who have been caught in a falling market with orders for goods at high prices was condemned by Governor Coolidge, Vice President-elect, in a letter to the Boston Boot and Shoe Club, made public today.

"It is not always possible for men to meet obligations," the Governor wrote. "No one can complain of that, but there seems to be a great tendency to avoid obligations that could be met, with a result which is demoralizing to everybody.

"This is especially true in the matter of the cancellation of orders. If one person is allowed to cancel it means that every one must have the same advantage, which throws the entire trade into confusion and results in a great deal of loss, none of which would happen probably if such cancellations were not allowed."

The club adopted resolutions in support of the inviolability of contracts and commending the firms which had accepted their losses in living up to contracts.

MONTREAL FACTORIES IDLE.

People Refuse to Buy Clothing—Workers Confer on Wages.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—Negotiations looking to readjustment of wages were begun today by the Clothing Manufacturers' Association and the Montreal Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, with the view of improving conditions in the clothing industry.

Failure of the public to buy clothing despite reduced prices is said to have thrown nearly 6,000 persons out of work and closed virtually every clothing factory in this city.

REPORTS OCTOBER DROP IN RETAIL FOOD PRICES

Labor Department Puts Average Reduction in 51 Cities at 3 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—An average decrease of 3 per cent. in retail food prices in October throughout the United States was noted in statistics on the cost of twenty-two articles of food, made public today by the Department of Labor.

Decreases noted were in sugar, 24 per cent., and potatoes, 15 per cent. The price of eggs increased 14 per cent.

The average family expenditure for the twenty-two articles named decreased in all of the fifty-one cities from which monthly prices were tabulated, except Houston, Texas, where there was an increase of approximately five-tenths of 1 per cent.

The greatest decrease, 6 per cent., was in Omaha and St. Paul. In Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Portland, Oregon and Seattle the decrease was 5 per cent.; in Chicago, Cincinnati, Denver, Detroit, Indianapolis, Memphis, Pittsburgh, Portland, Me., St. Louis, San Francisco, and Springfield, Ill., 4 per cent.; in Atlanta, Cleveland, Columbus, Kansas City, Little Rock, Los Angeles, Louisville, Manchester, Mobile, Newark, New Haven, Peoria, Rochester and Washington, 3 per cent.; in Baltimore, Birmingham, Boston, Bridgeport, Buffalo, Butte, Dallas, Fall River, Jacksonville, New Orleans, Norfolk, Philadelphia, Providence, Salt Lake City, Savannah and Scranton, 2 per cent., and in Charleston, New York and Richmond, 1 per cent.

CLOSES SHOPS FOR WEEK.

Central Vermont to Resume Full Time Without Wage Cut.

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Nov. 18.—All shops of the Central Vermont Railway will be closed for next week, putting 500 men out of work. The announcement made today said this action had been decided on in preference to a cut in the working force and that employes would be returned to full time at present wages after the week's lay off.

THE OPERA

By Richard Aldrich

L'Elisir d'Amore.

The note was changed from tragedy to comedy at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening, when Donizetti's comic opera "L'Elisir d'Amore" was given; a true comic opera, the style in which Donizetti's musical nature was really more at home than in the tragedies that survive with difficulty. "L'Elisir d'Amore" seems, in fact, more alive today; its music fresher and more vital, than "Lucia," which will be heard before long at the Metropolitan, or than "La Favorita," which will not be.

"L'Elisir d'Amore" does not stand alone in owing its persistence in the list of the Metropolitan Opera House, at present certainly, entirely to Mr. Caruso. His Nemorino is one of the parts in which he is most liked, and which he enters into with a boyish glee. His rustic clumsiness and peasant antics, appropriate to this part, though they nowadays represent a gradual accumulation of exaggerations, have long been thought highly amusing and characteristic. It is a more serious matter that the accumulation of exaggerations has also been made in his singing of the music which, as exemplified last evening, was in his worst style. The exaggregations are uncalled for by the music, the situations, or anything or anybody except that portion of his admirers that finds such things a proof of a tenor's greatness and a subject for frantic applause.

Mr. Scotti is as gallant and irresistible a Sergeant as ever, but his voice showed undeniable traces of arduous between-season labors. Dr. Dulcamara's quackery is appropriately represented by Mr. Didur.

Miss Mabel Garrison is a charming representative of the coquettish Adina. She has sung this part before and has won a deserved promotion to a part around which cluster some of the most distinguished memories of this opera house and other opera houses. Her singing was finely artistic, yet her higher tones seemed less effective than they have had times before. Another American singer, Mary Ellis, also did creditably in the minor part of Giannetta.

The Philharmonic Society.

At the concert of the Philharmonic Society last evening in Carnegie Hall, Henry Hadley, the new assistant conductor of the orchestra, made his first appearance at its head. It was not by any means, however, his first appearance as a conductor in New York, for he has often conducted compositions of his own in Carnegie Hall and at the Opera House. He has also conducted orchestras in Seattle and San Francisco and elsewhere, and has accumulated a large experience in the direction of orchestral forces and the reading of orchestral works, also a considerable authority.

His experience, authority and musicianship were shown in the performance he gave of Rachmaninoff's second symphony in E minor, which stood at the head of the program; a performance full of vitality and spirit, not without finish, in which not only the composer's lavish orchestral color was made to tell, but also the melodic outlines and the thematic structure were well brought out. The symphony is well known to lovers of orchestral music in New York, and on repeated hearings loses none of its charm, which is frequently haunting.

There are suggestions of the methods of Tschaikowsky emerging from the last movement—his methods rather than his specific musical quality; but in its essence the work is original, large in its conception and execution, fertile in its musical invention, a truly personal expression. There was much applause, in which Mr. Hadley shared with the orchestra; apparently Mr. Rachmaninoff was not present to take any share of it himself.

Then Mr. Toscha Seidel played Bendi's G-minor concerto; and the concert was closed with Moszkowski's suite in F.

RUDOLPH REUTER PLAYS.

Pianist Heard in Works of Dohnanyi, Chopin and Brahms.

Rudolph Reuter introduced a "suite" of ten piano pieces by Dohnanyi, with as lengthy groups of Chopin and Brahms, at a recital last evening in Aeolian Hall, the fourth only in his native city by a serious pianist and pioneer whose career has taken him far afield. At 19 he played Brahms's concerto with the Hamburg Philharmonic, later he brought out Dohnanyi's concerto for the first time here, and after teaching in Tokio, Japan, he now lives in Chicago.

Mr. Reuter has somewhat of the "hand of steel in glove of velvet," as shown in last night's Chopin pieces, two of which he omitted in favor of the glowing A-flat "Ballade." His playing of Brahms also, as befitted that Rodin of the piano, was rugged and sculpturesque, interesting in lighter "Intermezzi" as in the familiar "Rhapsody," Op. 119, No. 4. Dohnanyi's suite, which had the central place of honor, was youthfully gay and bolsterous, a series of little tone-pictures, unhackneyed and heard with pleasure by a musical audience.

125 IN "MIDNIGHT JOLLIES."

One hundred and twenty-five players will appear in "The Midnight Jollies" to be staged at the Actors' Equity ball at the Hotel Astor tomorrow night. It is expected that nearly three thousand persons, including hundreds of well-known players, will be present, and that the receipts will be in the neighborhood of $20,000.

Those who will take part in the entertainment include Raymond Hitchcock, Eddie Cantor, Frank Bacon, John Drew, Dorothy Jardon, Savoy and Brennan, Norman Trevor, Frank Craven, Otto Kruger, Fred Stone, Grace Moore and chorus from "Hitchy-Koo," Dorothy Dickson and Carl Hyson, and the Duncan sisters.

Ticket stands have been opened by the Equity in the Ritz-Carlton, the Biltmore, the Claridge, the Astor, the Pennsylvania and the Algonquin, and well-known actresses will sell tickets today.

Composer in Recital of Inca Music.

Carlos Valderrama, a Peruvian composer, appeared at the Manhattan Opera House yesterday afternoon in a recital of his music, of which he has already given examples here, based on so-called "Inca melodies" from the Andes. Inga Julievna, a Norwegian soprano, assisted in several songs, one called "Yaravi," in Quechua dialect, first intoned from behind the scenes as Mr. Valderrama might have heard the fugitive air in some South American village. A ceremonial dance, "Yaquayra," was most effective among his piano pieces, which ranged from purely lyric and rhythmic to overwrought narrative in a prelude, "Morning Prayer to the Sun," and two rhapsodies, "An Inca Legend" and "A Tradition of the Conquest."

Song Writers May Form Association

The formation of a song writers' association is being considered, and the probabilities are that such a body would become identified with the Actors' Equity Association and thus with the American Federation of Labor. At a recent meeting of the song writers, Frank Gillmore, Executive Secretary of the Equity, made an address urging the song writers to join that organization. The object of the new association would be the remedying of certain alleged abuses said to be contained in the contracts with publishing houses.

TWO NEW PLAYS COMING.

"The Young Visiters" and "The Broken Wing" Week of Nov. 29.

Two new plays were announced yesterday for the week of Nov. 29. "The Young Visiters," a dramatization of the Daisy Ashford story, will succeed "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer" at the Thirty-ninth Street, the former play going to Chicago.

"The Young Visiters" is the work of Mrs. George Norman and Margaret Mackenzie, and the cast will include Harold Anstruther, Marie Goff, Herbert Yost, Lionel Pape, Leslie Palmer, Kathleen Andruss and others.

"The Broken Wing," a melodrama by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard, will be produced at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre on the night of the 29th. The scenes of the piece are laid in Mexico.

Ida S. Davenport, Soprano, Sings.

Ida Swope Davenport, a soprano, formerly of Ohio, once heard last July 4 at the Stadium, gave a matinee in Aeolian Hall yesterday, in part, it was said, for a home for crippled children which she supports at Providence, R. I. Mrs. Davenport displayed a light voice of some cultivation, best suited to her earlier airs such as Loewe's "Canzonetta" and "The Mermaid's Song" of Haydn. She was accompanied by Richard Hageman in a more ambitious air from Thomas's "Hamlet," modern French lyrics and an American group by Harriet Ware, Huerter, Hageman, Kramer and Rihm.

Silberstein and Rosen Debt $1,862.

In the list of judgments printed yesterday in THE NEW YORK TIMES Silberstein, Marcus, Joseph Silberstein, Abraham Rosen and Max J. Rosen were named as debtors in a judgment of $41,994.92 in favor of the Wilton Mfg. Co. The debtors named said yesterday that the amount stated was incorrect and should have been $1,862.

Red Cross Fund Passes $100,000.

The Red Cross Roll Call yesterday passed the $100,000 mark. This is one-fourth of the way toward the goal of $400,000 and it has taken one-half of the two weeks' allotted time allowance to reach this figure. Workers will have to redouble their efforts if the amount desired is to be collected in Manhattan.

Maine Worsted Mill Cuts Wages.

WATERVILLE, Me., Nov. 18.—Notices were posted at the plant of the Wyandotte Worsted Company today announcing a 15 per cent. reduction in wages, effective next Monday. About 230 employes will be affected.

MRS. PARSONS LEAVES WOMEN VOTERS' LEAGUE

Resents Mrs. Catt's Demand That United States Enter League of Nations.

Mrs. James Russell Parsons, a member of the Republican Women's State Executive Committee, announced yesterday her resignation from the League of Women Voters as a protest against the speech of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, its founder, at the league's regional conference dinner Tuesday night, advocating agitation by members of the league to bring about the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations. Mrs. Parsons, who was an active worker for woman suffrage and has been a member of the League of Women Voters since its organization, in her letter said:

"I have realized the value of a non-partisan organization concerning itself with the work of educating women in intelligent citizenship. I have admired the devotion to the principles of disinterested public service which has enabled women of varying political convictions to work together with such a mutual respect for honest differences of opinion as practically to eliminate all unworthy passion and partisanship.

"But the whole complexion of the organization has been changed by the deplorable action of one of its chief sponsors, Mrs. Catt, at the dinner at the Pennsylvania Hotel. The League of Women Voters served primarily as a platform from which to hurl sneers and insults at principles and persons not favored by Mrs. Catt.

"Mrs. Catt's speech was singularly inaccurate in statement and illogical in argument. It was smeared thickly with the kind of sentimentality which 'kept us out of war,' when almost assuredly getting us into war would have saved thousands of precious lives, and which just as unfortunately has kept us out of peace ever since."

ROCKEFELLERS GAVE $2,000.

ALBANY, Nov. 18.—John D. Rockefeller and his son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., each contributed $1,000 to the campaign fund of the Westchester County Republican Committee, which filed its campaign statement with the Secretary of State today. The statement showed receipts of $27,476 and expenditures of $21,112.

The Socialist Party's State Committee reported expenditures of $4,191 and receipts of $6,627.

The New York City Harding and Coolidge Uptown Dry Goods Association's statement showed expenditures of $29,130, all it received.

Long Term Railroad Bonds

High grade long time railroad issues can be purchased today to yield a return higher than has been obtainable in any previous year for more than a generation. The enactment of the Transportation Act of 1920, followed by the increase in rates granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission, has greatly clarified and strengthened the railroad situation.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Notwithstanding further easing-off in the call money rate, which yesterday did not go above 7 per cent. and closed at 6, the stock market broke again. This happened after an early though highly irregular recovery in many active stocks, and it occurred in immediate connection with the American International Corporation's announcement of suspended dividends. Doubtless this action by that particular company, which in a way embodied the country's ambitions of 1915 regarding the future mastery of the world's trade, appealed for that reason strongly to the Wall Street mind. The reasons for suspending the 6 per cent. annual dividend were briefly stated by the directors as "the exceptional circumstances and requirements at this time," and well-informed people were aware that this meant chiefly the call on the corporation's cash assets to protect and tide over the hard-pressed South American customers of its subsidiary companies. Conditions prevalent regarding prompt payment by foreign clients of many commercial enterprises, in consequence of the disordered home and international markets of those countries, are pretty generally known. The incident is only one of many which have resulted, with them as in our own country, from the sudden fall in prices and overstrain on credit.

It hardly need be said that, under the circumstances stated, the action of the American International Directors was altogether wise; also, that it does not in any respect amount to an intimation that the holding up of payments from foreign markets represents an eventual necessary loss. Recent events have brought some of those markets as close to a "moratorium" as they got in the war panic of 1914, but even that older moratorium did not mean repudiation of debts by solvent bankers or merchants. This time the world will regain its financial equilibrium much more rapidly.

Taken as a whole, the day's declines on the Stock Exchange were considerably smaller than Wednesday's. The general character of the movement and the occasional recoveries also indicated fairly good buying, while the pressure by professional operators for the decline continued. Estimates that the outstanding "short account" has reached exceptionally large magnitude are entirely plausible; we shall probably hear from that quarter of the market to some purpose, later on. Yesterday's prices, however, closed near the lowest, after total transactions again exceeding a million shares.

The erratic and bewildering character of the general movement of prices, as the effects of the climax of credit stringency remain while the stringency itself begins to relax, was illustrated yesterday not only in a further decline on the wheat and cotton markets but in foreign exchange. Sterling advanced 2 cents further, then fell 6 cents in the later hours. Exchange on Paris and Rome moved in the same way and Berlin exchange lost all of yesterday's rapid advance. The week's entire movement in these markets has been governed by the international money situation and by the extensive speculation which prevails in all the foreign exchanges; it was very unnecessary to drag in the League of Nations as an active cause, which it certainly was not. The particularly interesting item of the weekly European bank statements published yesterday was the reduction of 362,800,000 francs in the French Bank's outstanding note circulation.

This represents a total reduction of the French paper currency from its maximum of the year, reached on Nov. 3, amounting to 389,000,000 francs, or, on the old conventional basis of reckoning, $77,800,000. The reduction coming in the present month presents a parallel with the $25,200,000 reduction last week in our own Federal Reserve notes from the highest of the year, and with the £5,400,000 reduction of outstanding British "currency notes" since the middle of October. All of these paper circulations, including our own, had increased substantially during the early Autumn weeks, undoubtedly in response to the season's normally increased trade. It is possible that the subsequent and very recent flow of currency back to the bank of issue, in all three countries, is not unconnected with the world-wide trade reaction. The contraction ought to proceed very rapidly eight or ten weeks from now.

MONEY.

THURSDAY, NOV. 18, 1920.

Money on call on the Stock Exchange opened and renewed at 7 per cent. yesterday, went to 6 per cent. and closed at that rate. Ruling rate, however, was 7 per cent. Borrowing was moderate. The prospect of easier fixed period money, forecast for sometime now, was in evidence yesterday in a slight easement in accommodations based on mixed and all industrial collateral. In the case of the former, 60-90-day money was placed at 8@8¼, and for 4, 5 and 6 months, 7¾@8 per cent. On all industrials, 8¼ for short time, and 8@8¼ per cent. for 4, 5 and 6 months. The rate on best-grade merchants' paper still obtains at 8 per cent.

EXCHANGES RETREAT UNDER PROFIT TAKING

The foreign exchanges ran into considerable selling pressure yesterday after early transactions had carried quotations higher than Wednesday's final levels. Sterling moved upward from 3.47¼ to 3.49¼ in the first business hour, afterward reacting to 3.43¼ for a net recession of 4 cents. Francs from a high point of 6.18 receded to 5.88, leaving off at 5.95, compared with 6.07 on the preceding day. The Norwegian rate was steady, but practically all the Continental rates lost ground. Trading indicated profit-taking sales on the heels of the recent advance, which carried sterling upward more than 16 cents in ten days.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Selling Pressure Moderates.

While a glance at the stock table shows a preponderance of minus signs as a result of yesterday's trading those who make a careful study of the action of the market were inclined to see a somewhat improved condition. For one thing the declines were not so large as ruled on the preceding day, although some stocks such as American International suffered severely. Aside from these instances, however, the market bore up rather well considering the violence of the liquidation which had been in progress on earlier days. It would appear that stocks were now in hands where there was an exercise of calm judgment before dumping them on the market for any price that they might bring. Too much hasty selling has been going on recently, the holders of securities being stampeded, it seems, by the flood of unfavorable rumors which have accompanied the market breaks. It is the history of Wall Street that any selling movement is carried too far just as any demonstration on the upward side is carried beyond the bounds of reason.

The Short Interest.

Naturally there is much speculation as to the size of the short interest. One brokerage house figures it as between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 shares. What it actually amounts to is problematical, but in this there is usually a tendency to overestimate. The short interest is large, no doubt, but it must be remembered that there has been plenty of opportunity for covering without bidding for stocks and this buying has been a leading factor in helping to check the severity of the recent breaks. If the market drifts for some days it is very possible in market circles that the shorts may be able to get out without causing any very pronounced upturn.

Puts and Calls.

The market for privileges is a peculiar thing for the moment. It is difficult to buy a put anywhere close to the market and likewise it is impossible to buy calls close to the market. The latter situation is natural, but after the declines that have taken place it would be expected that the puts would be obtainable on a reasonable basis. One house which has steadily been selling puts on Steel common at a small distance for the market has withdrawn all offers. A call on Baldwin was offered yesterday 12 points away, but it found no ready purchaser.

High Margins for Short Selling.

Some of the brokerage houses are demanding heavy margins for short sales on some of the more speculative issues. One customer wished to sell United Fruit and was told that his margin would have to be a minimum of 60 points. There is no disposition on the part of brokers to have their customers play the short side and be caught in a sharp rally with narrow margins.

Aetna Explosives.

The plan to sell the Aetna Explosives Company continues to be on the schedule. Yesterday J. S. Bache & Co. asked for the deposit of Aetna stock for the purpose of executing a sale of 80 per cent. of the outstanding stock to the Hercules Powder Co. Under the plan, the Aetna stockholders would receive $10 a share in cash and $4 a share in Hercules 7 per cent. preferred. It is understood that there is a strong following among the stockholders who will combat any effort to sell the company.

No Southern Pacific Action.

The Southern Pacific made no announcement yesterday as to the segregation of the company's oil properties. It was asserted however, following the meeting of the Executive Committee, which has been considering the subject, that any announcement on segregation would probably be made after a meeting of the Directors. The entire question was referred to the Executive Committee by the Directors so that the committee might work out the details of the plan.

The Bargain Counter.

The bargain hunters are reported to have been in the market for several days past picking up their favorite issues. This sort of buying has, however, not been heavy, but perhaps it may be a straw to point the way of things. It is known that an official of one of the large companies which has been under pressure recently has been steadily buying stock on a scale down.

To Fight for Guarantee Payment.

That there will be a concerted effort by railroad operators to bring about a reversal of the Treasury Department ruling regarding advance payments on standard return is evident and an announcement that the matter has been taken up formally would not be a surprise. Many of the less firmly intrenched carriers which really need the guarantee payments have not benefited from the increase in freight and passenger rates announced by the Interstate Commerce Commission to an extent sufficient to allow for a holding up of payment of such funds. That the Interstate Commerce Commission would do its part in certifying such advance payments is an inference naturally drawn from the attitude it has adopted on all railroad problems and concerted action by the railroad heads is confidently expected. Just what can be done to remove the obstacle presented by the ruling is not at all clear, but it is rumored that a definite plan of action is being mapped out.

Cheap Money.

Call money was cheap. The rate moved from 7 per cent. to 6 per cent., and while the minimum was no lower than was that of the day before, call money was actually cheaper, for the supply was abundant; described by one money broker as a "glut." Also, time money was easier in quotation and there seemed to be more of it around. The rate for time loans was fractionally below what it had been, but even at the reduced figure there was a spread of nearly 2 per cent. between time and call and, largely because of this, borrowers were scarce. The average borrower, or potential borrower, is not at all anxious to tie himself up with 8 per cent. money for ninety days or four months just now when he feels confident that the rate is going to be considerably below that level long before a ninety-day or a four-month loan matures. And, by the same token, the banks would like to get some money out at 8 per cent. for these periods.

Other Accommodation.

Commercial paper shaded off to 7¾ per cent. for the best names, this rate being a concession of approximately ¼ of 1 per cent. There was a good volume of paper moving according to dealers and the interior banks, when they could get wires through to New York, appeared to be willing and even anxious to buy. In the market for bankers' acceptances the demand was good, notwithstanding that the wire trouble kept many interior institutions which ordinarily would have been good buyers out of the market. Local commercial banks, the dealers said, were buying on a better scale and Boston was an especially aggressive purchaser. Pittsburgh, too, took some fairly large blocks. The Pittsburgh people were inclined to insist on New York names, while the Boston buyers were not so exacting.

Foreign Exchange.

There was a continuation of the recent advance in the foreign exchange market early in the day and quotations for sterling, French francs and lire all rose above the previous day's finals, but in the afternoon the advances were halted when there was a sharp drive against the whole list of European rates. Everybody, one of the brokers said, seemed to be getting out. Profit-taking by speculative buyers who had come in two or three days ago, was an important factor in the break. Also, there were reports around that some of the foreign speculators, who are alleged to have been bulling dollars, had switched their position and were operating on the other side of the market.

Bond Prices Are Advancing

Since then the prices of almost everything—except bonds—have declined.

Bond prices, on the other hand, have advanced; but long-term Public Utility Bonds can still be purchased at most attractive prices.

Commerce Institution's Review Sees No Cause for Immediate Alarm.

"The credit position is essentially sound and the future is to be regarded with confidence," says the National Bank of Commerce, in advices sent out yesterday. The country's credit requirements are now at maximum, the statement says, and while pressure may for a time continue at this current high level, no substantial increase is anticipated in the demand for banking accommodations, either for crop financing or to meet commercial and industrial requirements.

The banks and reserve institutions have financed the enormous volume of current requirements with no weakening of their reserve strength, the bank believes, and adds that the beginning of a reduction in the aggregate of these requirements now is evident. After the expansion of October a moderate contraction is shown. This, while relatively small, is regarded as extremely important and significant, because, "in the present difficult situation it indicates an ability greater than might have been anticipated on the part of both the interior banks and their customers to liquidate outstanding obligations. It indicates also that the future trend will be toward the contraction, rather than expansion, of such obligations."

Speaking of the general situation, the bank says that the adjustment to new conditions of supply and demand has proved difficult. Two factors on the buying side of the equation offer much encouragement, however. In comparison with those classes whose income increased rapidly during the period of rising prices, the decline in prices which has already taken place has increased the purchasing power of salaried employes and persons in receipt of fixed incomes from investments.

AM. INTERNATIONAL PASSES DIVIDEND

Big Export Corporation Said to be Husbanding Cash to Aid Customers.

WALL STREET IS STARTLED

Company's Stock Breaks 10 Points and Entire Market Becomes Unsettled.

The American International Corporation, one of the largest export companies in this country, passed the quarterly dividend yesterday on both the common and preferred stock. The regular dividend would have been $1.50 a share, this having been maintained since Dec. 31 of last year. The initial quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share was paid Dec. 30, 1916, and continued until Dec. 31, 1917. From then until June 30, 1919, the quarterly rate was 90 cents a share, when it was increased to $1.20 a share.

The passing of the dividend was something of a shock to Wall Street, even though there had been rumors for some time that the company would probably cut the dividend on the common stock. More than ordinary significance was attached to the action of the Directors, who, in commenting on the dividend policy, made the following announcement:

"The American International Corporation, in pursuance of the purposes for which it was organized, is engaged to a large extent, through its subsidiaries, in foreign trade and commerce.

"In consequence of the exceptional circumstances and requirements at this time, the Board of Directors at their meeting today voted to omit the quarterly dividend on the stock of the corporation."

Rumors of Heavy Losses Denied.

Following the statement of the Directors was a comment by C. A. Stone, President of the company, on the rumors which have been in circulation that the company had suffered heavy losses. This was as follows:

"Statements that American International Corporation has made large losses in South America or anywhere else are untrue. The omission of the quarterly dividend is part of a conservative policy to husband the resources of the corporation."

It is understood that so far as the book position of the company is concerned there is nothing to be desired. The situation of the corporation illustrates the difficulty which business enterprises dealing with foreign countries are having in realizing on their receivables due in part to the disjoined condition of the foreign exchange market. Insofar as inventory is concerned it is the understanding that American International is especially well placed, the inventories of all of the trading units being at a decidedly low point.

American International is the outgrowth of the possibilities which leading American bankers saw in the foreign trade situation as related to the expansion of American business during the war. It was the expectation that this country would take an increasingly large place in the world trade position after the war, and while the readjustment process has to a certain extent halted business with foreign countries, the companies operating in foreign channels look for a revival of activity when the present acute situation has been alleviated.

It is the understanding that the passing of the dividend by American International was for the purpose of conserving cash to the point that customers of long standing might be tided over temporary difficulties. It was considered, it is said, far better policy to help customers than to see some of them suffer severely through lack of accommodation.

May Exceed Dividend Needs.

As to earnings, it is reported that American International will show more than the dividend requirement for the year. This would be $8 a share. In the matter of loans it is said that American International trading companies are small borrowers from the banks, one of the largest of these units being accommodated to only about 40 per cent. of the money required to finance the goods which have gone for export. Some of these credits to South America, it is believed, are for the time being "frozen."

Nothing definite could be learned yesterday regarding some of the investments in the stocks of other companies which American International is known to have. It was the opinion of one well-informed man, however, that no investments had been disposed of. Some of the supposed holdings are United States Rubber and International Mercantile Marine preferred.

The capital of American International consists of $40,000,000 common stock of $100 par value and $950,000 in preferred stock. The concern was incorporated under the laws of New York on Nov. 22, 1915, to further the development of import and export trade, the use of American materials and manufactures abroad and the employment of American capital and American engineers in foreign enterprises. During the war the company operated Hog Island and built a great number of ships for the Government. Frank A. Vanderlip is Chairman of the Board of Directors of American International.

Some of the companies in which all, or a majority of the stock is owned, are the Allied Machinery Company of America, Allied Sugar Corporation, Allied Construction Machinery Corporation, Horne Company, Ltd., American Balsa Company, Inc., G. Amsinck & Co., American International Steel Corporation, Carter, Macy & Co., Rosin and Turpentine Export Company, Slems-Carey Railway and Canal Company and China Corporation.

The passing of the dividend yesterday caused a break of some 10 points in American International stock on the New York Stock Exchange. The high for the day was 49, the low 38¾ and the final 39½. The break in this issue unsettled the entire market which up to the announcement had showed a tendency to become a bit firm. The high price for the shares this year was 113½ on Jan. 5.

Ratio of r.	10¾%	17⅝%	16⅛%

The Bank of England's official minimum discount rate was left unchanged at 7 per cent., at which it has stood since April 15. A year ago it was 6 per cent., having been advanced to that rate on Nov. 6, 1919. At this date of 1915 and 1917 it was 5 per cent., against 6 per cent. in 1916 and 5 per cent. in 1915 and 1914.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes, in francs:

Silver in hand	dec.	18,460,000
Notes in circulation	dec.	262,897,000
Treasury deposits	dec.	17,850,000
General deposits	inc.	19,833,000
Bills discounted	inc.	24,739,000
Advances	dec.	3,986,700

	1920. Francs.	1919. Francs.	1918. Francs.
Circulation	30,250,257,000	37,056,745,280	26,191,584,565

The French Bank's official discount rate remained unchanged at 6 per cent., at which it was fixed on April 8 this year. It had stood unchanged at 5 per cent. between that date and Aug. 20, 1914, when the 6 per cent. rate, the highest of the war panic period, was reduced to 5.

$7,500,000 PROFITS FOR I. M. M. IN 1920

BIG SURPLUS ALSO ON HAND

American Companies Have $13,000,000 in Cash and Securities, British Have £10,000,000.

Net earnings of the International Mercantile Marine Company for the current year, after making deductions for bond interest and provision for estimated taxes, will amount to approximately $7,500,000, equivalent to about 15 per cent. on the preferred stock, according to a statement issued by the Board of Directors after its meeting yesterday. Further, the American companies have in cash, call loans and Liberty bonds about $13,000,000, while the British companies, according to the report of Oct. 31, had on hand £10,000,000 in cash, war loans and British Treasury bills.

The statement in full is as follows:

"The net earnings of this company from its own operations and the dividends which it has received at current rates of exchange by reason of its stock ownership in its subsidiary English and American companies for the first nine months of this year and the estimated earnings and dividends from these sources for the remaining three months of the year will, after deducting the bond interest and estimated taxes, depreciation and other expenses for the entire year, amount to approximately $7,500,000, which would be about 15 per cent. on the preferred stock. This figure does not take into account the operating profits of the subsidiary companies in excess of the total amount to be distributed by them to the International Mercantile Marine Company as dividends during this year.

"According to the report of Oct. 31, 1920, the English companies have on hand over £10,000,000 in cash, war loans and Treasury bills, and there is in cash, call loans and Liberty bonds in the treasuries of the American companies about $13,000,000. There are other assets, such as Holland-America shares, New York Shipbuilding Corporation shares, &c., which add substantially to these amounts."

Further information in regard to this issue of Notes is given in a letter of Mr. Howard Heinz, President of the Company, from which we summarize as follows:

The proceeds of the sale of these Notes will be applied to the payment of Notes payable and to provide additional working capital.

Sales of the Company since May 1, 1920, show an increase of twenty-two per cent. over last year.

The books show net earnings available for interest charges, before providing for Federal taxes, for the four years ended April 30, 1920, averaged $2,865,323, or more than five times the annual interest charge on these Notes, which amounts to $560,000, and average net earnings, after providing for Federal taxes for the four years ended April 30, 1920, amounting to $2,344,643.

The Trust indenture under which these Notes will be issued will provide in substance, among other covenants, that so long as any of these Notes are outstanding, neither the Company nor any subsidiary will mortgage any of its real or personal property, but nothing herein contained shall prevent the Company from purchasing property subject to a mortgage, or from creating a purchase-money mortgage to the extent of 75% of the fair value of the property purchased, or pledging by the Company or any subsidiary company as security for loans made to it or them, or any of them, in the regular and current conduct of their respective business, of any accounts receivable or other liquid assets, or any stocks, bonds, or other securities owned by them, other than shares of stocks of any subsidiary company.

It also provides that the Company will at all times maintain its cash and quick assets in a sum equal to at least one and one-half times the aggregate amount of its liabilities and indebtedness, secured or unsecured, including the face amount of all of these Notes at any time outstanding.

We offer these Notes when, as, and if issued and received by us, subject to prior sale and to the approval of counsel, at:

94¾ and Interest to Yield About 7¾%

It is expected that temporary notes or interim receipts will be ready for delivery on or about December 7, 1920.

All legal matters in connection with this issue will be approved by Sullivan & Cromwell and Hawkins, Delafield & Longfellow of New York.

COTTON CONTINUES IN DOWNWARD SWING

It was the same story in the cotton market yesterday that had been told on the preceding three or four days. Prices started lower than the previous day's closing, rallied a little, to about the previous closing levels, and then sold off sharply into new low ground. The selling was as general as it had been in other days, with Southern, Northern trade and ring professionals participating and with a fair volume of sales for foreign account. As previously, the only buying of consequence came from professional shorts. Before the session was over prices were down 60 to 70 points, and final quotations showed net losses of 45 to 66 points. Two options, September and October, broke under 16 cents, the former closing at 15.95 bid, and the latter having sales and a final bid price of 15.85.

Trade news was again distinctly unfavorable. Reports from the South said that some of the mills there which recently cut wages were announcing their ability to manufacture printcloths at 20 cents a pound plus the cost of cotton. A year ago, with cotton at about 40 cents a pound, these mills were charging $1.25 a pound for cloths. Fall River sent in word that cloths there were being shaded, and the Philadelphia yarn market was said to be working lower. On top of this, the cables stated that at Manchester fabrics were being unloaded at sacrifice prices to release capital.

Spot markets, both here and in the South, were sharply lower, the local price being down 70 points to 18.05, while Savannah, Augusta and St. Louis all showed losses of a full cent a pound and at Dallas, which was down nearly as much, the price went to 15.80, the first break under 16 cents reported in any of the spot markets.

Exports for the day were large, totaling 28,517 bales, making the total for the week to date 140,772 bales and for the month to date approximately 375,000 bales.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. Day.
Dec.	17.48	17.75	17.01	17.05	17.71
Jan.	16.88	17.15	16.36	16.45@16.50	17.10
March	16.72	16.91	16.25	16.37@16.40	16.90
May	16.60	16.80	16.22	16.30@16.36	16.80
July	16.50	16.65	16.05	16.15@16.20	16.65
Sept.	16.30	16.00	15.95	15.95	16.40

The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 70 points down to 18.05c for middling upland; sales nil.

Southern spot markets were: Galveston, 17c down .50; New Orleans, 17.25c down .25; Savannah, 17c down 1.00; Augusta, 16.50c down 1.00; Memphis, 17c down .50; Houston, 17.25c unchanged; Little Rock, 17.50c down .50.

Yesterday's cotton statistics were:

	Yesterday.	Last Wk.	Last Yr.
Exports	28,517	22,564	38,440
Exports, season	1,401,951	1,251,259	1,487,057
N. Y. stocks	23,730	21,244	85,464
Port stocks	1,331,595	1,281,504	1,703,625
N. Y. arrivals	1,349	1,091	.....

Liverpool cables: Spot cotton was quiet at 13.20d for middling. Sales 4,000 bales, of which American 3,000; imports, 4,000 bales, none American. Future opened easy and irregular, 43 to 58 points down, and closed easy, 45 to 60 points down on the day. Prices: December, 12,44d; March, 12,26d; May, 12,14d; July, 12,04d. Manchester: Yarns and cloths were in scant demand.

LABOR LEADERS CHARGE EMPLOYER AUTOCRACY

Federation Chiefs Realize More Production Is Needed—Attack Textile Shut-Down.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—(Associated Press)—Economic needs of the country largely occupied the attention today of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, which continued its discussion of future policy. The labor leaders are said to have recognized the part which the workers must play, but the progress made, if any, toward the formulation of a policy was not disclosed.

Labor was fully conscious that the world needed production, members of the council said after the secret meeting today. Leaders recognized also, it was stated, that standards of life could improve only as production and consumption increased. The attitude of the leaders is said to be that this end cannot be reached without better methods in industry where, members of the council asserted, there still remains inefficiency in plant management as well as unprincipled scheming by groups of financiers. It is against alleged unfairness of the employers in these respects that labor is aiming its efforts for better co-operation, according to Federation officials.

Discussion in the meeting today, it was said, brought out statements that autocratic management in some industries was holding down production. It is understood that reference was made in this connection to the closing down of textile plants. Labor leaders here refuse to accept the statement of the employers that they were forced to cut down the output because of decreased demand for products. They were inclined to regard it as a subterfuge.

SIMONS SEEKS OPENING FOR GERMAN TRADE

DUSSELDORF, Germany, Nov. 16.—Dr. Walter Simons, the German Foreign Minister, desires the United States Government to waive the provisions of the Versailles Treaty respecting German private property, he told The Associated Press today. Dr. Simons is making a tour of the Rhineland.

"What are your hopes concerning commercial relations with America?" he was asked.

"The development of these depends entirely on America," Dr. Simons said. "If America decides to declare German property safe from confiscation or seizure, confidence on both sides would immediately be restored. Business relations would be reopened for the benefit of both countries, while under present conditions business is hampered, time lost and unnecessary expense incurred by the necessity of sending goods to the United States through other countries."

Speaking of the American elections, Dr. Simons remarked:

"I feel it would not be correct on my part to utter an opinion that might be construed as an official statement, because the new President has not yet begun his term of office. Nor would it be correct to try to anticipate events. We will leave the new President time to act. Then it may be possible to give a fair opinion. We are sure the American people will work together with us to make the world forget the terrible war and its horrible consequences."

More Capital for Westinghouse Co.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 18.—Stockholders of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, at a meeting at East Pittsburgh today, voted to increase the capital stock from $75,000,000 to $125,000,000. The Directors were authorized to increase the indebtedness of the company by $50,000,000.

MALT COMPANY QUITS BECAUSE OF DRY LAW

Directors of Corporation With $1,000,000 in Excess of Liabilities Vote to Dissolve.

Prohibition claimed another industrial victim yesterday when the Board of Directors of the American Malt and Grain Company at a meeting at its offices, 120 Broadway, decided that the dissolution of the company would be advisable in the interest of the stockholders. A statement issued by the board said in part:

"Notice of a special meeting of stockholders, to be held at an early date, to ratify such procedure, will be issued within a few days, with details of the company's financial position. The company has outstanding 51,700 shares of no par value stock and about $1,000,000 of cash resources, after deducting outstanding liabilities, and only $250,000 of bonds outstanding against its five plants."

Russell H. Landale, President of the company, said last night that the decision of the United States Supreme Court upholding the Volstead Prohibition Enforcement act was the principal factor in causing the Directors to recommend the dissolution of the business.

The American Malt and Grain Company before prohibition did a business of from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 a year.

WHEAT AT LOW RECORD.

Rallies at Start, but Declines with Other Grains, Causing Decline 3 to 4 Cents.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—It was a field day for bears in all the grain pits today and wheat reached new bottom figures for the period which has followed the end of Government control and resumption of future delivery trading. Liquidating sales of corn and oats acted as the chief immediate depressing factor. Wheat finished nervous, 3c to 4c net lower with Dec. 180½ to 180¾ and March 169½ to 169¾. Corn lost 1½ to 2¾ and oats ½ and ⅝ to 1¼. In provisions the outcome varied from 30c decline to 20c advance.

Wheat showed considerable rallying power until corn and oats began in earnest to give way to general selling that later forced both foodstuffs to the lowest prices yet this season. Increased offerings from the big new 1920 yield of corn appeared to give the bears an advantage and to discourage numerous holders. Under these circumstances and with new cuts in the price of sugar and other commodities a rally due to word of export business in wheat yesterday proved to be only transient. On the decline March delivery of wheat touched 167, just 1½c under any previous figures yet for that month. Then a little better support developed and the market recovered somewhat as the session drew to a finish.

In the corn market the weight of general commission house selling was added to by pressure from a leading trader who has been conspicuous of late on the bear side. Oats followed closely the action of corn.

Wholesale markets continued yesterday to give further evidence of a weak position by the marking up of new low price records for the year thus far. It is only natural that this be so, especially when viewed in the light of the heavy liquidation which is now going on in all markets—securities and commodities. Wheat yesterday declined 3¼ cents per bushel, corn dropped 1 cent to a new low for the year, and flour Minneapolis, receded 25 cents per barrel. Coffee and sugar each broke ¼ of a cent, the latter to a new low for the year.

In the provisions, lard, quoted nominally $19.75 per hundred pounds, was up 25 cents, but beef and pork were quoted unchanged.

Spot cotton followed the action of the futures market with a drop of 70 cents per hundred pounds, marking a new low for the year. Printcloths likewise dropped to a new low, at a recession of ¼ cent per pound.

Following are the cash prices for the principal commodities in the wholesale market at the close of business Thursday, a week before and a year ago:

SAY HIGH GERMANS SENT FUNDS ABROAD

Former Chancellor to Expose Thriving Business in Smuggling Capital Out of Germany.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—The Federal Ministers of Finance is expected to have some difficulty answering Herman Müller's questions regarding the character of the Dutch banking firm of Truisser, Phillipsohn & Co. and its customers. The bank was established a few months ago and seemed extraordinarily flourishing until raided several days ago very suddenly by the authorities. Müller, the former Chancellor, has intimated that the Dutch firm, whose parent house is located in Amsterdam, was principally engaged in shifting dutiable German capital to Holland and other foreign countries, and that most of its customers belong to what is called the "best circles," among them members of the Hohenzollern and other princely houses, well-known Junkers, financiers and industrialists.

The amount withheld from the German tax collector is estimated at 400,000,000 marks. Some was in dollar notes and other foreign money, and some accounts were kept under assumed names, for instance, that of one of the best-known Generals. The authorities have succeeded in saving the whole correspondence and books of both Berlin partners, but Truisser managed to escape to Holland.

The firm employed a large number of agents, among whom were women in the best society, to acquire business, also several daring young men, former officers, who would convey the capital entrusted to them in motor boats from Wilhelmshaven and other German ports to Holland.

GEN. HSU ESCAPES AT PEKING

China Protests Refugee's Flight From Japanese Legation.

PEKING, Nov. 17 (Associated Press).—General Hsu Shu-cheng, former commander of the Chinese frontier forces in Mongolia, and a leader of the Anfu elements, which have been opposing the Government, is again at large.

Notification of his escape from the Japanese Legation here, where he took refuge late in the Summer, was sent by the Japanese Minister to the Chinese Foreign Office on Nov. 15. Replying today to the Minister's notification of the escape, the Foreign Office called attention to the Japanese plenipotentiary's previous assurances that the Anfu refugees in the legation would not be permitted to leave or communicate with the outside world. The Foreign Office requested that the remaining eight refugees in the legation be handed over to its custody.

It was pointed out by the Foreign Office that there was a delay of two days after the escape of "Little Hsu," as he is popularly known, before notification of it came from the legation, and criticism of this delay is voiced in the Chinese communication.

One of the local newspapers says it has information that General Hsu left Peking in a Japanese uniform in company with several Japanese officers.

The Japanese Minister, in his notification to the Foreign Office of the escape, said that General Hsu had expressed a desire to leave the legation, and would not be dissuaded by the Minister's arguments. The Minister said he had no knowledge of how the General left the legation.

Chinese authorities are greatly disturbed over the incident because of the alleged activity of the Anfuites both at Urga, in Mongolia, and in Southern China. The Japanese have warned the Consuls of other nations here not to lend any assistance to General Hsu.

Reliable Bonds

AN investment bond is a tremendously human thing. Like a man, a bond must be reliable, dependable, faithful to the trust imposed in it, through good times and bad. Much depends on the reliability of your bonds.

For thirty-eight years the first mortgage bonds safeguarded under the Straus Plan have proved their reliability. Two wars and four financia panics have come and gone, and still theirs is an unblemished record—38 years without loss to any investor, and with unvarying prompt payment of both principa and interest in cash.

If you want a truly reliable investment, free from worry and care and yielding an interest rate that is attractive but not abnormal, investigate the Straus Plan. We have published a new booklet which explains how sums of $500 upward may be invested safely under our Plan. Cal or write today, and ask for

OUTSIDERS OPPOSE CURB MARKET HOME

SEE COERCION ATTEMPT

Say Association Seeks to Force Them to Join—"Got Privileges Free," Members Assert.

The process of establishing the Curb Market in a home of its own is bringing about friction between Curb Market brokers, some of whom, is seems, have no desire to obtain shelter from the elements and enter the realm of established exchanges, but prefer the out-of-doors and the untrammeled life that has been a part of Curb Market operations ever since the historic community on Broad Street began operations many years ago. The New York Curb Market Association has arranged to erect a building, and now some 200 curb brokers who are not identified with the Association, are making plans for a continuation of the Curb Market on Broad Street.

They have held one meeting and are to hold others. At the initial meeting on Wednesday, Thomas Cook, an old-time broker, presided, and he was asked to appoint a committee of six to consider ways and means of continuing the open-air market. There is, of course, the City to deal with in any undertaking of this sort, it having been asserted that the Broad Street market must go. But the brokers dissenting from the New York Curb Market Association hope the City will not enforce any ordinance against the Broad Street stock market, and requests to this end probably will be made within the next few months so that there may be no doubt as to the fate of the Curb when the New York Curb Market Association goes indoors.

Those brokers who are not members of the Association feel, it seems, that the men who are planning a curb market home are inclined to be exclusive in the exercise of their prospective rights. They cite, for example, the following enactment of the New York Curb Market Association:

"Resolved that hereinafter no member or no firm of which such member is a partner, shall clear or cause to be cleared, directly or indirectly, any transaction made on the New York Curb Market by a non-member."

This is looked upon as an endeavor to force those curb brokers who are not members in the New York Curb Market Association, to buy memberships, and this is resented. On the other hand the New York Curb Market Association asserts that the action is necessary as an effort to protect their business.

The ruling resulted from complaint that some of the brokers, who are not members of the association, were able to enjoy privileges free which association members had to pay for.

BAKER TO TAKE UP CHARGES

Will Order Investigation of Treatment of Wounded In Hospitals.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—Secretary of War Baker, who was in Philadelphia today attending the convention of the National Consumers' League, said he would order an investigation as to whether younded world war veterans were being neglected in Government hospitals.

Frederick W. Galbraith, national commander of the American Legion, was quoted here yesterday as having said wounded soldiers were neglected in the hospitals.

PUBLISHERS ASK COURT AID.

Ask That Pressmen's Union Be Compelled to Fulfill Contract.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 18.—The Phelps Publishing Company, one of the concerns against which a strike of the Typographical Union has been directed for two weeks to enforce a demand for a minimum wage of $40 a week, today filed in Supreme Court here a petition for steps to compel the pressmen's union to fulfill the terms of its contract with the company.

The pressmen recently refused to handle work done by non-union printers and as a result the National Grange Magazine, which is printed by the Phelps Company, went to press with two blank pages and was so distributed to the National Grange Convention in Boston.

General Asphalt Asks to be Listed.

The General Asphalt Company has applied to the New York Stock Exchange to list $7,541,100 5 per cent. cumulative preferred stock and $31,000,000 common stock. The stock is now quoted on the Curb market.

DEFICITS REPORTED FROM COPPER MINES

SELLING PRICE BELOW COST

Metal Since That Time Has Sold at 15 Cents a Pound and Lower.

Two of the porphyry copper mining companies report deficits for the September quarter. The Nevada Consolidated Company had a loss from operations amounting to $434,044, compared with a profit of $331,154 in the same period last year. Other income, however, was larger than in 1919 by $217,569, the $350,864 reported as the return from investments, &c., reducing the full deficit to $83,180.

The company paid dividends of $499,864, drawing the full amount out of surplus. In the nine months ended Sept. 30, the earnings totalled $516,403 after allowing for depreciation and $1,499,592 was distributed as dividends.

The Ray Consolidated Company reports an operating loss of $113,519 in the September quarter and an operating profits of $817,297 in the nine months After adding in outside income during the third quarter and paying dividends of $349,294, there was a deficit of $446,443, compared with a surplus of $143,557 a year before.

Dividends of $1,182,883 were disbursed in the nine months and a deficit of $210,477 was incurred. In the corresponding period of 1919 there was a deficit of $1,269,555. The reports of both companies noted that since the end of the September quarter copper had sold at 15 cents a pound and lower, which under present high operating costs and low rate of output is less than the cost of production.

PLAN SUGAR DEAL TO RELIEVE CUBANS

Dealers Here Would Divert 150,000 to 200,000 Tons to European Markets.

A group of leading sugar dealers in this city is now trying to arrange a deal which, if consummated, will divert 150,000 to 200,000 tons of Cuban raw sugar to European markets. If this deal is arranged it will do much to clear up the muddled Cuban situation, will eliminate a great mass of raw sugar which has been hanging over the market, and will supply the Cunbans with funds which, with the grinding season little more than a week off, are badly needed.

The group of dealers, it was reported yesterday, hope to find a buyer for the sugar in the British Royal Commission, the purchasing agent in this country for Great Britain, France and Italy and, on occasion, for other European countries.

A representative of the Royal Commission denied that his organization had entered any negotiations of this sort, but this did not end gossip concerning it, for sugar brokers pointed out that the commission naturally would not want to figure prominently in any such arrangement until it had been completed. The brokers interested in the venture were optimistic that a buyer could be found if the "price was right."

It was said that an offer of 5 cents a pound, as a base price, had been refused by Cubans on a bid for a large amount. But yesterday the market got down to the equivalent of about 4⅝ cents for sugar at Cuban ports, and in the trade there was a belief that the Cubans would be more inclined to discuss terms than they had been.

HIDDEN CRIMES REVEALED

Manufacturer Held Up and Tied in Packing Box While Treasure Box Is Rifled.

The warehouse district of the East River waterfront, one of the few commercial sections that for a long time had been avoided by burglars, was invaded by thieves early Tuesday morning who got away with $8,570 from the safe of the American Steel Frame and Band Iron Company, 296-300 Water Street, near the Brooklyn Bridge tower.

Although the police maintained secrecy in the presence of the company, Harry Danzig, admitted that Liberty bonds valued at $8,000, $270 cash and War Savings Stamps to the amount of $300 were taken from the 7-foot steel safe after it had been drilled and the doors shattered with nitroglycerine.

"This was no ordinary safe robbery," said Danzig. "There are several peculiar circumstances that convince the police that the thieves who planned it had called in an expert in explosives. There is evidence that the wires used to explode the charge in the safe door extended over three floors. All the doors were opened so that the concussion would damage nothing but the safe.

"The safe was moved to its present place only two weeks ago. No outsiders knew of the removal because it was carried from one building to the other through the arches dividing the three floors of the structure."

Four armed men attacked Meyer Goldstein and his employes in his clothing factory, on the seventh floor at 26 Waverley Place. They seized Goldstein and tied him to a packing box, and Florence Brodsky of 398 Rodney Street, Brooklyn, an accountant, was roped to a chair. The assailants were working at the safe and rifling desks when tenants on other floors appeared and the thieves fled.

Another robbery made public yesterday was the theft of a bracelet, valued at $5,000, stolen a week ago from the jewel case of the wife of Simon L. Schwartz, an architect, in their suite at the Hotel Hamilton, 141 West Seventy-third Street. The bracelet settings included sixty-seven sapphires.

Three men, each with a revolver in his hand, robbed Isaac Franco of $40, in his store, 52 Allen Street, and got away in an auto.

Carmine Petillo, grocer, 370 Washington Avenue, Long Island City, was felled with a blackjack. After the thief had fled with $60, Petillo pursued him to Long Island City Plaza, where Policeman Morgan arrested a man who described himself as George Quaplander, a longshoreman, 511 West Twenty-eighth Street, Manhattan. Magistrate Doyle held him in bail of $1,000.

Three men carrying bags from the fur store of George J. Fox, 164 West Twenty-fifth Street, were arrested by Policemen Vanderdrift and Brindizi. The prisoners said they were Paul Schlatt, expert electrician, 453 East 158th Street; Irving Schwartz, 20, 1,392 Franklin Avenue, and Joseph Tapper, chauffeur, 1,830 Washington Avenue, all in the Bronx. They were held on charges of burglary. Furs valued at $15,000, which were ready to move, were returned to Fox.

Edward F. Tate, 40, of 433 West 212th Street, who pleaded guilty to attempted burglary in the third degree, was sentenced to prison for two years and six months, by Judge Wadhams in General Sessions. Tate was arrested on Oct. 24, in the drug store of Alexander H. McRae, 4,257 Broadway, where he had sought for three hours to break through the back of a safe.

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Gray Goods Marking Time.

Buyers of gray goods in this market continue to mark time. Yesterday's business was generally limited, with the printcloth sales confined to November-December lots of 39-inch 68-72s at 9 cents and November-January deliveries of 38½-inch 64-60s at 8 cents. In the sheetings additional November sales of 5.50s were made at 7 cents. Buyers again paid 12½ cents for 39-inch 64-104 sateens for shipment during the remainder of this month.

Middle Western Furriers Busy.

Reports that are reaching this city from the Middle West say that manufacturing furriers in that section are making hay while the sun shines, the sun in the case being the strike of the local fur workers. They further say that, in an effort to build up their business at the expense of manufacturers in this city, some of the furriers in that part of the country have not been above resorting to shipping goods on consignment. From the viewpoint of the local manufacturer the timely saving factor of the competition afforded them in this way is that the output of the Westerners, at best, can supply only a small portion of the retail trade.

Brushed Scarfs in Great Vogue.

So great has the demand for bushed effects in woolen scarfs for women become here of late that manufacturers of novelty knit goods confess their inability to meet it in full. The chief reason for this is that all the retailers want the goods just as quickly as they can be shipped. The type of scarf which is most wanted is 72 inches long and 18 or 20 inches wide. As for colors, the dark mixtures are best, especially browns and heathers. There is some call also for solid color effects in the darker shades.

Raw Silks Are Still Dragging.

The Yokohama raw silk market is quiet and dull, with business in the high-grade materials confined to contract deliveries on the basis of 1,600 yen for double extras. The lower grades are firm at the pegged prices, pending the stoppage of work at the filatures, which begins tomorrow. Although, excepting for a moderate European demand, there is not much being done at Canton, holders there have not weakened in their price views. Save for yellow native silks meant for the Indian and coast-wise trades, nothing is being done at Shanghai. H. L. Gwalter & Co. report the Milan market dull, with prices easing off slowly. Low prices are beginning to attract more attention in the local market, and buying, while still on a hand-to-mouth basis, has been better this week than for some time.

Must Sell More Carefully.

Because cancellations and requests to hold back shipments for indefinite periods have become so serious, producing actual and potential damages estimated at about $250,000,000, the Credit Co-operation and Credit Methods Committee of the National Association of Credit Men strongly advises more careful selling by manufacturers and wholesalers in the future. Not only do the recommendations of the committee on this point include the need of accepting only orders that are legally enforcable (a large proportion of those booked under current methods are not), but they also include a warning against selling datings and terms, rather than merchandise itself, in order to get business during the dull period. The committee recommends "short" terms and prompt collections, and advises a reduction in the cash discounts frequently given as part of the selling terms. Also recommended is a more liberal interchange of credit information between selling concerns.

Wool Prices Favor Buyers.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—At the wool auction sales today, 6,949 bales of uncontrolled wool met with only a moderate demand. Prices were in favor of the buyers.

DECLARES MARINE TORTURED HAITIAN

CHARGES SLAYING ANOTHER

Bourgot, Who Asserted Lang Killed Three, Unshaken on Cross-Examination.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Nov. 18 (Associated Press).—Additional evidence charging Freeman Lang, formerly a Corporal in the Marine Corps, with murdering Haitian prisoners, was presented today before the naval court of inquiry investigating the activities of the American marines in Haiti.

The evidence was presented by Meratus Toulssiant, a native gendarme. He testified that Lang called a prisoner from the Hinche Jail in 1918, questioned him and killed him with a machine gun at ten paces while the prisoner was walking quietly away. The witness denied that the victim was trying to escape when he was killed.

Toulssiant also testified that he saw Lang apply the electric current running from a wireless apparatus to a prisoner to make the man talk. Asked in cross-examination if the application proved fatal, the witness replied:

"I cannot say, but he died in prison two days later."

Adolph Bourgot, a native gendarme Corporal, who yesterday accused Lang of murdering three Haitian prisoners at Hinche, stuck steadfastly to his story during a severe cross-examination today conducted by Clem Rault of New Orleans, a naval dentist. He minutely described the manner in which the prisoners were killed, saying that he was seven feet away when the natives were brought out by a Sergeant on Lang's order and shot in quick succession.

"I saw Lang take a revolver from his holster and fire while the sentry stood before the door," Bourgot declared. "I saw the men fall with my own eyes."

He denied that he had been imprisoned in connection with communicating with bandits. Lang's case had not been completed when court took a recess until tomorrow.

Milligan Place Transfer.

The Land Map Realty Company has conveyed to Jane Keenan its holdings on Sixth Avenue, Tenth and Eleventh Streets, subject to a mortgage for $105,000. The properties include 141 to 149 Sixth Avenue, located 96 feet south of Eleventh Street, and 1 to 4 Milligan Place, nine dwellings and dwellings; also 113 West Tenth Street, and 1 to 9 and 2 to 10 Patchin Place, eleven three-story dwellings.

CUTS ROOFING PRICES.

The Richardson Co. Reduces Its Product $3 a Square.

The first big cut in the price of roofing material since 1915 was made yesterday by the Heppes Roofing Division of the Richardson Company, manufacturers of Tlexatile asphalt slate surface shingles and prepared roofings, with mills located at Chicago, Ill., Lockland, Ohio (Cincinnati), New Orleans, La., and Rutherford N. J., which announced a reduction in price of asphalt shingles of approximately two to three dollars per square of 100 square feet and a proportionate reduction on roll roofing.

Howard L. Davidson, sales manager and Eastern representative of the Richardson Company, said yesterday in discussing the cut and the general outlook for lower prices in building materials: "There is nothing in the cost of raw material of production to warrant this reduction in the price of our product, our sole reason being the belief that all building materials must come down in price before builders and property owners can be induced to build and relieve the existing housing shortage.

"Other manufacturers in the industry have made slight reductions in their prices, which has caused the trade to withhold their orders from what they believe to be a declining market.

"This company is of the belief that the sooner business in general gets back to a normal basis it will be better for all concerned, being of the opinion that this end can be accomplished by reducing their prices to a level so low that they will encourage building and automatically create a rising market, which will promote building. Asphalt shingles are rapidly taking the place of wood and slate shingles due to the fact that they are highly fire retarding, being passed by the Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., and enjoying a lower fire insurance rating."

Tenement Investments.

Edward J. Willing with Alfred P. Coburn sold for the estate of R. R. Rogers the five-story altered apartment house 14 West Seventy-second Street, on a lot 25 by 100.

G. Tuotl & Co. sold for M. Alexander of Alexander and Ash to M. Gambardello the five-story brick tenement with stores at 1,996 Second Avenue, on a lot 25 by 100.

Ernest W. Adler sold to the Consort Realty Company (Adolph and Emil A. Konas) the five-story tenement at 425 East Seventy-third Street, 25 by 102.2.

Midtown Loft Sale.

Harry Thoens and others have acquired from the 54 West Thirty-second Street Corporation the twelve-story loft building at 34 and 36 West Thirty-second Street, on a plot 45.8x98.9, between Broadway and Fifth Avenue. The property was conveyed subject to a mortgage for $875,000.

F. J. Guilfoyle & Co., Inc., sold 45 Mercer Street, a four-story loft, 25 by 100, near Grand Street, to clients who will occupy the building.

BIG DEAL CLOSED IN FINANCIAL AREA

MANY LARGE LOANS PLACED

Wurlitzer Building Option to Buy After May 1, 1924—West Side Apartment Loans.

An important deal in the downtown financial district and several large loans made on business and apartment structures provided a fairly active day in the realty market yesterday. Of chief interest was the sale of the property at 42 to 48 Cedar Street by the 42-48 Cedar Street Corporation, represented by Foot & Martin, to an investor. The property consists of a three-story building at 42, adjoining the southwest corner of William Street, fronting 20.7 feet, and a fourteen-story office building at 44 to 48, fronting 79.3 feet, giving a total frontage on Cedar Street of 98.10 feet by 78.2 feet and irregular in depth. The buildings were formerly owned and occupied by the Continental Insurance Company and were acquired by the sellers last January. The holding price was given as $1,500,000, and it was stated that the deal was closed very near that figure. The assessed valuation for the entire parcel was, 1920 figures, $860,000, of which $679,000 was land value. The buyer was represented by Robert T. Gusty, who acted as broker in the transaction.

Wurlitzer Option to Buy.

By the recording of the lease from the Woodbury Langdon Company to the owners of the new Rudolph Wurlitzer Building, just completed, at 116 to 120 West Forty-second Street, running through to 119-127 West Forty-first Street, it is ascertained that the builders have an option to buy the property after May 1, 1924, and an option to borrow for the Langdon Company 65 per cent. of the cost of the building, but not to exceed $500,000. The lease is for twenty-one years from May 1, 1919, with three renewals. A loan of $586,000 has been made by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company on the property to the Langdon Company.

Rogers Peet Realty Loan.

A loan of $600,000 has been made by the Mutual Life Insurance Company to the Rogers Peet Company on the latter's property at 842 to 846 Broadway, northeast corner of Thirteenth Street, taking in all the north block frontage, with a large frontage on Fourth Avenue. The Rogers Peet concern recently bought the property from the William Waldorf Astor estate for $1,125,000. The structure is an eight-story building.

Big Apartment Loans.

Lawrence, Blake & Jewell have placed a loan of $240,000 on the new six-story apartment house on the west side of Riverside Drive at 157th Street. This building was constructed by the North River Building Corporation, Mose Goodman, President. It has a frontage of about 318 feet on Riverside Drive. The same brokers recently placed a building loan of $210,000 on the new apartment house at Riverside Drive and 158th Street, diagonally opposite.

Eighth Avenue Loan.

The Columbus Holding Company (Jackson & Stern) borrowed from the Dry Dock Savings Institution $100,000 on the theatre and store property at the southwest corner of Eighth Avenue and Fortieth Street, 59.3 by 100, and from Basil Cavin a second mortgage for $20,000 for three years at 6 per cent.

THE BROOKLYN MARKET.

Eight Houses In Flatbush Section Figure In Trade.

William Liss, Inc., sold for Cohen & Schechter 1,403, 1,407, 1,413 and 1,417 East Fourteenth Street, Flatbush, four three-story twelve-family houses, with a frontage of 170 feet and an aggregate rental of $26,000, to investing clients. The transaction involved the payment of $44,000 in cash and four new one-family houses, 1,453, 1,455, 1,459 and 1,461 East Fifth Street, were taken in part payment, subject to mortgages of $20,000. The Bulkley & Horton Company sold 70 Hall Street, between Myrtle and Park Avenues, a two-story, two-family dwelling, on a lot 20 by 100, for R. Ahrens to a client for occupancy.

The lot 20 by 100 feet on the east side of Fifty-fourth Street, 200 feet south of Linden Avenue, has been sold through William P. Jones and William A. Acton for Howard C. Hellman.

F. J. Cuilfoyle & Co., Inc., sold the property at 45 Mercer Street to a client who will remodel and occupy the building for their own business.

Gas Company Sells Half Block.

The Eighteenth Street Garage Corporation purchased from the Consolidated Gas Company fourteen lots comprising the westerly portion of the block on Eleventh Avenue between Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets, with the exception of a small triangular lot, 20 by 56, at the southeast corner of Nineteenth Street. The buyer will erect a two-story building with stores on the Eleventh Avenue frontage.

The four entire blocks between Tenth and Eleventh Avenues, Fourteenth to Eighteenth Streets, have been sold within the last few years, one block to Armour & Co., one block to the National Biscuit Company, one to the Merchants' Refrigerating Company and one to the New York Central Railroad. The Durosa Company sold the property for Joseph P. Day, agent of the Consolidated Gas Company.

Private Dwelling Sales.

S. Osgood Pell & Co. sold for James M. Beck the four-story and basement dwelling at 100 East Sixty-fifth Street to a client who will occupy premises.

The Houghton Company sold for J. Westervelt Clark the three-story dwelling, 147 West Eighty-seventh Street, on a lot 15 by 100, to an investing client.

Joseph P. Chamberlain bought from Sutton Square, Inc., the three three-story dwellings, at 304-308 East Fifty-eighth Street, 50.1 by 52.

Stephen H. Jackson sold to Kate Herzog the three-story dwelling at 148 West 119th Street, 18 by 100.

Close Vanderbilt House Sale.

August Heckscher, representing the Empire Trust Company, signed contracts yesterday for the purchase of the William K. Vanderbilt house at the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-second Street. The house had been held in the market at a figure between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, and it is regarded as one of the most ornate houses in the city. It is of white stone construction and fronts 100.5 feet on the avenue and 175 feet on the street.

Bronx Borough Sales.

Bauer, Milbank & Molloy, Inc., sold for Mrs. Miriam H. Gotthell the taxpayer at 1,683-91 Southern Boulevard, running through to 1690-6 Boston Road, to S. Sachs, who will occupy a part of the premises for his own business.

The Samar Realty Company sold to Annie Kaplan the dwelling on the east side of Grand Avenue, 176.9 feet south of 190th Street, 24.2 by 100.

The two family dwellings at 2,188 Washington Avenue, northeast corner of 182d Street, 20 by 75, and at 991 Forest Avenue, 20.9 by 91, have been sold by the Dormond Realty Company, Simon Myers, President.

$600,000 West Side Lease.

The J. Johnson estate leased to Harry Cross and Louis Lindenbaum 1,121 to 1,127 Amsterdam Avenue, northeast corner of 115th Street, four two-story stores, together with a vacant lot adjoining on the street, the whole comprising a plot 100 by 100, opposite the Columbia University grounds.

At the expiration of present leases the lessees contemplate making extensive alterations. The ground is owned by the Eugene Higgins estate, which leased the property to Mr. Johnson ten years ago for a period of 100 years. The transaction will involve more than $600,000. R. Rosan negotiated the transaction.

ACTIVITY IN WESTCHESTER.

Yonkers Plot Purchased for Development with Six Buildings.

Fish & Marvin sold for the Incorporators' Realty Company to an out-of-town client a large plot located on the southwest corner of South Broadway and Morris Street, Yonkers. The plot will be improved immediately with a three-story building—brick construction—containing large store with offices above, and five additional buildings on the inside lots—each two stories in height and containing stores on the ground floor and five-room apartments on the second floor. This property is considered to be the finest undeveloped site in South Yonkers, and was held at $45,000.

The same brokers also sold for Joseph Eddleman his property located on the corner of Edgecliff Terrace and Park Hill Place, consisting of stone and stucco dwelling and two fireproof garages on a plot 75 by 100, to J. Q. A. Johnson, Jr., of Dayton, Ohio. The property was held at $35,000.

J. Clarence Davies sold for Mrs. Mary J. Curtis to Edward Holloway, a three-story frame dwelling on a plot 44 by 150 located on Lawton Street, Hartsdale.

Henry W. Sullivan sold the plot of ground, corner of South Broadway and Valentine Lane, Yonkers, fronting 141 feet on Broadway and 116 feet on Valentine Lane. It is understood that a commanding apartment house will be erected. The property has been appraised by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and valued at $60,000.

TROOPER AND UNIONIST DIE IN PISTOL DUEL

Organizer Said to Have First Fired on West Virginia State Policeman.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., Nov. 18.—Private Ernest L. Rippley of the State Police and William Hatfield, said to be a union organizer, killed each other in a pistol fight at Sands, twenty-five miles east of here, tonight, according to reports received by Captain Brockus, commander of the troopers on duty in the Mingo coal strike zone.

The trooper met Hatfield on the railroad tracks at Sands, and, according to reports of Captain Brookus, the latter drew a pistol and ordered Rippley to hold up his hands. When the trooper complied, the report said, Hatfield started shooting. Rippley returned the fire, and in the exchange both were killed.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 18.—State troopers were sent into the strike zone several weeks ago to relieve United States soldiers, who were withdrawn. The Federal troops were called into the region by Governor John J. Cornwell, after numerous shooting affrays and disorders had occurred. While the regular army soldiers were in the field the situation was quiet, but since their departure a number of attacks have been made on coal properties.

EXPLAINS HAZING STATUS.

Admiral Scales Says Offenses Are Trivial, but Do Harm.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 13.—"Hazing is not nearly as serious at the Naval Academy as it has been represented to be," Rear Admiral A. H. Scales, Superintendent, told a number of newspaper correspondents this afternoon.

Host of the hazing, he said, could well be called trivial offenses in themselves, but when they were practiced in a small way by a large number of midshipmen the composite hazing had an effect that the average youth could not stand.

"Since Oct. 1 three midshipmen have offered their resignation, unquestionably on account of hazing," he asserted. "One admitted that he had been hazed after I had questioned him closely, as the result of information which came to me from the outside."

Administration authorities today entered flat denial to reports to the effect that the order providing for the segregation of the "plebes" from the upper class midshipmen, to prevent hazing, had in any way been modified and also the story to the effect that sixty or more of the students would be denied the privilege of attending the Army-Navy football game at the Polo Grounds, New York, on Nov. 27 because of hazing incidents, and particularly the part alleged to have been played by them in the uprising wherein a large quantity of crockery was destroyed.

The Civil Service.

United States.

The commission announces for Dec. 8 an examination for assistant in animal husbandry, male, 21 to 45 years of age, in the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, for duty at Beltsville, Md., at $1,500 a year. Appointees may be allowed the increase granted by Congress of $20 a month. Competitors will be examined in: Practical questions, 50; education and experience, 50. Applicants must have completed at least the first eight grades of common school, or have equivalent education, and have had at least two years' practical experience in some branch of livestock production. Additional credit will be given under the second subject for attendance at an agricultural college. Age limits do not apply to persons entitled to preference because of military or naval service. Classified employes who have reached the retirement age and have served fifteen years are entitled to retirement with an annuity.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The Atlantic Coast storm has moved rapidly northeastward and its centre has passed beyond the field of observation. The centre of the Pacific Coast storm remains off the north coast and rains continue generally in the Pacific States, except South California and over the north plateau region. There has been a general rise in temperature throughout the Gulf States, the great central valleys and the plains States, and moderate temperatures continue in Far West districts and throughout the East.

There were frosts, however, this morning as far south as Central Florida.

The outlook is for fair weather and rising temperature generally east of the Mississippi River during Friday and Saturday.

FORECAST FOR TODAY AND SATURDAY.

Northern New England—Partly cloudy weather and moderate temperature Friday and Saturday.

Southern New England—Generally fair weather and moderate temperature Friday and Saturday.

Eastern New York and New Jersey—Generally fair weather and rising temperature Friday and Saturday.

Western New York—Fair and warmer Friday and Saturday.

3 A. M.	39	43	4 P. M.	50	57
6 A. M.	39	41	6 P. M.	45	54
9 A. M.	44	44	9 P. M.	44	50
12 M.	51	53	11 P. M.	40	49

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 46; for the corresponding date last year it was 48; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 45.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 42; at 8 P. M. it was 44. Maximum temperature, 52 degrees at 2:15 P. M.; minimum, 39 degrees at 3 A. M. Humidity, 63 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 58 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 30.21 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.21 inches.

ROB 2 MESSENGERS OF $8,000; SHOOT ONE

SOME THINK IT MOVIE ACT

Special to The New York Times.

PATCHOGUE, L. I., Nov. 18.—Two messengers of the Patchogue-Plymouth Sales Corporation, manufacturers of lace curtains, were held up by four men here this morning and robbed of between $8,000 and $10,000 which they had just drawn for the weekly payroll. One of the messengers, William Brophy, who resisted, was shot through the neck, but will recover. The robbers, although pursued, made their escape in a Ford automobile, subsequently found to have been stolen, and transferred to a larger automobile, which had been kept in readiness in a lonely road two miles away.

A. C. Krimm, paymaster of the Patchogue-Plymouth Corporation, and Brophy left the company's mill in an automobile about 9 o'clock, the time the banks opened. Krimm went to the Patchogue Bank and drew between $4,000 and $5,000 for the payroll, and Brophy drew a similar amount from the Citizens' Trust Company, on the opposite side of West Main Street. Krimm obtained the money first and walked across the street and joined Brophy just as he came out of the Citizens' Trust Company. Each carried the money in a small leather handbag.

Four men halted Krimm and Brophy just as they were about to step into their automobile. One of them covered Edward Schneider, their driver, with a revolver, another pressed a revolver against Krimm's chest, and the other two threatened Brophy. Krimm dropped the bag he was carrying at a command, but Brophy resisted an attempt to snatch his satchel away from him. One of the robbers then struck Brophy over the right eye with a revolver butt. Although dazed by the blow, Brophy retained his grip on the bag, and the fourth man, apparently the leader of the gang, shot him through the neck. Brophy fell to the sidewalk, and the four men jumped into a Ford automobile and drove west rapidly.

A few bystanders, who had at first watched the hold-up listlessly under the impression that it was being done for a motion picture, took alarm at the shot and started to give chase. Traffic Policeman William Slocum, who was on duty at West Main Street and Ocean Avenue, 400 feet away, halted an automobile and pursued the robbers, only to lose the trail half a mile out of the village. Albert Kallenbach, who witnessed the hold-up from the other side of the street, also gave chase on a motorcycle, but he, too, lost the trail.

Several hours later an abandoned Ford automobile, with the number 257,754, was found in a lane running off Waverly Avenue, about two miles north of the scene of the hold-up. A farmer said its occupants went away in a large Stutz car, which had been there for several hours in charge of two men, who said they were inspecting real estate. Although a general alarm was sent out, no trace of the second automobile was found, and it is believed that the robbers went on to New York City.

The Ford automobile with the license number, 257,754, New York, is owned by Mrs. Lilian Bareis of 240 East Thirtieth Street, who received it as a gift from her father on Sept. 30 last. Mrs. Bareis said the car was stolen from Twenty-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue on Oct. 5, and that its loss was immediately reported to the police.

MAIL CAR ROBBER GIVES UP.

Confesses, Council Bluffs Police Say, To Save Brother from Perjury.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Nov. 18.—Orville Phillips, 17 years old, surrendered to postal authorities here today, and, according to officials, confessed to a part in the robbery of a Burlington mail car last Saturday night, in which loot whose value has been put at $3,500,000 was taken. Postal Inspectors said the boy asserted "he could not stand to see his brother perjuring himself in an effort to save him." The brother, Merl, was taken into custody several days ago, and is said to have confessed to a share in the robbery.

1,500,000 VISIT TOMB OF 'UNKNOWN WARRIOR'

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The wonderful pilgrimage to the grave of the "unknown warrior" in Westminster Abbey came to a close this afternoon, when a dozen incapacitated soldiers, unable to walk, were wheeled in chairs by their wives or nurses through the dim aisles to give the last salutes to the shrine.

The pilgrimage has been in progress for a week, and the canon of Westminster in charge told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that a careful estimate of the numbers who made it showed 1,500,000 persons passed by the grave in the nave of the Abbey.

Every weekday since the Armistice Day anniversary, even while services have been going on and between services on Sunday, an endless stream of mourners has been entering the Abbey in fours and passing the grave. They began to come early in the morning, and on some days they continued until past 11 o'clock at night. They came from all grades of society and from all parts of the British Empire.

An even greater number of people made the pilgrimage to the cenotaph in Whitehall, which even today was filled with a double stream of people, reaching to Trafalgar Square on one side and coming from Westminster on the other.

GROCERS ACCUSE REFINERS.

Wholesalers in Various States Argue Sugar Price Was Excessive.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Counsel for 250 wholesale grocery companies in New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland yesterday presented arguments to Attorney General Palmer in support of their petition asking that the American and Franklin sugar refining companies be prosecuted for violation of war-time food price control legislation.

The grocers asserted that the refiners forced them to sign contracts to buy sugar at 22½ cents per pound for Fall delivery "and compelled the consuming public to pay an excessive price, which involved many millions of dollars, for sugar during the past six months."

Grocers' representatives agreed to furnish the Department of Justice with further evidence to substantiate their claims.

NEGRO WOMAN LYNCHED.

DOUGLAS, Ga., Nov. 18.—Two negro men and a negro woman, accused of implication in the killing of Pearly Harper, a young planter of this county, were shot to death early today by a mob of more than 150 men, who overpowered Sheriff Tanner and two deputies while they were attempting to take the negroes to Fitzgerald for safe keeping.

An attempt had been made last night to storm the jail where the negroes, Will Perry, Willie Ivory and Minnie Ivory, his wife, were held, but the crowd dispersed after listening to an appeal by Sheriff Tanner to allow the law to take its course.

Early today the Sheriff decided to transfer the prisoners to Fitzgerald and started in an automobile. A mob was organized and set out in pursuit. Overtaking the Sheriff seven miles from Douglas, the mob, according to the officer, demanded that the negroes be turned over to it, and, upon his compliance, lined them up and shot them.

A coroner's jury impaneled shortly after the news of the shooting reached here returned a verdict that the negroes met their deaths at the hands of unidentified persons.
